U. S. Threatens Diplomatic Break with Persia

NOTE DEMANDS PUNISHMENT OF IMBRIE SLAYERS

Attack on Widow Hastens Action.

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune and The Foreign Affairs News Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—The United States today threatened to break diplomatic relations with Persia, the threat coming in the strongest note sent a foreign government since the break with Germany which precipitated us into the world war.

The state department, in language which, while diplomatic, left no doubt of this nation's intentions, informed the Persian government that it did not intend to stand by without action on the murder of Maj. Robert Imbrie, American vice consul, who was assassinated by a street mob. The note was forwarded through the American minister in Teheran.

Demands Immediate Punishment.

The note, it is understood, demands the immediate apprehension and punishment of those who committed the assault upon Maj. Imbrie, and the assault upon his companion, Mellin Seymour, another American. It also insists that proper punishment be accorded to those officials or [illegible] who were [illegible] and [illegible] steps to prevent the outrage. In this category are included members of the police and certain soldiers, some of the latter of whom are understood to have participated in the attack.

Indemnity Also Required.

In addition to the punishment of the guilty persons and their accessories, and reparation or indemnity for the widow of Maj. Imbrie, voluntarily suggested by the Persian government in a recent dispatch delivered to the state department by the Persian embassy here, the United States government demands remuneration for the expenses of an American warship which will be sent to Persia to bring back the body of the deceased vice consul.

A guard of honor to be furnished by Persia is also demanded for the body while it remains in Persia, and it is demanded that the Persian authorities show their respect for the dead American official and their condemnation of the attack upon him by participating in the ceremonies attendant upon the removal of the body.

The Persian government will be required to furnish a guard for the American legation and American consulates in Persia if in the opinion of the American diplomatic representatives such guards are necessary to protect the property. These guards would necessarily be continued at the expense of the Persian government until their presence was no longer regarded as necessary.

Official Negligence a Factor.

While the formal statement of the incidents surrounding the attack on Maj. Imbrie and Seymour has not yet been furnished by the Persian government, as requested by the state department through the American minister in Teheran, Mr. Kornfeld, enough is known here through the official reports of the minister to convince the American government that the strongest character of protest is warranted.

Imbrie and Seymour were attacked in broad daylight while visiting a certain fountain in Teheran. They were severely beaten, but managed to make their way to a vehicle, in which they attempted to make good their escape, but were overtaken and again assaulted, the injuries received by Maj. Imbrie proving fatal, while those of Seymour were severe.

Americans Not Armed.

The seriousness of the outrage is enhanced not only by the fact that there appears to have been police and soldiers in the mob but there is evidence also to indicate that some of the latter took part in the assault. Furthermore, there was nothing improper in the conduct of either Maj. Imbrie or Seymour, neither of whom was armed, and who had no reason whatever to suppose their lives would be endangered.

Under the existing treaty between the United States and Persia, which gives extraterritorial rights to the United States and which had been in effect since 1856, particular stress is laid upon the necessity for affording adequate protection to American diplomatic and consular representatives and American citizens in general.

The United States government, therefore, has ample grounds for the most

3 OIL COMPANIES LOSE $1,026,004 TO SIX CHILDREN

Enid, Okla., July 26.—A judgment of $1,026,004 against the Sinclair Oil company, the Garfield Oil company and the Exchange Oil company was awarded the six children of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Crews, deceased, by Judge J. B. Cullison in District court here today. The suit, which had been pending for nearly three years, was filed by Miss Laura Crews, guardian of the minor Crews children.

The Sinclair company, which bore the brunt of the judgment, was ordered to pay the heirs $1,189,801. From this amount was deducted $225,651 to reimburse the company for expense in improving property and drilling oil wells involved in the litigation. The two other companies were ordered to pay the plaintiffs $162,854.

In addition to the money settlement, Judge Cullison also permanently settled all controversy concerning the title to the 240 acres of land affected in the suit, declaring it to be the property of the Crews heirs. The defendants were expected not to remove any of the casing or machinery, situated on the land, or to destroy or injure any of the oil wells.

All oil and gas assignments and leases were declared null and void by the decision, which ordered an accounting of oil taken from the field.

STABS HUSBAND 3 TIMES AFTER 'TRIANGLE' ROW

Stabbed several times and driven from his home by his wife, Anna, who was later arrested, William Hunt, 40, 5525 South May street, is reported to be in a serious condition at the German Deaconess hospital. The affray, the wife said, was the outgrowth of an argument involving another woman with whom Hunt had "been keeping company" for two years.

Mrs. Hunt, police say, seized a large knife during the argument and plunged it into her husband. He ran, screaming, into the street. She followed, knife in hand. Near Garfield boulevard, she overtook him, and stabbed him twice more, according to the complaint.

South Park Policeman William Lundy appeared He commandeered a taxicab and sent the man to the hospital, and placed Mrs. Hunt under arrest.

SHOTS FIRED IN BOBBED HAIR WAR

Mexican Army Ends Riot; 10,000 Girls to March.

BY FREDERICK NEUMEIER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Mexico City, July 26.—An armistice has been declared in the bobbed hair war here. Peace looms as a possibility Monday, when 10,000 girls with many kinds of bobs will parade from the bobbed haired league headquarters to the medical school of the National university to exhibit their bobs to the disgruntled students and attempt to regain favor in their eyes.

The war reached a climax last night, when a pitched fist battle was staged at the university and Yaqui troops were called to quell the disturbance.

After the chastisement of freshmen by seniors for attacking bobbed haired girls, the under secretary of education expelled four of the ring leaders and suspended the biology school.

Military Students Take Hand.

In spite of this the military academy students announced their intention of administering further chastisement to the attackers of bobbed haired girls. The seniors allied themselves with the freshmen, and 3,000 strong, last night converted the medical school into a fort, awaiting 1,000 military students, whose arrival was the signal for a battle.

Yaqui troops were called, and later mounted police and more troops under orders of an officer of the day. The troops fired into the air. A soldier shot too low and hit a student. For two hours all traffic in the neighborhood of the school was stopped while the battle lines wavered to and fro.

Finally the under secretary of education managed to get the ears of the fighters and with a few soft words ended the battle.

Some Churches Bar Girls.

The city is divided into two camps on the question of the right of a girl to bob her hair. Some churchmen, bitterly opposing this right, refuse to admit bobbed girls to sacrament.

Several leading actresses are championing the cause of the bobbers, and tonight Esperanza Iris, Mexico's most prominent actress, dedicated a performance for women only for the advancement of the cause of bobbed hair.

A FLIVVER OR THE BABY? ABANDON BABY; GO TO JAIL

St. Paul, Minn., July 26.—[United Press.]—They couldn't afford a flivver and a baby, so they gave up the baby.

This was the story sobbed out today by a young Walhalla, N. D., couple who left their 3 weeks old baby on a St. Paul doorstep and landed in jail.

Clarence and Nevo Epton, 19 and 17, were childhood sweethearts. A hasty marriage and the baby was born in Minneapolis on July 5.

They told the police they couldn't bring up the baby on Clarence's meager salary and in the same breath revealed they were paying for a flivver at the rate of $5 a week.

$100,000 Fire Damages Factory on South Side

Damage estimated at $100,000 was caused early this morning by fire which partly destroyed the National Casein company's plant, at 613 West 80th street. The company manufactures chemicals and occupies an entire block between Wallace street and the Rock Island railroad tracks. A number of small frame cottages across the tracks caught fire from the factory blaze, but the flames were quickly got under control. A 4-11 and several special alarms were turned in.

BRITAIN SHOWS ALLIES 40 MILES OF LION'S CLAWS

Dawes Parley Sees Big Naval Review.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 26.—The London conference in the Dawes plan is fortunate in its coincidences.

It was pure coincidence that Secretary of State Hughes is in London as head of the American Bar association delegates. It was coincidence, perhaps, that the American bankers are congregated in London and are able to tell the political delegates on what terms they thought it possible to float a $200,000,000 German loan. Perhaps it is coincidence that J. Pierpont Morgan is now on his way to London for a European holiday at a moment when the negotiations have reached a most critical point.

But the most striking coincidence of all is the great British fleet review by King George at Spithead today, at which the delegates to the conference were present, and at which the British exhibited the lion's claw to Premiers Herriot, and Theunis and others who might perhaps have imagined they had been drawn by the Socialist government and who may, if disposed, ignore him as a factor in the settlement of world affairs.

Last Review Just Before War.

It is doubly significant that the last review of the present king was held in July, 1914, on the eve of the outbreak of the world war, and the fleet which might have been assembled for ceremonial inspection never was demobilized until the war was over.

Doubtless these reflections were passing through the minds of the conference delegates today when they accompanied the king along forty miles of ships, practically every one new since 1914. Of the 200 warships in line only one took part in the 1914 review.

Apart from these ceremonial affairs the delegates are taking a rest over the week-end.

Pleased by Bankers' Rivalry.

As a matter of fact, the real struggle now has passed outside of the conference proper and has resolved itself into a struggle between the rival groups of bankers to insure the $200,000,000 loan to Germany. Premier Theunis, who called in a Jewish group to bid against J. Pierpont Morgan and the Bank of England combination, achieved a master stroke which may save the conference.

The delegates are much pleased over the apparent anxiety of the Morgan group, shown by M. Harjes' dash from Paris, and Mr. Morgan's interview in New York on the eve of his sailing for Europe.

It is now practically certain that an invitation will be sent to Germany after Monday's plenary sitting. THE TRIBUNE learns that Prime Minister MacDonald has told Premier Herriot that even if the allies are not in full agreement an invitation to the Germans cannot be postponed longer, and M. Herriot, although troubled, has consented.

MARX IS VICTOR

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 26.—An attempt of the Ludendorff party, which presented a resolution of lack of confidence to the reichstag this afternoon, to wreck the Marx-Stresemann government was defeated. The German Nationalist party refrained from voting and the result stood 172 to 62 against the motion.

The government is well pleased and considers the vote as showing the country's support of its declarations, which it will still present in London. Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann, Finance Minister Luther, Occupied Regions Minister Hoefle, Reichsbank President Schacht, and fifteen others will compose the German delegation.

All the communist deputies supported the Ludendorff motion.

The reichstag was adjourned until it is called into special session when the Dawes reparations plan laws, which the reparations commission is now studying, are returned. The Nationalists announced they would not support the Dawes laws unless the allies agreed to evacuation of the Ruhr, amnesty, and no further sanctions.

Steamer Goes Down; 288 on Board Saved

Norfolk, Va., July 26.—The excursion steamer Gratitude, with 288 employés of the Texas Oil company and members of their families on board, sank off Craney island in Norfolk harbor early tonight when she struck a sunken barge. So far as it was possible to check the passenger list late tonight no lives were lost, though three persons, two women and a man, were taken to a hospital badly hurt.

The navy tug Wytomito arrived at the Portsmouth navy yard at 11:30 o'clock tonight with 150 of the excursionists rescued from the sunken vessel.

Small Boats to Rescue.

The Gratitude sank but was not completely submerged and her passengers were taken off in small boats sent from the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad steamer Pennsylvania and several harbor vessels and launches.

Scenes of wildest confusion were enacted on board the stricken vessel when her passengers realized she was about to go down. Many persons, including women and children, jumped overboard, apparently fearing they would be sucked under when the vessel settled in the water. Others were hurled into the water by the force of the impact.

Panic Reigns at Wharf.

Some of those who leaped into the blackness of the harbor below the sinking ship found they were standing in water only knee deep, having landed on the submerged barge. Others went in up to their necks and many hasty rescues were made at the very side of the sinking craft. But for the fact the ship was held firm by the barge she would have gone to the bottom with heavy loss of life.

NOVELIST MORRIS WED IN SECRET AFTER DIVORCE

San Francisco, Cal., July 26.—[Special.]—Gouverneur Morris, novelist, and his secretary, Miss Ruth Wightman, 27, a petite brunette, were married almost a year ago, they admitted today after he had obtained the final decree of a divorce granted him in July, 1923, from his first wife, Mrs. Elsie Waterbury Morris, in Los Angeles.

The wedding bells will ring a second time Monday at Salinas, to conform with the California statutes.

"We were married shortly after my interlocutory divorce decree was granted in Los Angeles," Morris said. "We were married outside the jurisdiction of California. That marriage is perfectly satisfactory to us."

Morris and his wife separated shortly after the war. She is running a beauty parlor in New York. She did not contest his charge of desertion.

$24,000,000 IN PANAMA CANAL TOLLS IN YEAR

New York, July 26.—The tenth fiscal year of operation of the Panama canal, which ended June 30, broke all previous records, according to the official publication, the Panama Canal Record, issued today.

During the twelve months 5,648 ocean going ships passed through. Total tolls were $24,291,492, a monthly average of $2,024,291. The total cargo was 27,218,928 long tons, a monthly average of 2,268,244 tons.

Compared with the fiscal year 1923 the figures were:

Transits, an increase of 1,263 vessels, or 31.8 per cent; net tonnage, an increase of 7,543,092 tons, or 40.5 per cent; tolls, an increase of $6,782,548, or 38.7 per cent; cargo, an increase of 7,426,835 tons, or 37.4 per cent.

RAP 'FRIENDLY JUDGE' CHARGE AS FRAMEUP

Darrow Questions Cop's Veracity.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Clarence Darrow, after three days of subtle acquiescence to the testimony of the seventy-nine witnesses State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe called before Chief Justice John R. Caverly, jumped clear out into the open yesterday when, on cross-examination of that seventy-ninth witness, he asked Sergeant James J. Gortland a question.

A question of twenty-eight softly spoken words. But it may, conceivably, become the pivotal point in the trial of Nathan F. Leopold Jr., and Richard Loeb for the confessed murder of Robert Franks.

MR. DARROW—Mr. Officer, don't you know that this story of yours in reference to a "friendly judge" is a pure fabrication made for the purpose of intimidating this court?

SERGT. GORTLAND—It is not.

MR. DARROW—That is all, sir.

It May Be Echoed.

It was all, for the moment. But from the serious interest that Foreman Leopold, older brother of Nathan's, took in the impromptu conference with Mr. Darrow, Benjamin and Walter Bachrach, and the two boys, it doesn't look as if it is going to be all. The state, zestfully, has been hurling out that accusing epithet, "friendly judge."

It may be that Mr. Darrow, himself, will toss the phrase about a bit, when the defense begins its case, somewhere along about Tuesday afternoon.

It was Friday afternoon, during the state's most important half hour, so far, that Sergt. Gortland, earnestly and urgently, told how Leopold, the day after his confession, had confidently predicted a plan of defense (one of three he had projected). The formula, for as the police officer told it, it seemed almost that, was: Plea of guilty—friendly judge—life imprisonment.

It was yesterday morning, during the defense's most important ten minutes, so far, that Clarence Darrow, with quiet inflections, put a persistent question mark in front of the officer's story.

Lays Foundation for Attack.

Slowly, with the cumulative effect of hundreds of drops of water, Clarence Darrow had laid the foundation for the final direct attack on Sergt. Gortland's statements, and on the state for calling for that statement.

First the defense lawyer asked the witness he was cross-examining if he made notations of the conversations with young Leopold to which he had testified. Gortland said, quite frankly, yes and no. Then, obligingly, the officer yanked out a mass of yellow, white, and gray papers, the customary memory book of a police officer.

The sergeant produced six pages of shorthand notes and three pages of typewritten notes.

Still slowly, Mr. Darrow asked a few unimportant questions, the answers to which didn't seem to matter much, but did matter considerably. Then, as such a logical climax to the queries, the lawyer asked just what notes the officer had taken on that conversation regarding the "friendly judge."

Notes Not Transcribed.

A ruffling of papers, more digging about, and the witness pointed to a paragraph of pothooks, identified as "the Munson system of shorthand, plus my own variations."

"And you never transcribed those notes?" the lawyer inquired.

"No," the sergeant explained. "I kept them just this way, and they never left my pocket."

"I see," Mr. Darrow replied. And the folks in the courtroom would have given a lot to know just what Mr. Darrow meant.

So far the "friendly judge" syllables which have been so jostled about have this record. Sergt. Gortland, from the stand, says Nate mentioned them to him, but alone; says he made the shorthand notation of it; and produces that notation.

But, across the aisle, Nate is whispering to Mr. Bachrach. Mr. Bachrach is conferring with Mr. Darrow. Mr. Darrow is listening to Foreman Leopold, the brother. And Jacob Loeb, Richard's uncle, is murmuring:

"The state put on dozens of corroborating witnesses for everything else in this trial; everything the boys first admitted. Yet they don't put anybody on to corroborate this; the thing the boys deny. Notice that?"

Presently Mr. Darrow proceeds with the cross-examination.

Told Some Friends.

He'd like to know, he says, if the police officer told anybody about this "special conversation." From now on, in the history of the case, it's going to be referred to, apparently, as the "special" conversation. It seems to be a good name.

"I told my partner, Sergt. Frank Johnson, at once."

After the partner learned of it, the sergeant declared, he had told it to a Chicago newspaperwoman on the afternoon of Monday, June 2. The next recipient of the news were Gortland's friends and relatives, down in the quiet little town of Fairbury, Ill., which he visited July 12 and 13. Sometime during that 48 hours, then, Thomas Samon of Fairbury was told.

Q.—Who is the other one?

A.—His wife.

A police sergeant, a newspaper woman, two citizens of Fairbury, Ill.: these four alone knew the story, he said, until last Thursday night when he told it to Prosecutor Crowe and his four assistants: John Sbarbaro, Joseph Savage, Milton Smith, and Thomas Marshall.

His Story Unshaken.

Back and forth, around and around, suavely and gently, Mr. Darrow placed his questions. But always the witness' story was the same. And, finally, Mr. Darrow came out, flatfooted and demanded to know if the whole thing weren't a "pure fabrication" calculated to "intimidate this court?"

The witness leaned back confidently and said, "It is not."

The lawyer stepped back and said, "That is all."

And the next witness took the stand. His testimony, of itself, wasn't very important, and by contrast, it was exceedingly undramatic. The defense counsel didn't trouble to cross-examine him. Instead they kept on their conversation with the youths, more interested in the cross-examination that had gone before than in the testimony that was to come.

An official photographer from the police department was called next. He identified some fifty odd pictures taken in connection with the trip to the culvert when the teen aged murderers corroborated the facts of their confession; and dug up bits of belts and shoes and stockings.

State to Close Monday.

The court adjourned until Monday morning, when State's Attorney Crowe will call the last of his many witnesses. These will include Capt. William Schoemaker, handwriting experts, and John Levinson. But for a curious twist of things it might have been John Levinson's lifeless body that was found May 22 clogging up a drain pipe in a culvert. Irving Hartman, another boy, on whose death Nate and Richard speculated, is out of town and will not appear as a witness.

The apex of the state's case will probably come Monday afternoon, when Elbert Allen and Frank Sheeders, official stenographers of the state's attorney's office, will be called to read the two confessions, originally made at dawn on the 31st of May.

Then the defense, with its alienists, will begin the presentation of their case, a case which, according to one of the allenists engaged, will be one of the most distinguished in medical history. On the other hand, if State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe carries out his present plan, it will be one of the most hotly contested defenses in legal history.

HUNDREDS WRITE JUDGE CAVERLY THREATS, ADVICE

Letters, hundreds of them, are coming in these days to Chief Justice John R. Caverly, advising, suggesting, and even threatening him, with regard to his decision in the trial of Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb for their confessed murder of Robert Franks.

"And they're just about evenly balanced," the judge declared yesterday. "For a while one side was way ahead in this legal correspondence school. Then the other side shot ahead. But now they balance rather precisely."

Many of the letters, perhaps the majority of them, are scribbled in pencil on ragged sheets of paper, with poor grammar and worse logic. But some come from people of education. Nearly every letter contains some reference to the Bible. Marked passages, inclosed in the envelope, urge a hanging verdict. Marked passages, some two or three verses away, inclosed in another envelope, urge leniency.

"And to think," Judge Caverly observed seriously, "to think that these men and women, miles away from the courtroom, with but slight knowledge of the case, and no specific knowledge of the issues, have the confidence in themselves to presume, offhand, to give a verdict. The idea is preposterous."

Included in the batch of letters have been several letters of rather definite threat. Like the letters, the threats are evenly divided, and not especially disturbing.

But not all the notes come to the judge. Jacob Franks, father of the murdered boy, has received several anonymous letters threatening him to "lay off" the death penalty.

Mr. Franks yesterday asserted that he is paying no attention to the threats and is still firm in his demand that the murderers of his son be hanged.

"I feel desperately sorry for Nathan Leopold Sr.," he said. "It is a supreme ideal for him. But my son has been taken away from me. And I've got to demand justice."

HOODOOED TRAIN STOPS OF ITSELF; CREW STRIKES

VIENNA, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The crew of the Innsbruck-Bludenz express today refused to take out the train, declaring it was hoodooed.

For ten successive days the express, the trainmen said, had stopped dead after passing a stiff grade at the Arelerg tunnel, although police stationed at the place have been unable to see anyone manipulating the brakes. Yesterday the train stopped three times, although engineering experts were watching carefully to discover the cause.

The railwaymen assert that the occurrences presage a great disaster and people are already boycotting trains along this line.

Darrow Tries to Shake Detective's Story.

The fourth morning of the Leopold-Loeb hearing opens with Judge Caverly's courtroom in a state of expectation.

Everybody's waiting for it, for Darrow's cross-examination of Sergt. James J. Gortland. Did Nathan Leopold Jr. really make that statement about a "friendly judge"? Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for the defense, is going to try to show that he didn't.

He starts right in.

He heaves himself out of his seat, swings the chair around in front of him, and leans over the back of it as he faces the witness. Long, thin, straggly gray hair, furrowed face, thin nose, thin lips, inquisitive gray eyes under heavy brows, stooped, heavy shoulders, a new gray suit that fits as carelessly as the old one—they call Clarence Darrow the gray lion of the defense.

He inquires as to Sergt. Gortland's occupations during the last dozen years, learns that he is now secretary to Chief of Detectives Hughes, then gets down to business.

The Ordeal Starts.

Mr. Darrow asks for and receives all the notes and memoranda jotted down by Sergt. Gortland during the preparation of the state's case. The questioning continues:

Q.—Have you now given us all you have transcribed? A.—I have now given you all my notes that I remember.

Q.—Did you have these here yesterday with you? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you have looked to see what you have? A.—O, at different times, sure. I have refreshed my memory from them right along.

Q.—Did you look since you were on the stand yesterday? A.—No, sir; I did not refer to these at all.

Q.—Or today? A.—No, sir, or last night.

Q.—When was the last time you looked at them? A.—Thursday night; I went over them.

Q.—Is that paper that is attached to the notes in your handwriting? A.—It is.

Q.—When did you write it? A.—Thursday.

Q.—What Thursday? A.—Of this week.

Q.—And that is the first time you wrote it? A.—That is the first time I made that notation, yes, sir.

Q.—Yes. A.—That is all contained in the shorthand, in probably more elaborate form.

Q.—You mean, what is in there is contained in the shorthand notes? A.—That is a reminder for me. As soon as I see those few words they refresh my memory.

Visits and Auto Ride.

Sergt. Gortland points to the jottings—confession, defense, lack of sorrow for the Franks family—and indicates where the corresponding notations are in his shorthand note book. He tells of visits to the Leopold home, and of a auto trip taken with Leopold along the murder route.

ATTORNEY DARROW—What about the next conversation with Leopold? A.—The trip was on Saturday. The next time I saw him was on Sunday afternoon, June 1.

In Crowe's Office.

Q.—Whereabouts? A.—State's attorney's office.

Q.—Have a conversation with him there? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who was with you? A.—Nobody but he and I.

Q.—What room were you in? A.—Room 5.

Q.—How long did you talk with him? A.—Just a short while.

Q.—Did you make any memorandum of it? A.—Not at that time.

Q.—Did you at any time? A.—Later on.

Q.—Where is it? Sergt. Gortland hands Attorney Darrow two pages containing the memoranda of the conversation.

Q.—Where was it you had the conversation which you related here about the subject that the jury would hang him, but he might get before a friendly judge and not be hanged? A.—In that room.

Q.—At that time? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You and he alone? A.—That is correct.

Q.—Where is your memorandum of that? A.—Right here.

"Friendly Judge" Note.

Q.—Read it. Read it literally, just as you have got it there.

Sergt. Gortland reads: "I then asked him what his defense would be. He said he did not know until after he had conferred with his father and lawyer. He would be governed by their judgment. He said if they wanted him to hang 'I will plead not guilty; the jury will hang me, or plead guilty before a friendly judge and get life imprisonment. You know I have a number of ideas that I can give to the world. That would give me opportunity to work in some matters I have in mind to give to the world. And then there is the insanity plea.'"

Q.—Is that all? A.—That is all.

Q.—You never copied it? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You never gave a copy of that to anybody? A.—No sir.

Q.—Where do you keep these papers? A.—I have been keeping these in my pocket. I never gave a copy of them, but I told some people——

Q.—To whom did you first speak about that conversation? A.—The first party was Sergt. Frank Johnson.

Q.—When? A.—That same night.

Q.—That was before you made these memoranda? A.—Before I made the memoranda?

Mentioned to Miss Forbes.

Q.—Who was the next person you spoke to?

A.—Genevieve Forbes of THE TRIBUNE.

Q.—When was that? A.—I believe it was the same night.

Q.—Who else did you talk with about it? A.—Judge Crowe.

Q.—When was that? A.—The first time I ever told Judge Crowe was on Thursday night.

Q.—Last Thursday night, the day before yesterday? A.—Yes.

The report made by Sergt. Gortland to Chief Collins is produced. The "friendly judge" conversation is not contained in it.

Tell Tale Glasses Again.

While Attorney Darrow looks it over, the sergeant is temporarily withdrawn, and Jacob Weinstein, general manager and director of Almer Coe & Co. is put on. State's Attorney Crowe shows him the prescription given to Nathan Leopold Jr. by Dr. Emil Deutsch and filled by Almer Coe. Mr. Weinstein identifies it.

State's Attorney Crowe produces Nathan's glasses, the pair of spectacles that first fastened the crime on him.

Q.—When did you first see the glasses? A.—On Wednesday, the day previous to the announcement that the glasses were identified.

Q.—From your examination of them do you know where they were made, by what firm? A.—There isn't any question of a doubt that they were made by Almer Coe & Co.

Q.—What do the glasses show? A.—The glasses show that they correspond exactly to the job envelope, and to the prescription.

JUDGE CAVERLY: Did you make a test to find out whether those glasses now conform to the prescription?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

JUDGE CAVERLY: And they do?

THE WITNESS: They do.

Gortland Again on Stand.

Once more Sergt. Gortland takes the stand. The feeling of expectancy in the courtroom is growing. Mr. Darrow has the notes and memoranda marked as defense exhibit 1. The report to Chief Collins is returned to State's Attorney Crowe.

There is a lull. Mr. Darrow takes a step forward. Heads peer up. Ears listen for the question to which all these other questions have been only preliminaries. It comes.

MR. DARROW—Mr. Officer, don't you know that this story of yours in reference to a "friendly judge" is a pure fabrication made for the purpose of intimidating this court?

SERGT. GORTLAND—It is not.

MR. DARROW—That is all, sir.

Rest Anti-Climax.

The rest of it is anti-climax.

State's Attorney Crowe establishes the fact that he had not talked with Sergt. Gortland about the conversation until last Thursday. Mr. Darrow asks a few more questions about the report to Chief Collins. He seeks to learn whether other conversations are detailed in the report, while the "friendly judge" conversation is omitted.

William F. Barnes, chief clerk in the assistant general auditor's office of the Pullman company, identifies the agent's stub for the seat which Loeb bought so that he might put the second letter to Jacob Franks in the Pullman car.

Edgar H. Yates, photographer for the bureau of identification, identifies forty-nine pictures taken of the scenes told of in the two boys' confessions.

Then it's over for the day. Court adjourns until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

WITNESSES IN MURDER TRIAL

Jacob Weinstein, general manager of Almer Coe & Co., who identified the prescription for eyeglasses sold to Leopold.

William Barnes, from the Pullman company's auditor's office, who identified the seat stub of a ticket sold to Loeb.

Edgar H. Yates, photographer of the bureau of identification, who took pictures of scenes and localities figuring in the Franks case.

FRIED CHICKEN HELPS KEEP TWO SLAYERS HAPPY

Enjoy Ball Game and Books in Jail.

Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb enjoyed the first day of the week-end yesterday. They, of course, did not drive to the country club for a round or two of golf, or sit up in the card room at their homes and play bridge.

Instead, they remained behind the bars of their cells in the county jail and thought over events that have raced along in their trial before Judge Caverly.

Trial Is Tiresome.

Their day after day appearance in court grows wearisome, even to the hundreds of men and women who sit on the sidelines and watch the show. Reporters doze off to a summer snooze between witnesses. But the defendants must keep at attention.

When the boys returned to their cells at noon, they sat down to hearty meals their parents sent up. Fried chicken, French fried potatoes, lettuce, coffee, and cake comprised the meal.

After the meal newspapers. Shortly before 2 o'clock they took a refreshing shower. When the prisoners were turned into the "bullpen" they enjoyed an indoor baseball game.

Enjoy Ball Game.

Loeb played first base on one team and Leopold "first" on the other. The game lasted for more than an hour. Then the boys talked over the week's happenings with their friends.

At the end of the exercise hour the boys returned to their cells and read books brought from the jail library.

"It's a relief to get a chance to take life easy," said Loeb. "The trial is great stuff but a little rest is good for the best of us."

Leopold Is Reticent.

Leopold had little to say. He was engrossed in a book of adventure, which he did not lay down until supper arrived. Both boys appeared in the best of spirts.

They retired early because today is the date for entertainment in the jail by a number of orchestras.

DEFENSE PRIMED FOR BATTLE OF MEN OF SCIENCE

Findings of Alienists Is Next Step in Trial.

If the state's evidence is sustained, Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb are scheduled to go down in legal history as a pair of the country's most notorious murderers. If the defense has its way they will go down in medical history as two of the world's most remarkable examples of abnormal psychology.

State's Attorney Crowe expects to finish presentation of his case tomorrow. Then Attorney Clarence Darrow takes the field, and the battle of the alienists begins. Attorney Darrow will attempt to put on the stand the dozen notables he has drawn from Chicago and the east. Mr. Crowe will attempt to keep them off.

The vanguard of the easterners arrived yesterday in the persons of Dr. William F. Healy of Boston and Dr. Bernard Glueck of New York. Dr. William A. White of Washington, D. C., arrives today. And the three are due to be headliners in the display of testimony on which the defense depends to save the necks of Leopold and Loeb.

Says Door Is Open.

Depending always on whether Judge Caverly permits such testimony to go in.

That he will, the defense hopes, and points to testimony which State's Attorney Crowe has put in and which they declare would be irrelevant in the ordinary trial.

"The door has been open for us, we have made no objection. Why not leave it open so that we can have our turn," say those who believe Attorney Darrow has been extremely clever all these days when he might have been shouting objections.

Legally, of course, since they pleaded guilty and to do so a defendant cannot be insane, Leopold and Loeb are sane. The defense's task is a search for synonyms for insanity.

The term "insanity," they pointed out yesterday, has no honest place in the true medical scientist's vocabulary.

Call It Legal Term.

"Insanity is a legal and social term," the defense alienists pointed out. "It is not medical at all. The medical point of view is to look not for one generic mental ailment with a label, but to search for the thousand and one mental abnormalities or their combinations known to science which cannot be labeled insanity, but which establish mental responsibility or irresponsibility."

If this view prevails the testimony of their alienists may go in, the defense believes.

Nor do the dozen hold with state's experts that the politeness which Leopold has shown has anything to do with his sanity. They pointed yesterday to the case of Dr. Miner, an English criminal adjudged insane and kept incarcerated for 40 years. Miner was known for his punctilious behavior as well as his criminal acts.

Pleads for Truth.

State's Attorney Crowe has refused to let his mental experts sit in conference with the experts for the defense, and the latter are sorry for this.

"It should be an attempt to search out the truth, not a game or a battle of wits between paid science," they declare. "If a man is sick, two sets of doctors do not examine him separately and quarrel over their findings. Instead, they meet together in consultation, exchange their views, and arrive at some unified conclusion based on the best deductions of each one of them.

"The old style 'expert' court story has to go. If a sick man is treated this way, why should not a criminal who may be mentally ill be treated as considerately? It is a duty owed to him by society."

ALLAN LOEB SEEKS TO KEEP PARENTS FROM DICK'S MURDER TRIAL

Allan Loeb was not in his customary place yesterday in Judge John R. Caverly's courtroom, looking earnestly at his younger brother, Dick, on trial for the murder of Robert Franks. Mr. Loeb was on his way to Charlevoix, Mich., to try to dissuade his parents, the Albert H. Loebs, from coming to Chicago to be near their son.

Dick's father, who has been seriously ill with heart disease for the last two years, suffered a severe attack about three week ago. Since then he has been confined to his summer home. Dick's mother, too, has been both invalid and nurse. The shock of the trial made her ill but she has insisted upon remaining out of bed to nurse her husband.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Loeb insisted that she would come to her boy's trial. Dr. Lester Frankenthal, in a letter made public yesterday by Jacob Loeb, Dick's uncle, wrote Allan urging him to do "all in your power to keep your mother with your father."

Allan Loeb, apparently, was successful until yesterday when in a long distance phone call, Mrs. Loeb insisted she was coming to Chicago.

COOLIDGE CALLS DEFENSE DAY PUBLIC EXHIBIT

Reminder to the People of Nation's Condition.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—President Coolidge answers criticism against the war department's "defense day" program in a letter to Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, and made public today by Mr. Libby.

The President says he profoundly hopes that the outlawing of war can be accomplished, but that he fails to see any inconsistency in giving approval to the program for defense day.

Mr. Libby's orfganization is back of a campaign for world coöperation for peace commencing today and tomorrow, the tenth anniversary of the war.

President Coolidge declares in his letter that the use of the term "mobilization day" has not been authorized by the government and conveys a wrong impression as to the purposes.

Reiterating that he has repeatedly pledged his assistance to any effort for the elimination of war when guided along feasible lines, the President says his attention has been called to the fact that the National Council for Prevention of War is criticizing the defense day plan as a militaristic gesture.

Not a "Mobilization Day."

"In some unofficial and entirely unauthorized way the defense test has been denominated 'mobilization day,'" says President Coolidge. "The government did not do this. It would be proper to call it 'inspection day,' but it is not mobilization, and the government is not responsible for any such designation.

"As a result some well-meaning people have misconstrued its character and purposes, assuming that a nationwide mobilization of forces, and of the civilian and industrial resources available for national defense was to be carried out on that day. This, of course, is far from the truth.

"The constitution and the law contemplate the maintenance of a defense establishment, which in time of peace always has been, and is now, in proportion to our national power and interests, one of the smallest in the world.

"I have taken an oath to support the constitution and to execute the laws of the United States. I could do this by maintaining a large standing army. I am opposed to any such plan.

Opposite of Militaristic.

"I am trying to work out a method by which we can have constantly, as we now have, an exceedingly small army, and leave our citizens free from that burden by letting them assume their own responsibility for a defensive establishment sufficient to provide for domestic peace and order, and national defense.

"Instead of being a military gesture this plan is the exact opposite. It is a nonmilitaristic gesture for the purpose of keeping down to its lowest possible point the professional military organization of the United States.

"Our country has always relied chiefly for its defense upon the readiness of its patriotic manhood to take up arms when necessity presented. After the great military effort of the United States in the world war our army was demobilized more rapidly and completely than that of any other warring nation.

Points to Nation's Record.

"Not only this but the government of the United States initiated the Washington conference on limitation of armament, which brought about highly important reductions in the naval establishments of the great powers, and which sought, though without results, to effect also an agreement for reduction of armies.

"Undiscouraged by the failure to effect a limitation of armies, our government's authorized spokesmen have repeatedly since that time declared their wish to bring about a further consideration of this question with a view to accomplishing a general reduction of armed forces by land.

"In the face of this record, which is known to all the world, it seems unfair that the plans for defense day should be condemned out of hand simply through the device of misrepresentation.

Must Confront Realities.

"Our government is compelled to confront the realities of the world. One of these is that international agreement for limitation of armies has not been brought into effect. That being the case, our laws provide a small permanent army and contemplate its expansion to meet emergencies, should they arise. Defense day is intended to bring to the people a reminder of their relations to, and dependence upon, this skeleton defense establishment, in case our country be attacked.

"There can be no doubt that failure to prepare for the possibility of war at a time when that possibility was really imminent resulted in great hardship, unnecessary expense, and the unjustifiable prolongation of the world war. To say this is but to state what everybody knows.

"It is desirable that both the public officials who would be responsible for the national defense and the people who would have to make the sacrifices to maintain it should know something of our plans for it.

Criticism Has Been Unfair.

"What is proposed for Sept. 12 is merely a compliance with the purposes of the national defense law of 1920. It is not a mobilization, and the people who first attached to it the term 'mobilization day' and then proceeded to condemn it have been utterly unfair. Most of them, I am sure, have been innocent of intent to be unfair, but they have been misled.

"Profoundly hoping that the outlawing of war from this world may be accomplished, I am yet unable to detect any inconsistency in giving my approval to the program of defense day. I wish crime might be abolished; but I would not therefore abolish courts and police protection. I wish war might be made impossible, but I would not leave my country unprotected meanwhile.

"The defense test seems to me a means to assure the fullest efficiency to the extremely modest defense force our country maintains."

G. O. P. SENATORS AIR THEIR ROW OVER MELLON

Couzens and Watson Issue Statements.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—Secretary Mellon's enforcement of prohibition is to be investigated coincident with the national campaign, but the sudden decision of the senate committee charged with the task to go ahead brought out formal statements today from Senators Watson, Indiana, and Couzens, Michigan, Republicans, explaining their conception of events leading up to it.

Senator Couzens was elected during the day as chairman of the committee, in place of Senator Watson, who had indicated his desire to retire, but not until he had concluded a two hour interview with President Coolidge. Senator Watson then went to the White House and later the two senators made public their statements.

Meanwhile Democratic members of the committee, Senators King of Utah and Jones of New Mexico, although officially silent, made it clear that they were for investigation, full and immediate, and had been all along.

Couzens Issues Statement.

The committee rejected the proposal that Francis J. Heney, California graft prosecutor, be retained as special counsel, but authorized selection by Senators Couzens and Jones of some one else. Sept. 2 was fixed as the date for open hearings in Washington.

Explaining the committee decision, Senator Couzens, who, with the two Democratic members, holds the majority vote, said:

"On Tuesday, July 22, Senator Watson called me at Detroit on long distance telephone and said Senators King and Jones were in his office and that they were all desirous of having a meeting and wanted to know when I could attend.

"I was in the midst of my campaign, and told him that if the meeting was wanted at once I could come. So I canceled several engagements to attend a meeting Friday of this week. The date was satisfactory to Senator Watson, so I left Detroit Thursday and we met in Senator Watson's office Friday morning, July 5, at which time Senator Watson said he personally was opposed to going ahead with the investigation and if the committee decided to go ahead he would have to resign as chairman, which he did.

Will Ask Mellon for Statement.

"Considerable discussion was had as to the selection of an attorney to study the complaints and prepare for a continuance of the investigation. The committee decided to leave the selection to the chairman, Senator Watson, and Senator Jones. However, Senator Watson asked to be excused, and the selection was left to Senator Jones and myself.

"A resolution was passed authorizing the chairman, at the instance of any member of the committee, or on his own election, to ask the treasury department for any information that any member of the committee might deem necessary or desirable for carrying on the investigation.

"It was the impression of the committee that if reasonably prompt action was had in securing an attorney and other help it would take the month of August for them to get organized for opening the hearings, coupled with the fact that several members of the committee had prepared certain questionnaires which they desired the treasury department to answer. It was decided that the committee would then adjourn until Sept. 2. Every resolution was unanimously carried.

Scope of the Investigation.

"It is the committee's intention to investigate the income tax unit and the prohibition unit of the internal revenue bureau for the purpose of seeing whether the laws are being properly carried out and if any amendments would improve the functioning of the internal revenue bureau. The committee is going into the matter with an entirely open mind."

Senators Couzens and Jones left Washington immediately after the session, but Mr. Couzens said he would return within ten days.

Senator Watson, on learning of the Michigan senator's public statement, also summarized events in a statement of his own.

Watson States His Case.

"Senator King, Senator Ernst and I are members of a subcommittee on the Mayfield case which met at Atlantic City about three weeks ago," he said. "At that time Senator King said he wanted to find out what Senator Couzens and Senator Jones wanted to do with reference to the committee appointed to investigate the internal revenue bureau, saying he regarded the action of the senate as a mandate to proceed.

"About ten days ago he and Senator Jones came into my office to talk with me about the procedure. I said I was opposed to any investigation whatever and that I did not believe we had a right to meet during a recess. Senators Jones and King said they would look that question up and report to me later.

"Three or four days after that they came back and Senator King had a legal opinion to show that the committee had a right to sit during recess.

Arranging a Conference.

"At that time they suggested that they wanted Senator Couzens present and thereupon Senator Jones suggested that I get the secretary of Senator Couzens to ascertain his whereabouts. Senator Couzens' secretary informed us that Senator Couzens was on his farm near Detroit but probably could be reached by telephone and that he would put in a call.

"Within a few minutes my telephone bell rang and I found Senator Couzens at the other end of the line. I told him that Senators King and Jones were in my office and wanted to know whether or not he wanted to proceed with the hearings. He stated that he did and I then told him that they wanted me to tell him to come on to Washington. He said he would leave that night, which he did.

"I told him on the telephone that I was opposed to any hearing but that the other members of the committee were present and wanted to proceed.

"I have persistently opposed these investigations and made two speeches on the floor of the senate voicing my opposition. I resigned as chairman of this subcommittee because I could not consistently retain that position while opposing the activities of the committee."

4 CHILDREN DEPORTED ARE SAVED AFTER THE SHIP GETS UNDER WAY

New York, July 26.—A last-minute order from Washington overtook the liner Kungsholm today as she was leaving for Gothenburg and saved to their father four children of five who were being deported with their mother.

Mrs. Poll, an Esthonian, arrived with her children June 30. One child had a tubercular knee. The mother and children were ordered deported, though the husband and father Taormina Poll, has lived in the United States several years.

An appeal was made in the case of the four children in good health, and a rescinding order arrived today. The liner was out in the fairway, but a tug was sent out for the four children. The sick child and her mother continued their voyage.

Bailiffs Seize Cemetery for Payments Due Owners

BERLIN, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bailiffs today seized the cemetery belonging to the Berlin suburb Mariendorff because of the failure of the municipality to meet payments due the former owners. The gates were locked and the dead are being buried temporarily in the old municipal cemetery pending adjustment of the claims.

Cape May Courthouse, N. J., July 26.—Four persons were instantly killed in a grade crossing automobile crash at Hand avenue crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad today. The victims, all of Millville, N. J., were Joseph Myers, his wife, and son, and Miss Jennie Elliott, 15.

COURT ELEVATOR FALL IMPERILS JUDGE CAVERLY

Jurist Orders Instant Repair of Lifts.

Two almost simultaneous, and almost serious elevator accidents in the Criminal court building as spectators crowded in to reach the Franks case hearing yesterday brought a renewed protest from Chief Justice John R. Caverly over the disreputable condition of that structure. The chief justice himself was one of the near victims.

The first accident occurred when Nick Bosco, operator of one of the three elevators in the building, started his car after a stop at the fourth floor. The car was packed with men and women on their way to the courtroom on the sixth floor where the hearing is in progress.

Falls Dozen Feet.

As it started, the worn cables slipped. Down it fell a dozen feet before Bosco, with presence of mind, slammed on the emergency brake and saved a plunge to the bottom of the shaft.

It was only ten minutes later when Judge Caverly entered the lift run by Operator Henry Smith. A stop was made at the second floor to admit Assistant State's Attorneys Joseph P. Savage and Milton D. Smith. As the car began to ascend again, the power suddenly failed. Another emergency stop halted the fall after a drop of five feet.

Orders Repairs Made.

On reaching his chambers, Judge Caverly called the inspection department in the city hall and warned that if they did not direct the repair of the elevators at once, that he would personally hire men to do it.

"This morning's pair of near catastrophies is only one more proof of the positive danger of using the present building as a court building any longer," declared Judge Caverly.

NOT TO BRAG, BUT WE READ HEAPS MORE'N NEW YORK

Chicagoans are greater readers than New Yorkers, according to figures made public yesterday by Carl E. Roden, head of the Chicago public library. Despite New York's population exceeding Chicago's by more than 3,000,000, the public library here circulated 358,000 more books than the New York institution in 1923. Last year Chicago library and its branches issued 9,901,576 volumes, averaging 32,571 daily.

Fiction is still the circulation leader, although it is less than one-half of the volumes in demand daily. Nearly 25 per cent of the daily circulation were books on art, science or sociology. Books on poetry or drama were next in demand.

Ambassador Hotel Guest Robbed of $2,000 Pin

John L. Markham of the Markham Coal and Coke company, with offices in the Fisher building, reported to the police yesterday that a vanity bag, in which was fastened a diamond bar pin valued at $2,000, had been stolen from his mother, Mrs. M. C. Markham. The theft occurred at the Ambassador hotel, between the time Mrs. Markham finished with dinner and walked out to the lounge. The diamonds are insured, he said, but are valued highly for sentimental reasons.

UNREST GROWING ALL OVER BRAZIL, ARGENTINA HEARS

Reported State of Siege Exists in Five States.

BUENOS AIRES, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—While Brazilian official statements continue to insist that with the exception of Sao Paulo the entire country is calm and supporting the constituted government, reports from various sources in Brazil reaching Argentina and Uruguay appear to contradict this.

These reports include one, considered to be authentic, that the federal government has declared a state of seige in the states of Rio Grande do Sul, Matto Grasso, Santa Catharina, Sergipe, and Bahia owing to unrest.

Another says the federal garrison in the state of Sergipe has mutined and that two ships have left Santos with troops to put down the movement. Still another declares that the revolutionary movement is prospering in Santa Catharina and Parana, while unrest prevails in Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul.

Disarm Rio Forts.

Reports from other sources describe the situation of unrest as such that the federal government fears to withdraw troops from some posts to aid in the siege against Sao Paulo.

The forts in the harbor of Rio de Janiero, one of which took part in the mutiny of July, 1922, have been disarmed "as a precautionary measure," according to information published by La Prensa today. The information is said to have been received from Sao Paulo, Brazil.

The Italian ambassador to Brazil, Gen. Badoglio, "moved by humanitarian sentiments," has offered his friendly offices as mediator to end the hostilities between the rebels and the government forces, say advices received here from Sao Paulo. These advices add that many Italians have joined the rebels.

Federals Dislodge Rebels.

Rio Janiero, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The official communication on the Sao Paulo revolt issued at the war office at noon today says:

"The federal troops continued advancing and dislodging the rebels from their positions.

"Our aviators flew over the rebel positions and fully verified the efficacy of our artillery fire yesterday."

20 Girls Seriously Hurt as Glass Bracelets Break

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 26.—Twenty relatively grave injuries caused by the breaking of glass bracelets were reported by Paris hospitals during the last week. The fragile, colored circlets of glass often break and injure the wearer slightly, but really serious injuries only have occurred since the mode has been taken up by shop girls. Previously only slight scratches were caused by the breaking of bracelets at the theater or opera. In one case yesterday a bracelet pierced an artery.

KLAN'S ENTRY IN TEXAS GOVERNOR PRIMARY AHEAD

Mrs. Ferguson First Woman to Try.

Dallas, Tex., July 26.—Judge Felix Robertson, the Ku Klux Klan indorsed Democratic candidate for governor, held his early lead over his nearest opponent when the returns from 149 of the 252 counties in the state had been tabulated by the Texas election bureau.

He had 7,300 more votes than his closest opponent, Lynch Davidson. T. W. Davidson, lieutenant governor, was third, with Mrs. Meriam Ferguson, the only woman candidate, a close fourth. T. W. Davidson and Mrs. Ferguson seesawed for third place all evening.

Robertson Gaining Steadily.

As returns came in Robertson gradually was increasing his lead and the election bureau announced all indications were that he would be the high man in the gubernatorial race, with Lynch Davidson probably second. If the standing is maintained by later returns these two will enter the run-off campaign.

The vote was: Robertson, 28,533; Lynch Davidson, 21,164; T. W. Davidson, 18,036; Mrs. Meriam Ferguson, 17,425; Barton, 3,416; Burkett, 3,285; Collins, 3,262; Pope, 2,174, and Dixon, 837.

Much interest was manifested in the support received by Mrs. Meriam Ferguson of Temple, the first woman candidate for governor. Her husband, Jim Ferguson, former governor, conducted her campaign. He has always had a considerable following and she was expected to receive that, as well as what support would go to the first woman candidate.

Sheppard Leading for Senator.

The election bureau's figures gave Senator Morris Sheppard a safe lead over his two opponents for United States senator. Complete returns from 122 counties gave Sheppard, 73,108; Davis, 25,652, and Maddox, 13,724.

J. M. Culpepper, 65, a Baptist lecturer and a worker for the better government ticket, was shot and instantly killed at Harlandale box. Jim Lubbock, former deputy sheriff, is held. Lubbock was roughly handled by the crowd at the polls before he was taken into custody.

MORGAN SAILS TO LONDON; REFUSES TO TELL PLANS

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—J. Pierpont Morgan and Mrs. Morgan sailed today for London. Mr. Morgan said that his statement last night covered everything he had to say.

That statement said that Mr. Morgan's trip is in the nature of a vacation, denied that he is to attend the bankers' conference in connection with the allied parley in London, but admitted that by invitation, international bankers have given their views on how the allied statesmen should safeguard buyers of proposed German bonds.

Mr. Morgan and his wife boarded the ship by a special gangplank. A corps of detectives and private policemen guarded the financier.

WAR VETERAN KILLS HIMSELF.

Ralph G. Rahl, 33 years old, 4000 Sheridan road, who was found dead in the kitchen of his apartment with the gas jets of the stove open, committed suicide a coroner's jury decided yesterday. Rahl, a war veteran, was despondent over inability to find work, it was believed.

$1,200,000,000 ADDED TO GRAIN VALUES OF U. S.

Old 'Supply and Demand' Aids Soil Tillers.

Farmers of the United States this year will have two basic elements to thank for an increase of considerably more than $1,250,000,000 in the value of their products. These factors are their own industry and the workings of the economic law of "supply and demand."

Regardless of what other interests are concerned in the markets here's what the farmer has to look forward to as the price to be paid for the agricultural crops of 1924 as based on government estimates:

Wheat	$ 851,000,000
Corn	2,264,000,000
Oats	610,000,000
Barley	114,000,000
Rye	51,000,000
Cotton [N. Y. price]	1,520,000,000

Estimates of live stock totals vary, but averages show that hog prices to farmers have advanced around $2.50 per hog in the last sixty days and about $3 per hog over a year ago, while raisers are getting as much as they did last year for cattle and sheep.

Reasons for the Advance.

Various reasons have been assigned by propagandists and others for the rise in prices of farm products but many experts insist that no possible force save those of world conditions could have brought about the upward trend.

They point out that the farmer owes nothing to congress, for it was virtually on the same day that congress adjourned that prices started climbing. Since June 9, $1,200,000,000 has been added to the agricultural wealth of the country, based on a comparison of prices on grains, hogs, and cotton.

The farmer owes nothing, they say, to subtly heralded "Wall street maneuvering for political effect." Speculators who have realized on the market are the closest students of crop conditions, ascertained by world wide surveys. On the other hand market gamblers have lost millions on the bear side. They failed to realize the unfavorable conditions in Canada, and the crop failure in Russia meant a world shortage and enhanced prices for all food products.

As usual wheat is the bellwether in the current situation. Wheat values have responded to the immense change in the world situation and have converted the former sellers' market into a buyers' market.

World Supply Short.

A few months ago the world was worried over the prospect of a tremendous carryover at the end of the crop year. Now it is worried as to whether there will be enough wheat to go around.

Latest estimates on the world's prospective exportable surplus are around 725,000,000 bushels, which is 25,000,000 below the anticipated requirements of the world.

Europe was figuring a short time ago on 288,000,000 bushels of wheat from Canada. Experts now say that country probably will not have much over 125,000,000.

The world's demand has been turned to the United States and the prospective demand is gigantic. As a consequence the price of domestic wheat is advancing at the expense of foreign consumers and farmers are selling their new crops as the price advances.

Why Corn Is Going Up.

Upward movement of corn, however, is laid to other causes. Corn does not enter into the world's trade insofar as this country is concerned. The bulge in corn has been due almost entirely to economic adjustment between grain prices and those of manufactured commodities, plus the poor outlook for the new crop.

Conditions vary throughout the nation, of course, but based on countrywide estimates, the farmer will receive from 10 to 25 per cent more for his products if he sells them this year than he did when he sold them last year. They will be paid materially more money for this year's relatively short crops of grain in the aggregate than they received from much larger yields in 1923.

As nearly as can be estimated, the value of this year's wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley crop is $3,890,000,000 to the producer. This is figuring the price he would receive at a country loading point for all the crops were they to be sold. This compares with $5,320,000,000 on the basis of figures prevailing on June 15, as shown by government reports, except in the case of corn, which has been adjusted to the basis of the prospective new crop of 2,515,000,000, bushels, and also is comparable with $3,541,000,000 which he could have received after the movement of new crops got under way last year.

Comparison With Last Year.

Comparisons of last year's yield of five grains with the July 1 government estimate are contained in the following:

1924.

	Bushels
Wheat	740,000,000
Corn	2,515,000,000
Oats	1,356,000,000
Rye	65,000,000
Barley	170,000,000
Total	4,846,000,000

Wheat	786,000,000
Corn	3,046,000,000
Oats	1,300,000,000
Rye	63,000,000
Barley	198,000,000
Total	5,393,000,000

Prosperity Hits Kansas.

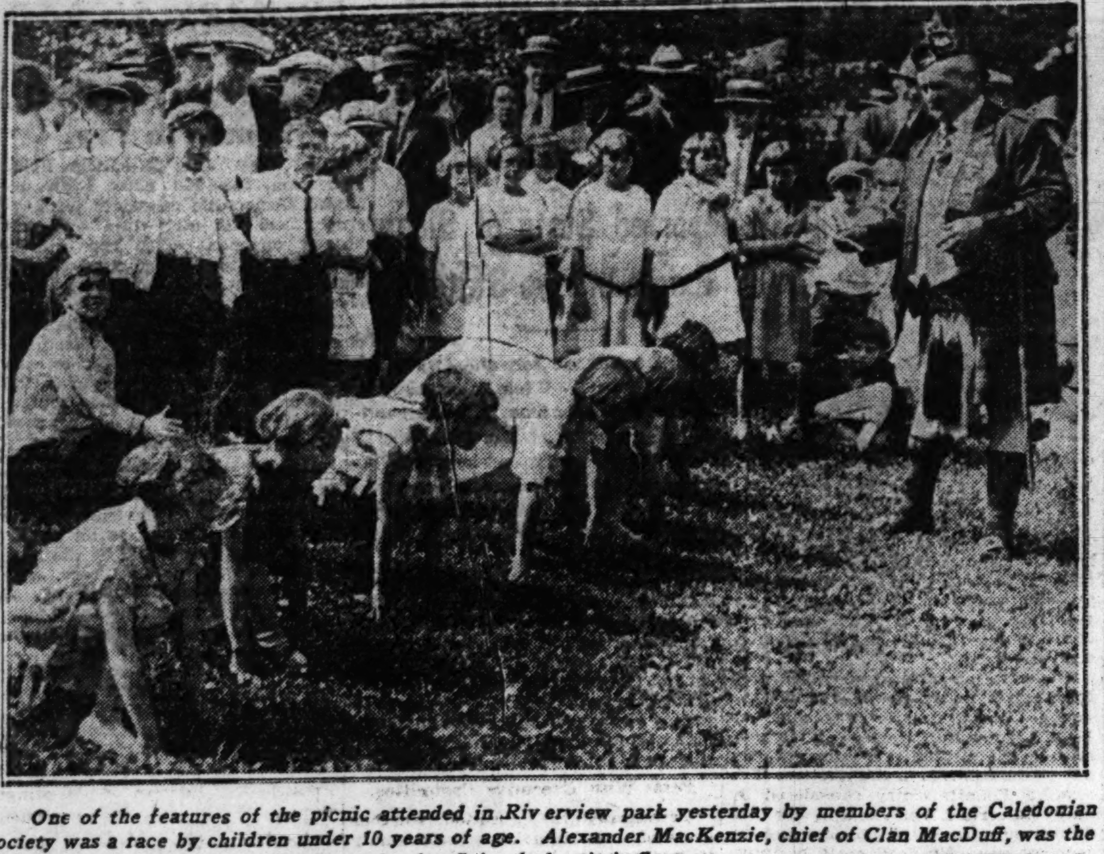
Kansas, leading wheat state of the world, looks forward to a particularly prosperous year. Private reports show a crop of 155,000,000 bushels for which approximately $1 can be obtained at present. Las year's 83,000,000 bushels in Kansas brought but $77,000,000, $68,000,000 less than this year's prospects.

Iowa is the leading corn state of the world. The farmers there should receive around $275,000,000 if present prices for the new crop are maintained. This is $25,000,000 more than was received a year ago.

Agricultural experts inetrviewed in Chicago yesterday expressed elation at the rise.

"Keep politics out of the markets and prices will continue to go up," was their consensus.

CALEDONIAN SOCIETY MAKES MERRY



One of the features of the picnic attended in Riverview park yesterday by members of the Caledonian society was a race by children under 10 years of age. Alexander MacKenzie, chief of Clan MacDuff, was the official starter. The picnic is an annual gala affair of the city's Scots. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

JAIL SUICIDE INSANE.

Joseph Schloipsi, 1922 West Austin avenue, hanged himself in the La Grange jail while temporarily insane, a coroner's jury decided yesterday. Schloipsi was being held by the Western Springs police for examination.

SIX SENTENCED FOR FRAUD IN "PONZI" GAME

Prison sentences and fines were imposed yesterday by Judge George Fred Rush upon Charles Bischoff, brother and "co-conspirator" of Raymond J. Bischoff, fugitive "Ponzi," and five other defendants.

Judge Rush refused to interfere with the verdict of a jury which last April found the six men guilty of conspiring to defraud thousands of foreigners of approximately $7,000,000 through the sale of worthless securities.

The defendants and their sentences as fixed by the jury and imposed yesterday by Judge Rush, are Charles Bischoff, one to five years in the penitentiary and a $2,000 fine; Earl Greer, Bischoff's brother-in-law, one to five years and a $2,000 fine; Frank Dalkus, an agent, one to five years; John Karbanski, Walter Tuskowski, and Anton Shaputis, each one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Belasco Improved After Serious Attack of Grippe

New York, July 26.—The condition of David Belasco, dean of American theatrical producers, who is ill with grippe and bronchitis in his hotel apartment here, was greatly improved at noon. He was 65 years old yesterday. His voice is seriously affected.

Frank Gillmore, executive secretary of the Actors' Equity association, was still in a serious condition today, suffering from nasal hemorrhages.

DAVIS FOR STATE RIGHTS IN FIXING UP PLATFORMS

Not Concerned in Ku Klux Plank in New York.

Dark Harbor, Islesboro, Me., July 26.—John W. Davis, Democratic presidential nominee, declared today that he had no desire to dictate state Democratic party platforms.

His statement was in response to inquiries concerning published reports that he had been urged to return to New York early next week with a view to preventing a threatened clash with Gov. Alfred E. Smith, over the question of the adoption of a strong anti-Ku Klux Klan plank by the New York state convention in September.

Smith Satisfactory to Him.

"I naturally am interested in the state platforms," Mr. Davis said, "but my observation has been that state conventions reserve the right to write their own platforms."

Reports that he had been urged to return to New York were characterized by the nominee as "pure imagination."

"Would you object to Gov. Smith as a candidate to succeed himself as governor of New York?" Mr. Davis was asked.

"I would be very glad to see him run," was the reply.

A Little "Ad" for Maine.

The Democratic candidate varied his routine today by abandoning his golf game to watch a race of some forty knockabouts on Gilkey's harbor and Penobscot bay. He spent several hours completing the first rough draft of his speech accepting the Democratic presidential nomination and later conferred with Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Remarking on his improved physical condition as a result of his stay here, Mr. Davis said he could "praise the Maine woods very highly."

The nominee will attend church services here tomorrow.

Only Thing the Boarder Didn't Take Was the House

John Blair of 2753 West Park avenue, recently gave food and lodging to a friend who was out of employment and ill. He called him his star boarder. Yesterday Blair asked the police to locate the boarder, Blair's wife and $1,500 of Blair's savings. They all left together.

WANTED SALESMEN
To Start August 1st

COMMISSIONS paid Addressograph salesmen this year will average well over $6,000 per man.

Selling Addressographs is as fascinating work as it is profitable. If you are a salesman—or have a friend who is a salesman—it costs nothing to investigate and may result in BIGGER earnings and BIGGER opportunities.

1—We are not "hard up" for good salesmen; because 90% of our salesmen remain with the Company year in and year out. Less than 10% of our sales force leaves each year—a remarkably low "turn over" in salesmen.
2—But Addressograph sales are increasing by leaps and bounds. More and more business men are asking HOW an Addressograph will help them SELL and SAVE more. So our present highly successful salesmen are unable to take care of ALL their inquiries and sales opportunities. Therefore, we will have a limited number of openings AUGUST 1st for unusually high-grade men.
3—Reply by letter ONLY.
4—Age limits 23 to 35 years.
5—High School education — preferably College.
6—Preference will be given to men WHO HAVE ALREADY made a success of CREATIVE selling—such as office devices or systems, securities, life insurance, etc., rather than those who have been selling COMMODITIES on a salary basis or those men who have NOT had selling experience.
7—Let your letter demonstrate your selling ability — because Addressograph salesmen must be able to write CONVINCING selling letters.
8—Enclose latest photograph and specify fully age, education, selling experience, former employers and preference as to city or territory you would care to work in.

"BIG BILL" MAY DELIVER FACTION TO LA FOLLETTE

Radical Also Happy Over Labor's Dilemma.

BY DONALD EWING.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Two results of a national analysis of the political situation tonight give joy and jubilance to the La Follette party leaders.

These chieftains of the independent movement to make the radical Wisconsin senate firebrand the next President of the United States are not at all reticent concerning the conclusions they have reached within the last two or three days.

The first cause for encouragement is the confident belief that in the Republican factional split in Illinois and in the Democratic interparty warfare in New York, many votes will go into the ballot boxes for Robert M. La Follette.

See "Big Bill's" Support.

In Illinois, the cohorts led by William Hale Thompson, former mayor, are expected to throw their influence to the independent ticket.

The second reason for "progressive" elation is based on the expectation that organized labor—some 5,000,000 votes—may be directed toward support of the La Follette brand of "progressivism." Samuel Gompers, the independent leaders say, cannot be expected to counsel allegiance to either the Coolidge or Davis "conservatism," and there is nowhere else for labor to go except into the insurgent camp.

The final decision as to organized labor's attitude is expected when the American Federation of Labor executive council meets next Friday at Atlantic City.

Hope Dawns in Illinois.

From the collapse of Republican harmony in Illinois, La Follette draws exceedings hope, Representative Nelson [Rep., Wis.], La Follette campaign manager, said he had been assured "by close political friends" of former Mayor Thompson that the Thompson faction would espouse the Badger politician's cause.

"There has been no word from Thompson himself, and I do not wish to appear to be quoting him," said Nelson, "but it is just about certain we will have the support of the Thompson group. They are progressive, and their views are about the same as ours. It is only natural they should support us."

Welcome Hylan in Governorship Race.

The report that Mayor Hylan of New York may run for governor of his state, thus intensifying the split between the Al Smith Democrats and the Hearst Democrats, was cause for elation among all the La Follette chiefs.

Their consensus was that if Hylan runs he will have the full support of the groups supporting La Follette, though the La Follette national committee itself would not actually issue a statement of indorsement.

Oswald Garrison Villard of New York, who was here to see Senator La Follette, said he believed Hylan is "dickering for La Follette support," and that, in substance, he would get it.

Hope for Hearst Support.

The "independents" also have been hoping for formal support from William Randolph Hearst. He is Hylan's backer, and they believe with Hylan in the field Hearst would openly espouse La Follette.

While explaining that the La Follette policy is not to make public formal alliances with any state candidate, the Wisconsin senator's advisers think that at least with liaison between Hylan and La Follette they would force Hearst to come their way and deal a death blow to Davis' chances in New York state.

A switch of organized labor's support to La Follette will mean nothing to Coolidge, for the Republicans never count on labor votes. But to Davis it will mean much, particularly in the industrial sections east of the Mississippi. In such important states as Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York where victory counts so much in the electoral college, he would be immeasurably weakened, though La Follette probably would not gain sufficient strength to outstrip Coolidge.

May Denounce Big Parties.

The executive council is not expected to come out with a formal statement holding up La Follette as a panacea for all labor ills, though some of its members will advocate that extreme. Gompers, however, is strongly opposed to labor permanently affiliating itself with any candidate or party. His plan is expected to be to issue a statement denouncing Davis and Coolidge, and declaring that La Follete, while not perfect, comes closer to general agreement with labor's principles than any other candidate.

This, in effect, would be just as good for La Follette as a blanket indorsement. Even if the senator's name were not mentioned, the purpose would be served, for denunciation of Davis would be ample to swing organized labor from him. Naturally it would turn to La Follette.

La Follette Camp Courts Gompers.

Gompers for weeks has been ill in New York, spending part of the time in a hospital. Lately he has been gathering his strength for the Atlantic City meeting, in the meantime holding conferences with his chieftains in his bedroom.

There he has received envoys from the La Follette camp and gone over with them in detail the stand of La Follette on every question labor is interested in. At the same time, envoys from the American Federation of Labor have had frequent conferences with the senator here.

None will speak officially, but all are satisfied that, while there will be considerable fighting in the meeting over the form of indorsement, the final result will be unmistakable recommendations to the workers that they cannot support a Democrat like Davis, and, since they wouldn't support Coolidge and Dawes anyhow, they should swing to La Follette.

Dodges Party Affiliation.

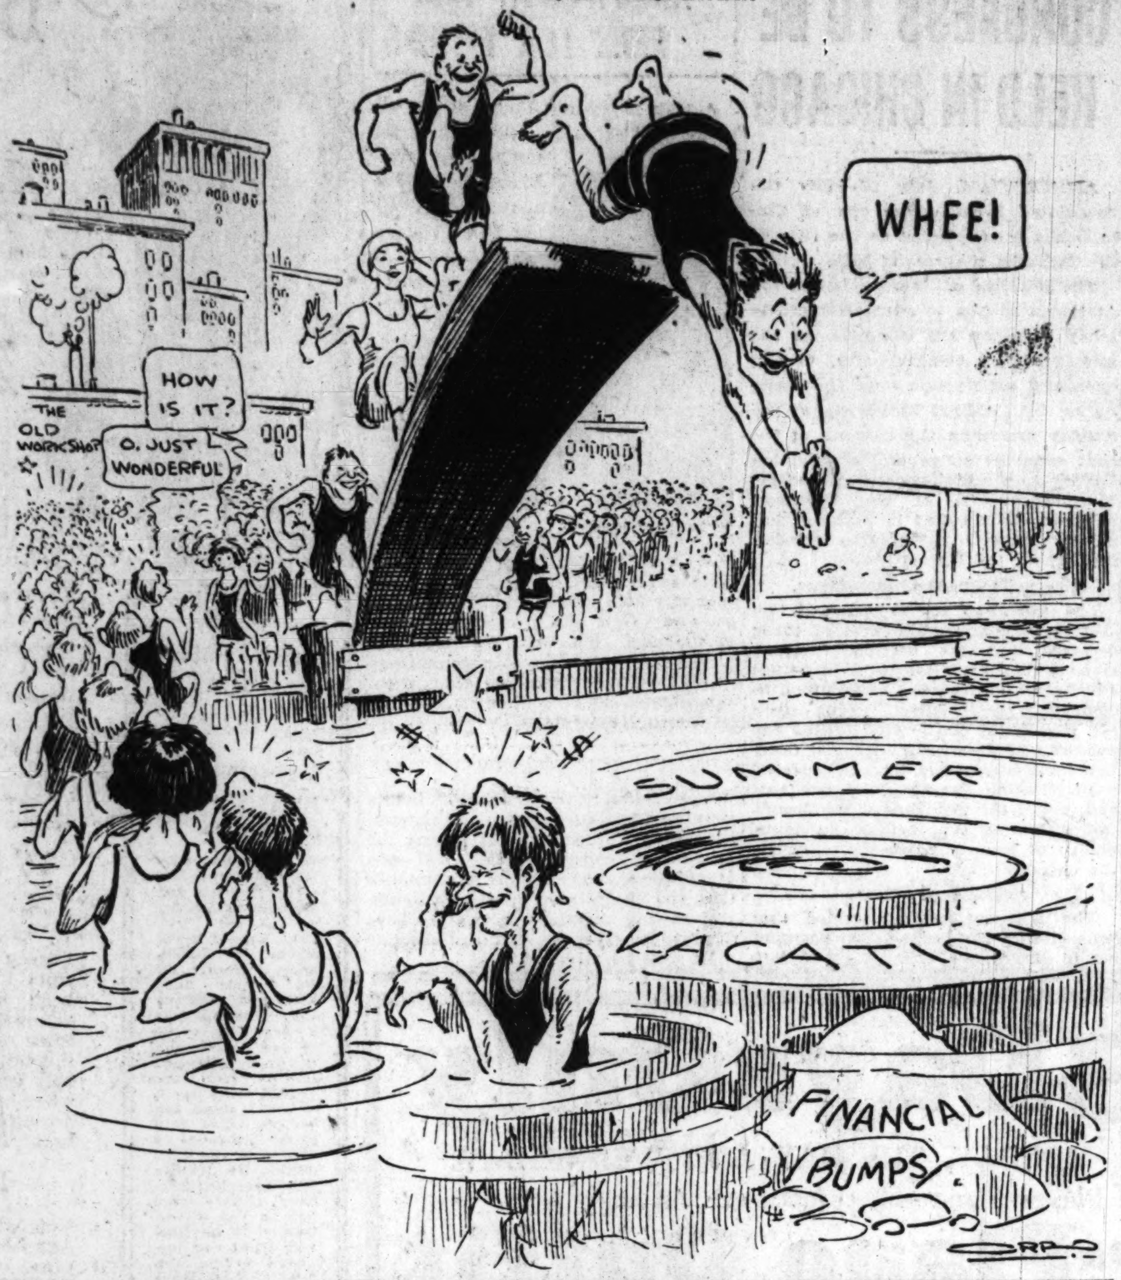
Gompers, however, is not likely to let his council run away with a blanket approval of everything La Follette. There are many reasons for this.

First is the unalterable opposition of Gompers to having organized labor definitely attached to any party—even a labor party—because political parties must have many principles in which labor has no interest. Labor should always be nonpolitical, he feels.

Another reason is that he and La Follette have some decided fundamental differences. Gompers opposes socialism. La Follette tolerates many forms of it, though not actually advancing such theories. He has the support of the Socialist party, however.

THE ANNUAL FLOP

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]



KLAN DENOUNCED AND LA FOLLETTE O. K.'D BY NEW YORK SOCIALISTS

New York, July 26.—The Ku Klux Klan was denounced by name and the La Follette-Wheeler ticket was indorsed by the State Socialist convention today. This is the first time the state Socialists have endorsed candidates outside their own party.

The denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan said:

"We denounce all attempts at dividing the people along racial and religious lines and as the most conspicuous offenders in this respect, though not the only one, we point to the Ku Klux Klan, and condemn it especially because of its pernicious campaign of intolerance and terrorism against large sections of the people, and as the handmaiden of reaction, the servant of exploiting influences and as a grave menace to the integrity of democratic institutions and orderly progress."

The formation of a labor party in which the Socialist probably will join, was forecast.

SEIZED A BOGUS CHECK PASSER.

Michael Jelenic, 22 year old clothing model living at 1937 West 22d place, was arrested yesterday on a charge of passing $1,000 worth of bogus checks.

122D ARTILLERY MEN LEAVE FOR CAMP CUSTER

Fifty officers and 700 enlisted men of the 122d field artillery of the Illinois National Guard left early yesterday morning for Camp Custer, Battle Creek, Mich., for their annual training period. The troops marched from the armory at Chicago avenue and the lake, to South Water street, at daybreak, and entrained on Michigan Central troop cars.

The guardsmen will devote their two week period to intensive training. Especial attention will be given to perfecting the combined land and air forces in offensive movements.

BOB PASSES UP ILLINOIS AND COUNTY TICKET

Fight to Be Confined to National Line.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Those in most intimate association with the La Follette campaign plans predict positively that there will be neither a "La Follette state ticket" in Illinois nor a "La Follette county ticket" in Cook county.

There may be independent candidates who will be supported by La Follette workers, they say, but the chances are that even these will not be numerous enough to take on the appearance of a local slate identified with the Wisconsin senator's presidential candidacy.

The situation is clearly demonstrated by the fact that Newton Jenkins, the young Chicago lawyer who piled up 114,239 votes for United States senator in the Republican primary, may not be a candidate in the election. The one La Follette entry considered by many as certain was Jenkins, but it is known now that the chances are he will not run. He declines to be interviewed at this time.

Prentiss Out for Senate.

Further illustrating what is likely to happen, there came from William Prentiss yesterday an announcement of his candidacy for the United States senate as a "progressive" and an admirer of Robert La Follette and Burton Wheeler. Mr. Prentiss is now living in his boyhood home, Macomb, Ill.

He said he had no assurances whatever of La Follette support, but felt that neither Charles S. Deneen nor Col. Albert A. Sprague has been a "progressive" in any sense, and this determined him to become an independent candidate.

This sort of thing is likely to happen in connection with other offices in the state and county, but the La Follette managers are inclining more and more against the danger of local complications and toward a policy of "keeping the eye on the ball"—in this case the La Follette candidacy and—chiefly—the creation of a new party.

Avoid Local Complications.

In early recognition of this tendency the La Follette people recently included in their organization plan, formally adopted at Washington, this plank:

"No nominations or indorsements of congressional, state, or local candidates by state or local conferences or committees shall be official and binding unless submitted to and approved by the joint executive committee."

And the joint executive committee is a national affair headed by Congressman John M. Nelson of Wisconsin, national La Follette manager, who has repeatedly indicated his aversion estant as an independent candidate for state's attorney that step would be construed as an anti-Catholic move. This would hurt La Follette.

toward "trying to cover too much ground" in the campaign.

The Cook county "conference for progressive political action" met and reorganized last Thursday night without mention of a county ticket. The executive committee of the Illinois "conference" met yesterday and prepared the program for today's state convention at the Auditorium hotel. State Chairman Charles J. MacGowan, who will preside this morning, said plainly there would be no discussion of a state ticket from the floor.

Rests With Executive Committee.

Technically the question whether there shall be Illinois or Cook county tickets rests with the executive committees of the two geographical units, but the veto power of the national joint executive committee holds them in check.

As a matter if simple politics there is another important angle to the situation. In the primary the joint legislative board of organized labor put through an indorsement of Gov. Len Small. The same forces, particularly the railroad brotherhoods, are the backbone of the La Follette movement in Chicago. A La Follette candidate for governor would cut into Small's strength and the labor "bosses" apparently have succeeded in stopping any such move for their own reasons.

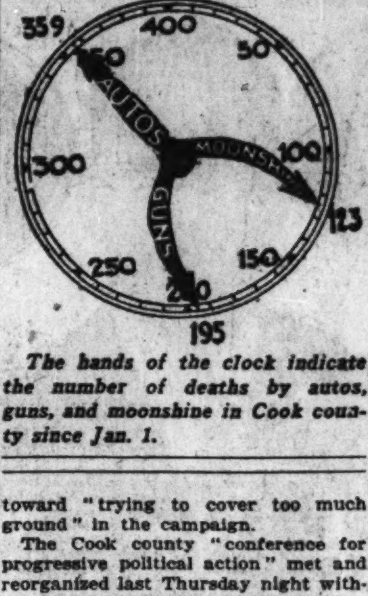
The Small people also are interested in close coöperation with Charles S. Deneen, senatorial nominee, and their influence has been thrown against demands that Jenkins or some other independent candidate be entered in the senatorial race.

Avoid Religious Complication.

There are still other interesting angles. Take the county situation. When it comes to talking of independent candidates for county offices the one first mentioned is that of state's attorney. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe and State Representative Michael L. Igoe, the two old party nominees, are both Catholics. The demand for an independent usually mentions that point and the chances for a Protestant independent.

The La Follette people believe they have assurances that the Better Government association would back such an independent. For a time they were inclined to push the project. But, exemplifying the danger resulting from local candidacies, it was pointed out that if the Cook county La Follette organization were to sponsor a Prot-

HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

Woman, Boy and Unidentified Man Killed by Automobiles

Three automobile victims were added yesterday to the county's motor death toll, which since Jan. 1 totals 359. An aged woman, an unidentified man, and a boy were the victims.

MRS. ANNA BRADY.
(Speed victim.)

As she was crossing Clark street at Germania place, Mrs. Anna Brady, 69 years old, a widow, living at 160 Carl street, was struck by a taxicab driven by E. P. Pospishel, 346 Crescent place. She died an hour later.

Struck by Car and Dragged.

The unidentified man, about 30 years old, was found dead at Halsted and 167th streets. His body was torn and broken, and evidently, according to Lieut. Harry Goldstine of the county highway police, had been struck by a speeding automobile and then dragged.

The boy was William Kurus, 11 years old, of 4351 Honoré street. His injuries were received at Honoré and 43d streets. Anton Martin, 4432 South Wood street, who was driving his automobile past the crossing at the time, was questioned by the police though he denied the boy had been struck by his car.

To Count Vehicles.

Boy Scouts and members of the Chicago Motor club will aid the county highway survey engineers next Wednesday in making a count of all vehicles passing twenty-five selected stations along streets and roads in the county.

Results will be used as a check against figures obtained by field parties in daily work. It is planned to establish the county's need for the building of new and wider roads to care for the greatly increased press of traffic.

Wife of Doctor-Author Files Separation Suit

Los Angeles, Cal., July 26.—[United Press.]—Dr. Edward F. Huntington Williams, nationally known alienist and author, was surprised at 1:45 a. m. camping in a cozy cañon with Miss Cora Young, also a writer, according to suit for separate maintenance filed today by Mrs. Beatrice M. Williams. Dr. Williams was formerly associate professor of pathology at the University of Iowa.

"Most Bonehead Burglar" Snapshots Self Into Jail

Redlands, Cal., July 26.—[Special.]—Geronimo Espinosa is in jail here as "the world's most bonehead burglar." Two nights ago he ransacked the home of A. Hinkle, carting off everything not nailed down, including a camera with half a roll of films shot. Geronimo shot the rest, took them to a drug store to be developed, and when the prints were viewed today, the developer had the 'cops waiting for him.

C'MON, REGULAR FELLERS! YOU'VE GOTTA SEE THIS

Come on out to the ball game today!

It will be at the Cubs' park.

It will be for the benefit of the city's poor kids.

It will be a cracking good game.

A good show will precede it.

Would you give a dollar to send some poor kid to the country for a vacation? Would you give a dollar to help some poor mother who needs ice?

Well, then, come on out to the ball game.

Attractions? Just Lookit!

A long list of TRIBUNE "notables" will be there. Society will attend. A band will play. Beautiful girls will sell score cards. The game will be a great battle.

Here's what you'll see:

Richard Henry Little, conductor of the Line o' Type or Two, with Vangie, R. H. L.'s contribution gobbling goat.

Sidney Smith, creator of Andy Gump.

Harvey Woodruff, conductor of The Wake of the News.

Carey Orr and Gaar Williams, cartoonists of fame.

Carl Ed, creator of Harold Teen.

Frank Willard, who draws Moon Mullins.

The Ilg Electric Ventilating company's band.

Beautiful girls from Artists and Models.

Mel-O-D., R. H. L.'s star contributor.

Societie 40 and 8.

The Algonquin Indians.

THE TRIBUNE team.

What better roster of entertainers could you find anywhere? What more could you ask for $1?

Worthy Cause? You Bet.

Back of the whole affair is a story of charity that should move you all to attendance. Camp Algonquin furnishes hundreds of the city's poor kids with a real vacation in the summer. Kids who play on the hot pavements of the city and who know but little of trees and grass and the open air go out there and eat the good food, sleep in the country air, and grow healthy.

THE TRIBUNE free ice fund provides free ice tickets to the poor mothers of the tenements. Ice saves babies' lives.

These two funds need money. That is the reason for this afternoon's benefit show.

The general admission to the grand stand will be $1. Boxes are selling at $10 each. Children under 12 years old can attend the show for 25 cents.

Take the Children!

Take the children. Go to the game. You could not find a better way to spend the afternoon and you'll be doing something for the poor children of the city. Every dollar you pay in at the box office will bring a smile to some little dirty faced tenement tot's eyes, and that should be pay enough. But in addition to the charity work you'll be doing, you'll have an afternoon of good fun.

The festivities will start shortly after 2 o'clock. The ball game is called for 3 p. m. The Algonquin Indians are good ball players. THE TRIBUNE team is an aggregation of winners.

Don't forget. It's for the benefit of Chicago's poor kids.

Everybody up!!

TRIBUNE STARS TO SHINE

Will Help Benefit

1925 EUCHARIST CONGRESS TO BE HELD IN CHICAGO

AMSTERDAM, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The city of Chicago has been selected as the seat of the eucharist congress of 1925.

The selection of Chicago caused the American section to adopt resolutions today thanking the congress for the selection of an American city. It also expressed satisfaction over the designation by Cardinal Mundelein of the Sunday preceding the opening of the next congress as general communion Sunday in the archdiocese of Chicago. The coöperation of the American hierarchy was asked in making that Sunday general communion Sunday throughout the United States.

Urges Frequent Communions.

The American section adopted two other resolutions. The first of these declared that the section, "having given special attention to the spiritual advantages of frequent communion in combating materialism, urges upon the pastors of the United States the necessity of preaching eucharist devotion more intensively than hitherto as a preparation for the next congress and invites the members of the American hierarchy to consider the advisability of issuing pastorals to obtain the end desired."

Scarcity of Priests.

The last resolution asserted that "considering the fact, clearly brought out in discussions, that an obstacle to the promotion of frequent communions exists in the United States and Canada because of the scarcity of priests for confession, especially in rural districts, the section strongly recommends that the clergy give special attention to fostering vocations among the boys of their parishes so that the obstacle may soon be removed."

GIVES PARTY FOR ALGONQUIN AND FREE ICE FUNDS

MRS. ALBERT ANIS.

A mah jongg and bridge party will be given Wednesday afternoon in the Drake by Mrs. Albert Anis, 1434 Lunt avenue. Four hundred women have been invited and the proceeds of the party will be turned over to the Camp Algonquin and THE TRIBUNE free ice funds. Prizes for the afternoon's play have been donated and refreshments will be served.

The Camp Algonquin fund provides free vacations each summer for hundreds of poor city kids who wouldn't otherwise get away from the heat and the dirt of the city. The free ice fund furnishes free ice tickets to poor mothers of the poor districts, so that their babies' milk can be kept cool and sweet on the scorching days.

Atlantic City Bathing Beauty Contest and NATIONAL BEAUTY TOURNAMENT

Chicago's Most Beautiful Girl Is She a Blond or Brunette?

All Chicago is wondering who will be the winning beauty to represent Miss "Chicago" in the Great National Beauty Tournament and Pageant at Atlantic City Sept. 2d.

There are no restrictions, no money to pay—every girl who considers herself eligible may enter the contest by simply having a photo taken in bathing costume at our studio. Not necessary to be a swimmer. Pride in physical perfection is a characteristic every woman should have and capitalize. Winners in previous contests have become famous movie stars because of their beauty.

To Enter Contest Just Have Photo Taken

To become a contestant in this National Beauty Tournament you must be White, from 16 to 35 years of age and never have been married. Simply cut out the strip alongside and take it with your bathing costume to the studio of Gibson, Sykes & Fowler, 32 So. Wabash Ave. Your name will be entered and you will be notified when to appear before the judges who are distinguished and unprejudiced experts on beauty.

If You Are the Winner

You will be given a Free Round Trip to Atlantic City, there to appear as Miss "Chicago" in the GREAT BATHING BEAUTY PAGEANT with other beauties from all over the country and compete for the "Golden MERMAID," valued at $5,000.00, and a chance to become Miss "AMERICA," the most beautiful girl in the land. And besides, you will be given a whole week at this famous resort with a chaperon at the best hotel—ALL EXPENSES PAID, and PLENTY OF PIN MONEY. DON'T fail to cut the strip and go today for your photo. Studio open all day—the rest we will take care of. For the convenience of those attending the TRIANON we have established a studio there where entries can be made.

The Trianon Management is convinced that, because of her beauty, some Chicago girl will win the high honor of being Miss "America." If you are not eligible yourself, show this to some friend. Help Chicago to win this great National Honor by suggesting to your friends that they enter the contest.

VAN SWERINGENS STAGE COLOSSAL RAILWAY MERGER

Four Lines Are Involved in Cleveland Deal.

Cleveland, O., July 26.—The Sunday News-Leader tomorrow will say:

"The Van Sweringen railroad merger is next door to an accomplished fact. It is, in fact, accomplished. What remains to be done is detail.

ORRIS P. VAN SWERINGEN.

"Four systems, Nickel Plate, Chesapeake and Ohio, including the Hocking Valley; Erie and Pere Marquette, operating over 11,000 miles of line and with total balance sheet footings of upwards oof $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000, will within a few weeks be brought under a unified control with Cleveland headquarters.

"Put into the picture also Cleveland's new $77,000,000 Union station and terminal, for O. P. Van Sweringen says he expects to see the steel going up on the central section of depot on the public square within a few weeks.

Who Is the New Wizard?

"Who is the O. P. Van Sweringen who swings billion dollar railroad systems and builds $77,000,000 terminals? The whole country is asking the question.

MANTIS J. VAN SWERINGEN.

"Here in Cleveland we take the Van Sweringen brothers, Orris P. and Mantis J., for granted.

"They gave us Shaker Heights, finest large residential area in the United States; they gave us rapid transit to the heights; a $77,000,000 railroad terminal, and threw in $1,500,000,000 worth of railroad properties that now confess their home is Cleveland.

"In financial circles they do not hesitate to link the name of Van Sweringen with those of Hill of the great northwest and Harriman of the southwest. J. R. Nutt, president of the Union Trust Company of Cleveland, says:

"'In less than five years O. P. Van Sweringen will be generally recognized as the country's leading railroad operator.'

Only a "Youngster" now.

"Whether the Van Sweringen name will be a greater name in railroad history than Hill or Harriman is still in the future. O. P. Van Sweringen is young—forty-six—and just beginning. M. J. is forty-four. Both were born in Wooster, Ohio.

"The first Van Sweringen railroad purchase was the Nickel Plate in 1916, then doing the unprofitable freight hauls of the New York Central to leave the main four to six track system clear for the big money.

"The next Van Sweringen purchase was two more similar links strung out in the territory around Lake Erie—The Clover Leaf and Lake Erie and Western. These were welded into the Nickel Plate system.

Buys a Real Railroad.

"His next was a real railroad—the Chesapeake and Ohio, carrying control of the Hocking Valley, both notable among the coal carrying systems of central territory east of the Mississippi.

"Pere Marquette and Erie are another story. O. P. Van Sweringen has acknowledged ownership of upwards of 100,000 shares of Pere Marquette, and the gossip of the financial district here is that it is around 150,000 shares.

"On Erie no Van Sweringen statements have appeared but the statements in the financial district are positive and authoritative. It is in the Van Sweringen merger."

WINNING THE "MINNOW RACE"

MLLE. CHAMBRUN TO WED RUSPOLI IN PARIS AUG. 27

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 26.—Mlle. De Chambrun, daughter of Marquis de Chambrun, and Don Edmondo Ruspoli, son of Prince di Poggi Sausa Ruspoli, are to be married in Paris on Aug. 27. Mrs. Bellamy Storer, "Dear Maria," widow of the former ambassador to Austria-Hungary, grandmother of the bride, has arrived here for the wedding.

The Storer will, probated in Cincinnati a year ago, provided that the bride inherit half the estate.

The Italian prince was born in New York in 1895 and is the third son of Prince Ruspoli, who recently became Italian ambassador to Belgium.

600 U. S. ADMEN INVESTIGATE ADS ON JOYS OF PARIS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 26.—Six hundred American advertising men reached Paris today to be guests of their French conferees for three days. The party was greeted at Calais by a representative of the French government and a response was made by Frederick S. Hilly of Joliet.

Tomorrow the delegation will make a pilgrimage to the tomb of the unknown poilu, and later will be entertained in Versailles gardens. President Doumergue will receive the delegates in Elysees palace on Monday.

Among those in the party are H. J. Buchey, president of the Chicago Advertising club, and W. E. Donahue, advertising manager of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The French publishers, headed by Senator Paul Dupuy, whose wife is an American, are acting as hosts.

BROTHERHOODS FIRM IN RAIL BOARD DEFY

Federal court action against ninety general chairmen of the railroad engineers' and firemen's union, it is predicted, will be requested tomorrow by the United States rail labor board as a means of enforcing compliance with subpœnas issued for the chairmen by the board in a wage hearing.

Though Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the board indicated on Friday that he would be willing to accept the chairmen's testimony should they decide to comply with the subpœnas when the roads' representatives have completed presentation of their side of the case, there appeared little likelihood today that the brotherhood chiefs would avail themselves of such an opportunity.

YOU may be one of a great many people who look to us to tell them what to do about buying furniture. The questions are: "Is this a good time to buy? Or shall we wait until later, with the hope that prices will be lower?"

The business prophets differ; one says: "General conditions will soon improve"; which means a general stiffening of prices. Another says: "Things will get worse instead of better; prices are all too high."

So far as furniture is concerned we find none of the factories overstocked as they were a few years ago. We can't buy our kind of goods now "for a song," as we could then.

We believe the bottom has been touched; and that now is a very good time for furniture buyers. And if you come to our store we believe you will see very clearly that this is a very good place for furniture buying.

We have, as usual, a great stock of very fine, Scholle-quality furniture. With the exception of a very few items, all the goods are newly arrived for the specific purpose of this sale. The few items of goods on hand are not old; we keep our stock new and fresh all the time by our method of every-day specials.

Our entire stock of rugs is included in our sale. You'll find the values represented there really exceptional. Our absolute guarantee of satisfaction to you holds good there as well as in every other department.

You may buy for future delivery, if you wish; the goods will be kept for you until you want them delivered. And you have always our guaranty of satisfaction or money back.

Here Are Some of the Best Things

In most cases there is only one of the articles listed here; we cannot get duplicates and frequently the first sales of the day are on these articles. It's a case of first come first served. Please don't blame us or feel disappointed if the article you were interested in has been sold when you call. We know of no way to avoid this chance of disappointment.

LA FOLLETTE AND THE WEST.

Wheeler of Montana stepped out of the Democratic party to join La Follette and take second place on his ticket. Ladd, Republican, of North Dakota, is for the independent candidate. Brookhart of Iowa says that he will maintain a nominal republicanism, but that means little. His sympathies are with La Follette. Shipstead and Johnson, already in an independent party of their own, will give Minnesota to La Follette if they can.

The area in which La Follette is strongest is the section which touches the frontier, the border or the desert. The frequency with which the frontier organizes against the east amounts almost to a rule of development. Money and control are in the east. The struggle is in the west.

When the frontier was in the Appalachians the grievance was that the mother colonies and, later, mother states did not protect the outposts. The Quaker government of Pennsylvania exposed the western Pennsylvanians to massacre. The western North Carolinians, embittered by the indifference of the home government to their hardships and perils, formed the state of Franklin.

The whisky rebellion was a protest of trans-mountain grain growers against what they regarded as the ruin of their market. They could get corn to the seaboard in liquid concentration as whisky, but they could not haul it in bulk. They thought the excise tax was an eastern outrage against the western grain grower.

Burr's conspiracy was based on Kentucky's fear that the east would prevent the river settlements from gaining the mouth of the Mississippi and the markets opened there. Tennessee thought the east was pro-Indian and anti-pioneer, unwilling that the axman should clear a fertile tract and willing that the Creeks and Cherokees should kill him.

The east surrendered Texas in getting Florida, and part of the west, which under Jackson would have taken Florida by force, was furious at the relinquishment of the Texas claims.

As the frontier has extended there has gone with it the conviction that the east is its enemy. Jackson found the enemy localized in Nicholas Biddle and the United States bank. Today the east-west boundary appears to be the Mississippi and Wisconsin rivers, and Wheeler, Ladd, Johnson, Shipstead, Brookhart, etc., now find the enemy focused in Wall street, the railroads, the Federal Reserve bank.

From time to time the convictions of the west are organized in granger movements, in populism, in free silver, and soft money. The attack is on the investment holding seaboard. As a western senator said: "The railroads are owned in the east. Let the eastern senators defend them."

In part the indictment of the east is a true bill. It has retarded western development. It is now opposed to the western waterways. That goes far back. The British lords of trade and plantations did not want the colonists to go into the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. The Indian fur trade was wanted out here. The colonists were wanted where British commerce could reach them. Later the eastern states had little sympathy for the instinct of the valley pioneers to send their produce down to New Orleans.

The east objected to the apportionment of public lands in the west. The pioneer is not a conservationist. He wants the resources in the lands he enters and opens. He hates the forest. He believes in the use of what he finds. His ambitions are for the present. He is a hard worker and frequently he believes that there is no adequate compensation for his labor. He can be persuaded that institutions are malignly directed against him. He can be convinced that laws retard him and could be made to help him in some fashion in which they cannot.

The east has an indifferent idea of the west. It is an old political idea that the newer settlements should be ruled by the older and that it need not be done intelligently or sympathetically.

We have seen that happen in the Republican party. It did when the organization sat undisturbed in the Chicago Coliseum, unmoved by the Roosevelt storm, bossed the convention, nominated Taft and then carried only two states in the election.

It happened again when Mr. Hughes, wholly out of touch with the western people, contrived to lose California and Kansas and, at the election, losing the former state at least by sheer lack of comprehension and by indifference to local issues which the people thought paramount.

So long as the east gives the west active indications of its opposition there will be organizations of protest along sectional lines and, unfortunately, it is the seeming destiny of the protest to centralize in radicalism.

There is some of La Follette's program with which THE TRIBUNE is in sympathy. It is a small part, to be sure, just enough to frame the regret that the west has no intelligent leadership. Historically we can understand the urge towards folly. It is inherent in western discontent and it is the yeast which sends common sense spilling over the pot.

In the past the western revolts have from time to time extracted necessary concessions from the seaboard. At other times they have only hurt the general prosperity. Let us hope that the present revolt will prove to be one of the first kind.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Republican doctrine and policy on the subject of relations with Europe may be taken from the following assertions of the platform adopted at Cleveland:

"The Republican party reaffirms its stand for agreement among the nations to prevent war and preserve peace. As an important step in this direction we indorse the permanent court of international justice and favor the adherence of the United States to the tribunal as recommended by President Coolidge.

"This government has definitely refused membership in the league of nations and to assume any obligations under the covenant of the league On this we stand.

"While we are unwilling to enter into political commitments which would involve us in the conflict of European policies, it should be the purpose and high privilege of the United States to continue to coöperate with other nations in humanitarian efforts in accordance with our cherished traditions.

"The basic principles of our foreign policy must be independence, without indifference to the rights and necessities of others, and coöperation without entangling alliances."

Turning to the utterances of the head of the party and its candidate for the presidency, who, if reëlected, will put the policies of the party into practice as opportunity is offered or may be made, we would refer especially to Mr. Coolidge's speech of April 27 at the convention of the Associated Press. In that speech, among other things, he said: "Our country refused to adhere to the covenant of the league of nations with a decisive rejection which I regard as final."

So much for the league of nations; but on the other hand the President pointed with approval to the Washington conference and to President Harding's recommendations of adherence to the international court. Expanding his ideas of what may be done by us, while retaining our political independence, he said:

"I do not claim to be able to announce any formula that will guarantee the peace of the world. There are certain definite things, however, that I believe can be done, which certainly ought to be tried, that might relieve the people of the earth of much of the burden of military armament and diminish the probability of military operations. I believe that among these are frequent international conferences suited to particular needs." He spoke approvingly of the Dawes report and of the participation of private American capital in the loan proposed therein.

Finally we would emphasize President Coolidge's closing remarks:

"Governments can do much for the betterment of the world. They are the instruments through which humanity acts in international relations. Because they cannot do everything they must not neglect to do what they can. But the final establishment of peace, the complete maintenance of good will toward men, will be found only in the righteousness of the people of the earth. Wars will cease when they will that they shall cease. Peace will reign when they will that it shall reign."

In other words, Mr. Coolidge reasserts the traditional policy of the United States against permanent political entanglements. He opposes general commitments. He proposes to sign no blank checks. But, just as our traditional policy against permanent political commitments has not opposed our proper participation in world affairs wherever that participation had definite limits and concrete objects, so Mr. Coolidge favors a continued interest in international conditions and such specific aid as the particular circumstances would justify. As Mr. Hughes said to the American Bar association a year ago, "Coöperation is not dictation and it is not partisanship." The American position, for which Mr. Coolidge and the Republican party stand, is "one of independence, not isolation."

In the Democratic platform plank we have a declaration that "war is a relic of barbarism" and a demand for "a strict and sweeping reduction of armaments by land and sea," and "until international agreements to this end have been made we advocate an army and navy adequate to our national safety." Specifically the platform recommends that "our government should secure a joint agreement with all nations for world disarmament and also for a referendum on war, except in cases of actual or threatened attack." Also, "the Democratic party pledges all its energies to the outlawing of the whole war system," and thus we arrive at reference to the league.

"Under Democratic leadership a practical plan was devised, under which fifty-four nations are now operating and which has for its fundamental purpose the free coöperation of all nations in the work of peace." Then follows the assertion that the United States under four years of Republican administration has had no foreign policy and has suffered impairment of self-respect at home and injury to our prestige abroad, and that this administration has "curtailed our foreign markets and ruined our agricultural prices." As it is of "supreme importance to civilization and to mankind that America be placed and kept on the right side of the greatest moral question of all time, the Democratic party renews its declaration of confidence in the ideal of world peace, the league of nations and the world court of justice as together constituting the supreme effort of the statesmanship and religious conviction of our time to organize the world for peace."

A specific proposal follows: "There is no substitute for the league of nations as an agency working for peace," etc., but "it is desirable, wise, and necessary to lift this question out of the party politics, and to that end take the sense of the American people at a referendum election, advisory to the government, to be held officially under act of congress, free from all other questions and candidacies, after ample time for full consideration and discussion throughout the country, upon the question, in substance, as follows:

"Shall the United States become a member of the league of nations, upon such reservations or amendments to the covenant of the league as the President and the senate of the United States may agree upon?"

If an affirmative vote is cast upon this straw vote the Democratic party will immediately "carry out such mandate."

The plank was frankly a straddle. The convention had refused the plea of Mr. Baker, speaking as the political and spiritual legatee of the Wilson policies, to make an entrance into the league of nations alike a Democratic promise and threat. The Wilsonites were placated by kind words, while the adherents of America's traditional foreign policy were reassured that the Democratic party would not act without a further mandate from the people.

When a platform is opaque it is customary to look to the candidate for elucidation. Fortunately Mr. Davis' record on the league issue is clarity itself.

The Democratic candidate for the presidency is an out and out leaguist. As the New York Times has remarked: "Mr. John W. Davis has never wavered in his sturdy and serene advocacy of the league of nations."

The Democratic party, under the leadership of Davis, stands for our entry into the league of nations, including the guaranty of European boundaries and the collection of reparations by force of arms.

Senator La Follette's position on the league is known to be adverse, but the Wisconsin planks at Cleveland include proposals for the prohibition of declarations of war except after popular referendum or in case of actual invasion, for abolition of conscription, for drastic reduction of the army and navy, for treaties outlawing war, and for revision of the treaty of Versailles, which last clause can only be effected by going to war with England, France, Italy, and all the new states of Europe.

This melange of pacifism, alienism, and intended war is of interest as illustrating the company progressives are expected to keep under the La Follette banner. It is a warning to level headed Americans who find the Republican and Democratic organizations too conservative and who would like to see a reassertion of the progressivism of 1912, that the La Follette prescription contains highly explosive ingredients.

The practical choice for voters concerned for our international interests is between the Republican and Democratic declarations. If the voter wants us to head into the permanent commitments of the league of nations, sign the treaty of Versailles, and follow a course of policy tending steadily to more and more involvement in European politics, he will vote for Mr. Davis. If he approves the traditional policy of the republic, which, following the advice of both Washington and Jefferson, has kept us free from permanent alliances or entanglements in the political affairs of Europe, he will vote for Mr. Coolidge.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The August gate is ajar and the diminished year is ahead. Already so many gates have clicked behind, the gates of yesterdays locked on fields through which a pleasant path is remembered but lost. It went by violets and flowering thorn, by lilacs and iris, by columbine and honeysuckle. There are red berries where there were petals, fruit where there were blossoms. The sun is earlier to bed and his candles shine further south in the woods. The shadows of night wings are earlier over the woods. The August gate is golden. The path goes into golden rod and wild sunflowers, with bergamot and snap dragons. The wood thrush sings his last song in the early candle light. The locust chorus is back in the oaks. The autumn phlox will give a glory to the garden. Sweet clover and nicotiana perfume the cooler breezes of the night. The new ticket is for the shortening day.

ARE MEN AT THE MARNE?

Recently a satirist in comic pictures presented the idea of male golfers driven by rain from the course to the clubhouse and unable to find ash trays because the women bridge players had them all at the tables. The men can try to laugh that off.

No. 2 of the rules governing the women's department of the Racquet club of Chicago is "Men are not permitted to enter the women's department." No man willingly would go in. If they got him there he would have to be hog tied and dragged.

A few desperate golf clubs have fired all women off the premises for all time. Presumably they have an aggressive element of hard boiled postmeridian bachelors who rallied the gang before the men were chased out of the locker room and the showers.

We have heard of one old style male, a stalwart product of the European tradition that woman's place is in the wheat field, the cow yard, and the kitchen, who explained to the police: "She bob-bed her hair, I knocked her down; she bob-bed her hair." A notable achievement but too isolated to be of much value. We have also the Cicero incident, but the other males instantly betrayed their militant brothers.

We know of one woman who made her husband sit in the barber shop while she had her neck shaved. The poor worm had no chance, but he was not yet reconciled to his humiliation.

Women do not take their husbands to Paris nowadays. The ham sandwich has a different meaning. The American man has become a drudge. His job is to make the money. Occasionally he is chained in the back of the opera box. At other times he is glassy eyed at dinner parties.

We do not suppose the average man has had a decent game of poker in five years. He has not had a talk with a self-respecting bartender in the same time. Such of his institutions as are not completely gone have been feminized. If he goes to a prize fight he has talcum powder sprinkled on him every half hour by the makeup process in the next seat.

He has been run ragged by the feminine invasion of his cloisters. He lost the smoking car on the elevated and where he still retains smoking cars he finds the women edging into them.

Man is essentially a shy creature. He has an instinct for solitude and also for the simplicity of life, for the emotional calm and serenity of associating with other males. Woman is essentially a creature without compunctions. She is unscrupulously aggressive. The reticences and reserves which control the male are not in her. She knows the timidities of the male and works them. The girl who held up a youth by threatening to scream if he did not hand over his roll was amusing herself, but she was not unusual.

In their timidity the men betray themselves shamelessly. If a lady pots one of them with a pearl handled, silver mounted .22, twelve Iscariots in a jury box will formally find that it served him right. He ought not to have annoyed the lady by living.

The men are at the Marne, leaderless, and no taxicab army is in sight to save them. They may make a stand, but we doubt it. They have been beaten back, run over, and chased up the hillsides. Their remnants are dusty, fagged, unnerved, and with no fight in them. The matriarchy is just about established.

There may arise a long haired male breed which will restore the patriarchal system. If help is coming it must come quickly or all is lost.

"I'm sorry," said the lawyer apologetically, "but I'm afraid there'll be a good deal of publicity connected with your divorce."

"Huh!" was the grim retort of the celebrated actress. "There'd better be!"—Legion Weekly.

STAMPING OUT MALARIA.

SOME ten years ago the Alabama Power company built a dam across the Coosa river and in that way converted a lot of low ground and a river into a lake. It was something new in that section and the power company knew little about making the surrounding country safe for democracy. Soon they found themselves defending a million dollars of lawsuits filed by nearby farmers who claimed the lake had caused them to become infected with malaria.

With the coöperation of the state and federal authorities they began a study of methods of improving water and of protecting impounded water, so that malaria would not result. When the company planned to build another dam across another stream, thereby impounding water to make another lake, they decided to avoid having a batch of lawsuits. They decided to have no malaria in the labor camps used in building the lake and to leave the surrounding country healthier than they found it. To do this, they complied with all the sanitary requirements of the federal water power act and went several steps further.

All the 153 miles of lake bank was cleared of vegetation below the now water level, around the water edge and for a short distance back from the water. Every man who applied for work in a labor camp was examined. If he had had chills within six weeks he was rejected. If he had had malaria parasites in his blood, or had an enlarged spleen, he was not accepted until he was completely cured. Every employé working in the basin was required to take fifteen grains of quinine a night for two nights a week. The houses were well located, well built and well screened. Not a case of malaria developed among the employés.

Every family living on a farm in the valley was enrolled in the free benefit plan. If any inhabitant developed chills he was visited by the company doctor and given thirty grains of quinine a day for three days to break the chills. After that, he took ten grains of quinine each night for sixty nights.

In all this valley there was but one serious outbreak of malaria and that was in an isolated family who failed to comply with the rules. As soon as the physicians heard of this sickness they sent ambulances out and brought the entire family into the hospital, where they were treated until well. This saved all the family except one baby and one young girl.

The larger bodies of water were stocked with mosquito eating fish. The smaller bodies were kept oiled. The large lake covered ninety square miles. Every pond and every stream near it were taken care of. The people who lived within a mile or two of the lake and its tributaries were watched. The general health of the inhabitants was never so good before. No suits for damages for malaria have been started. None could be sustained. This experience shows what can be done.

A similar plan, carried out by the railroads for their bridge crews, construction camps and track men would lessen the malaria in the country at large. There is much federal, state and county road building. Similar plans would protect the crews in these labor camps and, protecting them, would protect the country at large.

Cases of malaria and malaria carriers menace everybody round about.

SERVICE OF HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Chicago, July 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The Fuse and Manufacturing company, located at 2717 Greenview avenue, has been emitting certain gases and fumes which enter our home in this locality, polluting the atmosphere. It is my understanding that the health department ordered them to purchase a condenser, which they did, but from all evidences they are not being used. Can not something be done about this nuisance? C. E.

You are advised that on May 19, 1924, upon receipt of a previous complaint, this matter was investigated by an inspector of the bureau of sanitation and the following notice served on the above mentioned firm:

"Abate nuisance of odors and fumes to adjacent premises from ovens in south end of building."

As the result of our notice a condenser was installed in the factory to carry off the odors and fumes. Upon a re-inspection being made it was revealed that the odors were still quite noticeable and upon taking the subject up with the engineer of the plant he stated that an additional condenser was being installed, the work on which would be completed in about two weeks.

HERMAN N. BUNDESEN,
Commissioner of Health.

If you mean that she did not sign the lease, the general answer is that she is not liable. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 27, 1864.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Crook was attacked by a rebel force at Winchester and driven by way of Martinsburg to Williamsport, Md. His old command had been taken from him by Gen. Hunter and he had only militia troops. Gen. Hunter holds Harper's Ferry and there are no apprehensions of the enemy's crossing the Potomac, despite sensational reports of a movement up the Shenandoah valley. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad has been cut in two places.

NEW YORK.—Special Washington dispatches say a rebel force of several thousand under Gen. Early is advancing on Harper's Ferry.

SPRINGFIELD.—Those noted Copperhead congressmen, Tony Knapp, Jim Robinson, and Jack Eden are in the city in conference with old John Moore. It is supposed they are arranging a gubernatorial nomination.

DES MOINES.—There is great excitement at Council Bluffs and the southwestern part of the state arising from fear of an invasion by guerrilla bandits who have been infesting Missouri.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Sherman at Atlanta reports that operations are progressing favorably. The rebels have not recovered from the disastrous defeat at the battle of Peachtree Creek, where they lost 6,500.

CHICAGO.—Brig. Gen. Turchin, on a brief furlough for his health, is stopping at the Tremont house with his lady.

CHICAGO.—A banquet was given at the Tremont house for the returned batteries A and B, Chicago light artillery. Toasts were responded to by I. N. Arnold, Col. Sweet, Thomas Hoyne, E. A. Storrs, J. B. Clarkson, Dr. Brock McVicker, John Wentworth, and Senator L. Trumbull.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 27, 1899.

LIBERTYVILLE, Ill.—The bodies of Mrs. Christian Voss and Mrs. Charles Krueger, a daughter of Mrs. Voss, will be exhumed to satisfy a suspicion that Mrs. Krueger did not kill her mother and herself after shooting and slightly wounding her husband. On July 16 Krueger, one of Lake county's wealthiest farmers, reported he had been shot by his wife. Investigation at the home revealed the bodies of the two women.

FORT DE FRANCE, Island of Martinique.—Gen. Ulysses Heureaux, president of the Dominican republic, was assassinated at Moca, Santo Domingo, by Ramon Caceros. Gen. Wenceslao Figuereom, vice president, assumed charge of affairs.

PARIS.—Gen. De Megrier, acknowledged to be one of the best of the French generals, was degraded as the result of the discovery of a plot for a revolt in the army in the event of the Dreyfus case going against the army. All France is shocked at the popular general's fall.

WASHINGTON.—President and Mrs. McKinley have gone to Lake Champlain for a vacation, the length of which will depend on the condition of Mrs. McKinley's health.

WHITEHALL, Ill—At a convention of 5,000 river farmers resolutions were adopted asking President McKinley and Gov. Tanner to act to prevent the turning of water into the Chicago drainage canal.

CHICAGO.—The board of education adopted resolutions forbidding board officials to agree not to prosecute W. A. S. Graham, defaulting clerk of the board, in the event he pays the amount he is short in his accounts.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 27, 1914.

VIENNA.—The Servian minister has been given his passports and this is deemed equivalent to a declaration of war. According to a Semlin rumor the first encounter between Austria and Servia has occurred near Semendria, on the Danube. Trere is an unconfirmed rumor that Austrian troops have crossed the Danube and occupied Belgrade, which was evacuated by the Sevians.

PARIS.—Five hundred Slav students burned an Austrian flag before the Austrian embassy here. "Be Prepared!" is the cry in Paris.

ST. PETERSBURG.—Germany again was notified that invasion of Servia by Austria would be opposed by Russia. It can be stated authoritatively that five army corps have been ordered to the frontier.

LONDON.—England, in fear of an early clash, has ordered its warships not to disperse for maneuvers but to concentrate at Portland.

WASHINGTON.—In the event of war in Europe the United States will remain neutral. President Wilson will ask protection for American subjects.

LONDON.—The Servian answer to Austria's ultimatum was an acceptance of almost all the important demands, except that Austrian officials shall participate in the investigation and fix responsibility for anti-Austrian propaganda. Austria rejected the reply.

CHICAGO.—A strike of electrical workers of the sanitary district is imperiling the city's street lights.

FROM BISHOP WELCH.

Chicago, July 19.—In an editorial of today you quote with emphasis some statements made by Prof. Williams of California on the Japanese problem, saying that California has a right to be heard.

You are undoubtedly aware that on this matter no one man can speak for California. The differences of view within that state itself are as wide as the distance between San Francisco and New York! Without questioning either the ability or the sincerity of those who are known as anti-Japanese, it should be recognized that many prominent in business, in church, in education, hold as sincerely and as tenaciously to quite other views.

But with regard to Prof. Williams' criticism of the Japanese in California for maintaining associations which are really mutual benefit societies, a criticism which you apparently indorse, it is pertinent to ask at least one question: Are you in favor of admitting the Japanese who are already within this country to the full rights and responsibilities of citizenship? If so, advocate frankly the amendment of our laws to that effect! But if not, then where is the fairness if they are to be debarred from identifying their lives and fortunes fully with the body of our people, of criticizing them for seeking in another fashion to protect and further their own legitimate interests? Is not either side of this logical fence more comfortable than a straddle? HERBERT WELCH.

HE LIKES IT AS IT IS.

Chicago, July 18.—Being a regular reader of your great paper, I want to commend you on the editorials you write regarding Robert M. La Follette and the wild communistic theories of government that he is advocating in his campaign for President. His ideas are not practical. How can the farmer get high prices for his wheat, and the miller who makes the flour, the trainman who mans the train which brings the finished product to market, the clerk in the grocery who sells the flour to us poor consumers all get high wages, and yet said poor consumer enjoy the blessings of cheap bread?

It just cannot be done. It may sound fine to hear some demagogue promise things like the above, while he snorts about and threatens to make the rich man poorer and the poor man richer, but those kind of promises can never be fulfilled, and no one knows it better than this same demagogue.

I am one of the "poor, $2,000 a year postal employés," and yet I do not believe in a theory of government that will confiscate the wealth of the rich man and give it to us needy wage earners. I believe that God himself intended that some men should have more of this world's goods than others, and it is not possible for any form of manmade laws to change this divine intention. J. B. CHANCEY.

"LA FOLLETTE, BUNK, BUNK, BUNK."

Chicago, July 21.—It is a wonder to me why newspapers encourage such men as La Follette. Certainly that is all he wants, and all he expects—it pleases his vanity. Just as certain, he expects to gain nothing but the free advertising. Why, then, give him free advertising?

Our Wisconsin friend reminds me of the small boy who doesn't expect to catch any fish, who throws rocks in the water, muddies it up and prevents others from catching any.

The more one views politicians the more one is impressed with the selfishness which actuates the motives behind them. Bunk, bunk, bunk—all of it. My suggestion to you is merely to print and broadcast what La Follette and his clan say and do—refrain from comment yourselves. Bunk, bunk, bunk—we who vote will smother them as Johnson was smothered when he tried to bunk, bunk, bunk the people with his unjust and unfair criticism of Coolidge. H. H. HARRISON.

AND THERE IS WACKER DRIVE.

Chicago, July 21.—Your editorial, "The old names are best," is o. k. I wonder at times who was the simp that started to name Michigan avenue Boul Mich. To me the words Boul Mich. sound about as appropriate as S[illegible] Swash. I also would like to know what is grand about Grand avenue, formerly called Indiana street. I have been from one end of Grand avenue to the other and have failed to find anything grand about it. What is true of Grand avenue (I mean the name) is equally true of many other streets. J. E. Chicago, July 20.—For fifteen years I've been a passenger, and will honestly say that never have I met ONE just like him. His courteous reply to every question makes one pick up his head and take notice, and not once have I seen it to fail. I am a firm believer in giving praise where praise is due, and Mr. 3990 is the recipient.

I wish I would in the near future have the pleasure of meeting another one like him. J. J. K.

WOMAN AND GIRL SHE TARRED IN JAIL; MEN FREED

Wife Now Blames Mob; No Release in Sight.

Frederick, Md., July 26.—[United Press.]—"The men made me do it. O, I'm so sorry I beat and tarred and feathered her."

In a remarkable statement made today in the Frederick county jail, Mrs. Mary Shank disclaimed responsibility for the brutal treatment accorded little Dorothy Grandon on a dark Maryland road Thursday night.

The whole complexion of the outrage which has shocked the community has been changed by Mrs. Shank's story. She declared herself as much a victim as the beaten girl.

Both Women in Jail.

Both women are in jail. Mrs. Shank held in $2,000 bond, and Miss Grandon in $500 bonds as a material witness. The girl may have to stay in jail until the September grand jury meets.

The men, seventeen of whom were arrested as participants in the attack upon the homeless little wanderer, have furnished their bond and gone free.

Mrs. Shank believes she and Dorothy were both the victims of the mob. She said she no longer thinks that the Grandon girl was intimate with her husband, Lloyd Shank, and that the mob had used that as an excuse to make her attack Dorothy.

Fears She Will be Tarred.

Now she is afraid that she will be tarred and feathered herself when she gets out of jail. She said that the night of the attack one of the men whispered she "would get a dose of the same thing if she squealed." That was the reason why she took all the blame.

Mrs. Shank has given up hope of release until September. She said she thought her husband's family were her friends but that they have turned their backs on her.

Meantime, the Grandon girl says she will sue the men in the mob for heavy damages. All are wealthy farmers or the sons of rich farm owners and she stands excellent chances of collecting, local lawyers say.

Story of the Attack.

"I'm sorry I had to tar and feather her," the wife declared. "But the mob told me if I didn't I would get the same dose. After I saw Dorothy and my husband in a field I went after her to ask her why she was infatuated with him. Lloyd walked away.

"I went home and told my sister-in-law and my husband's father. They told me I ought to get even. My sister-in-law gavve me a club. I said I would rather beat her with my hands, but my father-in-law told me not to hurt my hands on her.

"On my way I met Harry Leatherman, Dale Morgan and a boy named Haupt. Leatherman said he'd go get the mob.

Mob on the Scene.

"I waited about a half hour and five or six machines drove up filled with men. I got on the running board of the last machine and when we caught up with Dorothy my brother-in-law handed me a club and told me to use it.

"I struck Dorothy three times, once on the head, twice on the right shoulder. Then I put the club down and told her that we would fight it out as woman to woman.

"After I had torn off her clothing, somebody handed me the tar and feathers."

FRANCE HONORS J. D. ROCKEFELLER FOR AID TO ART

PARIS, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—King Alfonso of Spain and John D. Rockefeller today were elected foreign associate members of the Academy of Fine Arts as distinguished patrons.

The Spanish monarch replaced the late Joaquim Sorolla y Bastida, the Spanish painter, while Mr. Rockefeller was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of James Shannon of London.

Mr. Rockefeller's election was prompted by the fact that he has been the donor of 18,000,000 francs to French causes.

GLOBE FLYERS TO STOP HERE UPON HOP TO COAST

Radiogram Says Heroes of Air Are Coming.

America's around the world aviators will visit Chicago.

This announcement was received yesterday by Charles Dickinson, president of the Aero Club of Illinois, in a radiogram from Maj. Gen. Patrick, chief of air service.

"I am pleased to inform you," the message read, "that the squadron of globe circling aviators will stop in Chicago on their way to the Pacific coast and the field that sent them away on their journey."

To Land in Maywood.

The message also stated that the United States air mail service field in Maywood would be used for the landing.

The time of the flyers' visit cannot be announced definitely at present, but it is expected that they will come here about Sept. 10. The Yankee birdmen are now prepared for their hop into the north from England. They are expected to arrive in New York City about Sept. 1.

At Keyport, N. J., the pontoons will be removed from the planes and landing gear will be restored.

May Stop at Cleveland.

Then the ships will proceed westward in easy stages, stopping at Cleveland, probably, on the journey to Chicago.

They will be welcomed here by a reception committee of commercial aviators, business men, and aeronautical fans.

Credit for bringing the promise of the aviators' visit is given to Mr. Dickinson by local flying experts. It was he who first thought of the plan and sent the telegram that assured the visit to the chief of air service.

FIRST IN ICELAND

BY LIEUT. H. J. BROWN JR.
[Chairman World Flight Committee.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—The end of July and the United States army airmen who left Seattle in April on a trip round the world are in Brough, England, impatiently waiting with new motored airplanes for their flight across the Atlantic and the home stretch.

Brough marks the entrance of the flight into the sixth, last and possibly the most hazardous, division of the route.

The airplanes making the round-the-world flight will be the first ever to have flown over either Iceland or Greeland.

Navy Protecting Route.

The navy is placing every facility at the disposal of the world fliers to insure their safe passage across the stormy waters of the north Atlantic. Admiral Magruder, on board his flagship, the U. S. cruiser Richmond, is speeding to Rosyth, Edinburgh, Scotland, where he will be met by other vessels of the navy to supervise and carry out the plan of coöperation.

The first flight over water in the sixth division is from Kirkwall in the Orkney islands to Hofn, Hornafiord, Iceland, a distance of 535 miles over the north Atlantic ocean and will be patrolled by four navy vessels.

After the flight has reached Iceland, the four vessels will immediately swing into position along the southern coast of Iceland to cover the route from Hofn, Hornafiord, to Reykjavik, the capital of Iceland, a distance of 339 miles.

Denmark Sends Ice Breaker.

When the flight is ready to leave Reykjavik for Angmagsalik, Greenland, across the stormy Danish straits the navy vessels will again be in position to cover the 500 miles of the route between those points.

At Angmagsalik, Greenland, it has been found impracticable to send any of our navy vessels into the harbor on account of the ice which remains there throughout the year. The Danish government has come to the rescue of the American expedition by providing a ship specially constructed for navigation in icebound waters. This vessel, the Gertrud Rask, is equipped with radio.

Guard Barren Greenland Coast.

The flight along the bleak, barren and uninhabited eastern coast of Greenland will be guarded by vessels of the United States navy lying off shore during the passage of the flight.

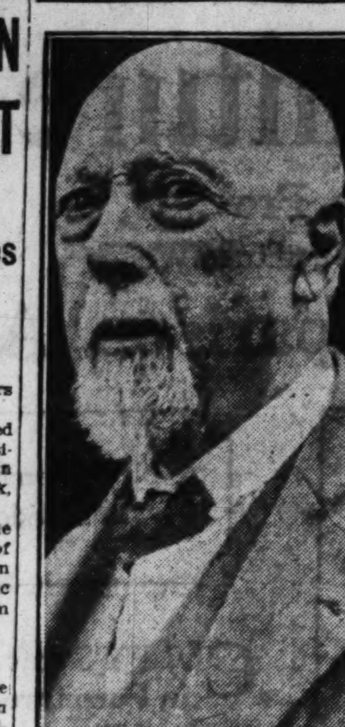
The distance between Angmagsalik and Ivigtut, Greenland, is 610 miles, and it becomes necessary on account of the high ice covered interior for the expedition to pass down the east coast of Greenland around Cape Farewell up the west coast to Ivigtut.

From Ivigtut to Indian harbor, Labrador, the first stop to be made by the American flyers on the American continent, a distance of 572 miles across the Davis straits, the Richmond and her consorts will be joined by the cruiser Milwaukee and a division of destroyers.

Flight to End in Seattle.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The army air service "has definitely decided" that the round the world flight, now approaching its last lap over the Atlantic, will end at Seattle, and not at Santa Monica, the starting point, according to advices received today from Washington, D. C.

87TH MILESTONE



W. M. HOYT.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Scores of friends and relatives called at 550 Sheridan road, Winnetka, yesterday to say howd'y to W. M. Hoyt on his eighty-seventh birthday. The pioneer wholesale grocer, who started business here back in the 50s, informed them that "for some unknown reason I have been spared to this age," and he added that he felt grateful.

"I've spent my whole life trying to help other people," Mr. Hoyt observed. "That's one reason why I retired from business twenty years before I should. I felt I had all the money I cared to make and I wanted to give the other fellow a chance."

The old resident predicted that soon this country won't be as prosperous as has been customary. Then, he said, the immigrants who have been rushing to America will pack up their dollars and return to their native lands.

C. A. Newhall, Retired Chicago Banker, Dies

Charles H. Newhall, who retired in 1916 as vice president of the First National bank of Chicago after being with that organization for thirty years, is dead at his home in Pasadena, Cal. He was 62 years old. Mr. Newhall leaves a widow, a mother, a daughter, a brother, and a sister.

Ex-Congressman Minor of Wisconsin, Dies, Aged 83

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., July 26.—Former Congressman Edward S. Minor, 83, died at his home here yesterday evening. He passed from an apparently sound sleep into death, giving only the slightest indication that death was near.

LAURI-VOLPI'S ART IN "MARTHA" BRINGS PRAISE

Ravinia Audience Crowds North Shore Pavilion.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

About four-fifths of the Martha rendition, Ravinia's week-end observances, could have been predicted in the light of past performances and present tendencies. One could have foretold without much danger of going wrong that Graziella Pareto's golden thread of a voice was expressly designed for the name part; that Ina Bourskaya could put a deft touch of comedy alongside of her mellow voice and be a first class Nancy; that Virgilio Lazzari's glorious bass and fine acting ability would make Plunket an outstanding rôle, and that Paolo Ananian knew all the traditions of the comic part of Tristan.

Lauri-Volpi Astonishes.

But that Giacomo Lauri-Volpi should appear as Lionel, and more, that he should make a great success of it, was less predictable. Here was a dramatic tenor singing a light lyric part and singing it for the first time in his life. But he did it in a way that needed no apologies either for quality of voice or inexperience.

Had it not been told beforehand that it was a first performance on any stage no one would have suspected it, for it was a performance completely at ease, with youth and fine tone, pleasant touches of impersonation, everything that is desired or demanded when this opera is to be sung.

Hasselman in Fine Form.

And so the Saturday night at Ravinia passed not only agreeably but ingratiatingly. Louis Hasselman conducted as though he considered the score to be a work of genius, which of course it is. The trick of writing such a succession of vital tunes may not be a lost art, but it is a rare one, so rare that a performance of Martha, old as the opera may be, is an unfailing delight.

INVOKES ANCIENT LAW TO WRECK OLD EYESORES

Almost forgotten ordinances, providing for the creation of a survey commission, under whose orders the fire department may wreck unhabitable, dangerous or insanitary buildings, are to be invoked by Health Commissioner Herman Bundesen to rid the city of neighborhood eyesores.

Dr. Heman Spaulding and Dr. Charles B. Ball, chiefs respectively of the health department's bureaus of medical and sanitary inspection were named by Dr. Bundesen to act with John D. Mc[illegible] of the building department in an investigation of a cluster of dilapidated shacks owned by Nathan William McChesney on South Shore drive between 72nd and 74th streets.

Members of the South Shore Protective association complained that the shacks were a menace to health.

William Lowell Putnam Dies Suddenly on Raft

Cotuit, Mass., July 26.—William Lowell Putnam of Boston, brother-in-law of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard university, died suddenly today on a raft while at the latter's summer home. He had been bathing alone.

FATHER GLENNON DIES SUDDENLY ON VACATION TRIP

THE REV. JOSEPH A. GLENNON.

The Rev. Joseph A. Glennon, pastor of the Annunciation Roman Catholic church at 1650 North Paulina street, died near Medicine Hat, Alberta, yesterday while returning to Chicago on a special train bearing 216 members of the La Salle assembly, Knights of Columbus. The party was completing a recreation trip to Alaska.

Father Glennon's body will reach Chicago tomorrow morning, at which time preparations will be made for the funeral. He had not been in good health, it was reported at the parish house last night, and the death of a sister a month ago upset him considerably.

Father Glennon had been pastor of the Annunciation church since 1910. He was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1860, educated at St. Ignatius college, Chicago, and St. Mary's, Baltimore, and ordained here in 1891 by Archbishop Feehan. Eight years ago he celebrated the silver jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood.

COMMERCE BODY INDORSES JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOLS

Establishment of junior high schools in Chicago was indorsed by the executive committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday. The committee acted on recommendations of the committee of education of the association.

In reaching their decision the committee pointed out that it has been successfully tried out in other cities, and in their opinion it is the best plan of education for the young men and women who do not expect to take many years of schooling.

A more rounded education for stepping into business was advanced as another reason for indorsement.

Hursen Startles Chicago with "Limousine-Hearse"

HERE'S another "Hursen" revolution in funeral equipment. It is the Hursen "limousine-hearse," the most beautiful vehicle of its kind in America. There is nothing like it in existence. It is the "Hursen" new and exclusive idea in hearses.

Chicagoans already recognize the fact that Hursen automobiles at Hursen funerals represent the most elegant funeral automobile equipment in this country. They also know that the charges for their use are no greater than the usual auto hire for very ordinary and even inelegant cars often seen.

So, the Hursen "limousine-hearses," especially designed by Hursen, and built especially for Hursen, were made to match the Hursen automobiles in beauty of design and simple elegance. They do away with the excess of ornament, the gloomy festoons and frippery of the usual hearses you see. Simple elegance is the highest form of respect and affection.

It proves that Hursen, as always, is first in all that pertains to funerals. One remarkable fact is that Hursen funeral prices are invariably far less than those made elsewhere, without exception. It is this policy that has built the greatest undertaking establishment in America. Call Hursen, of course!

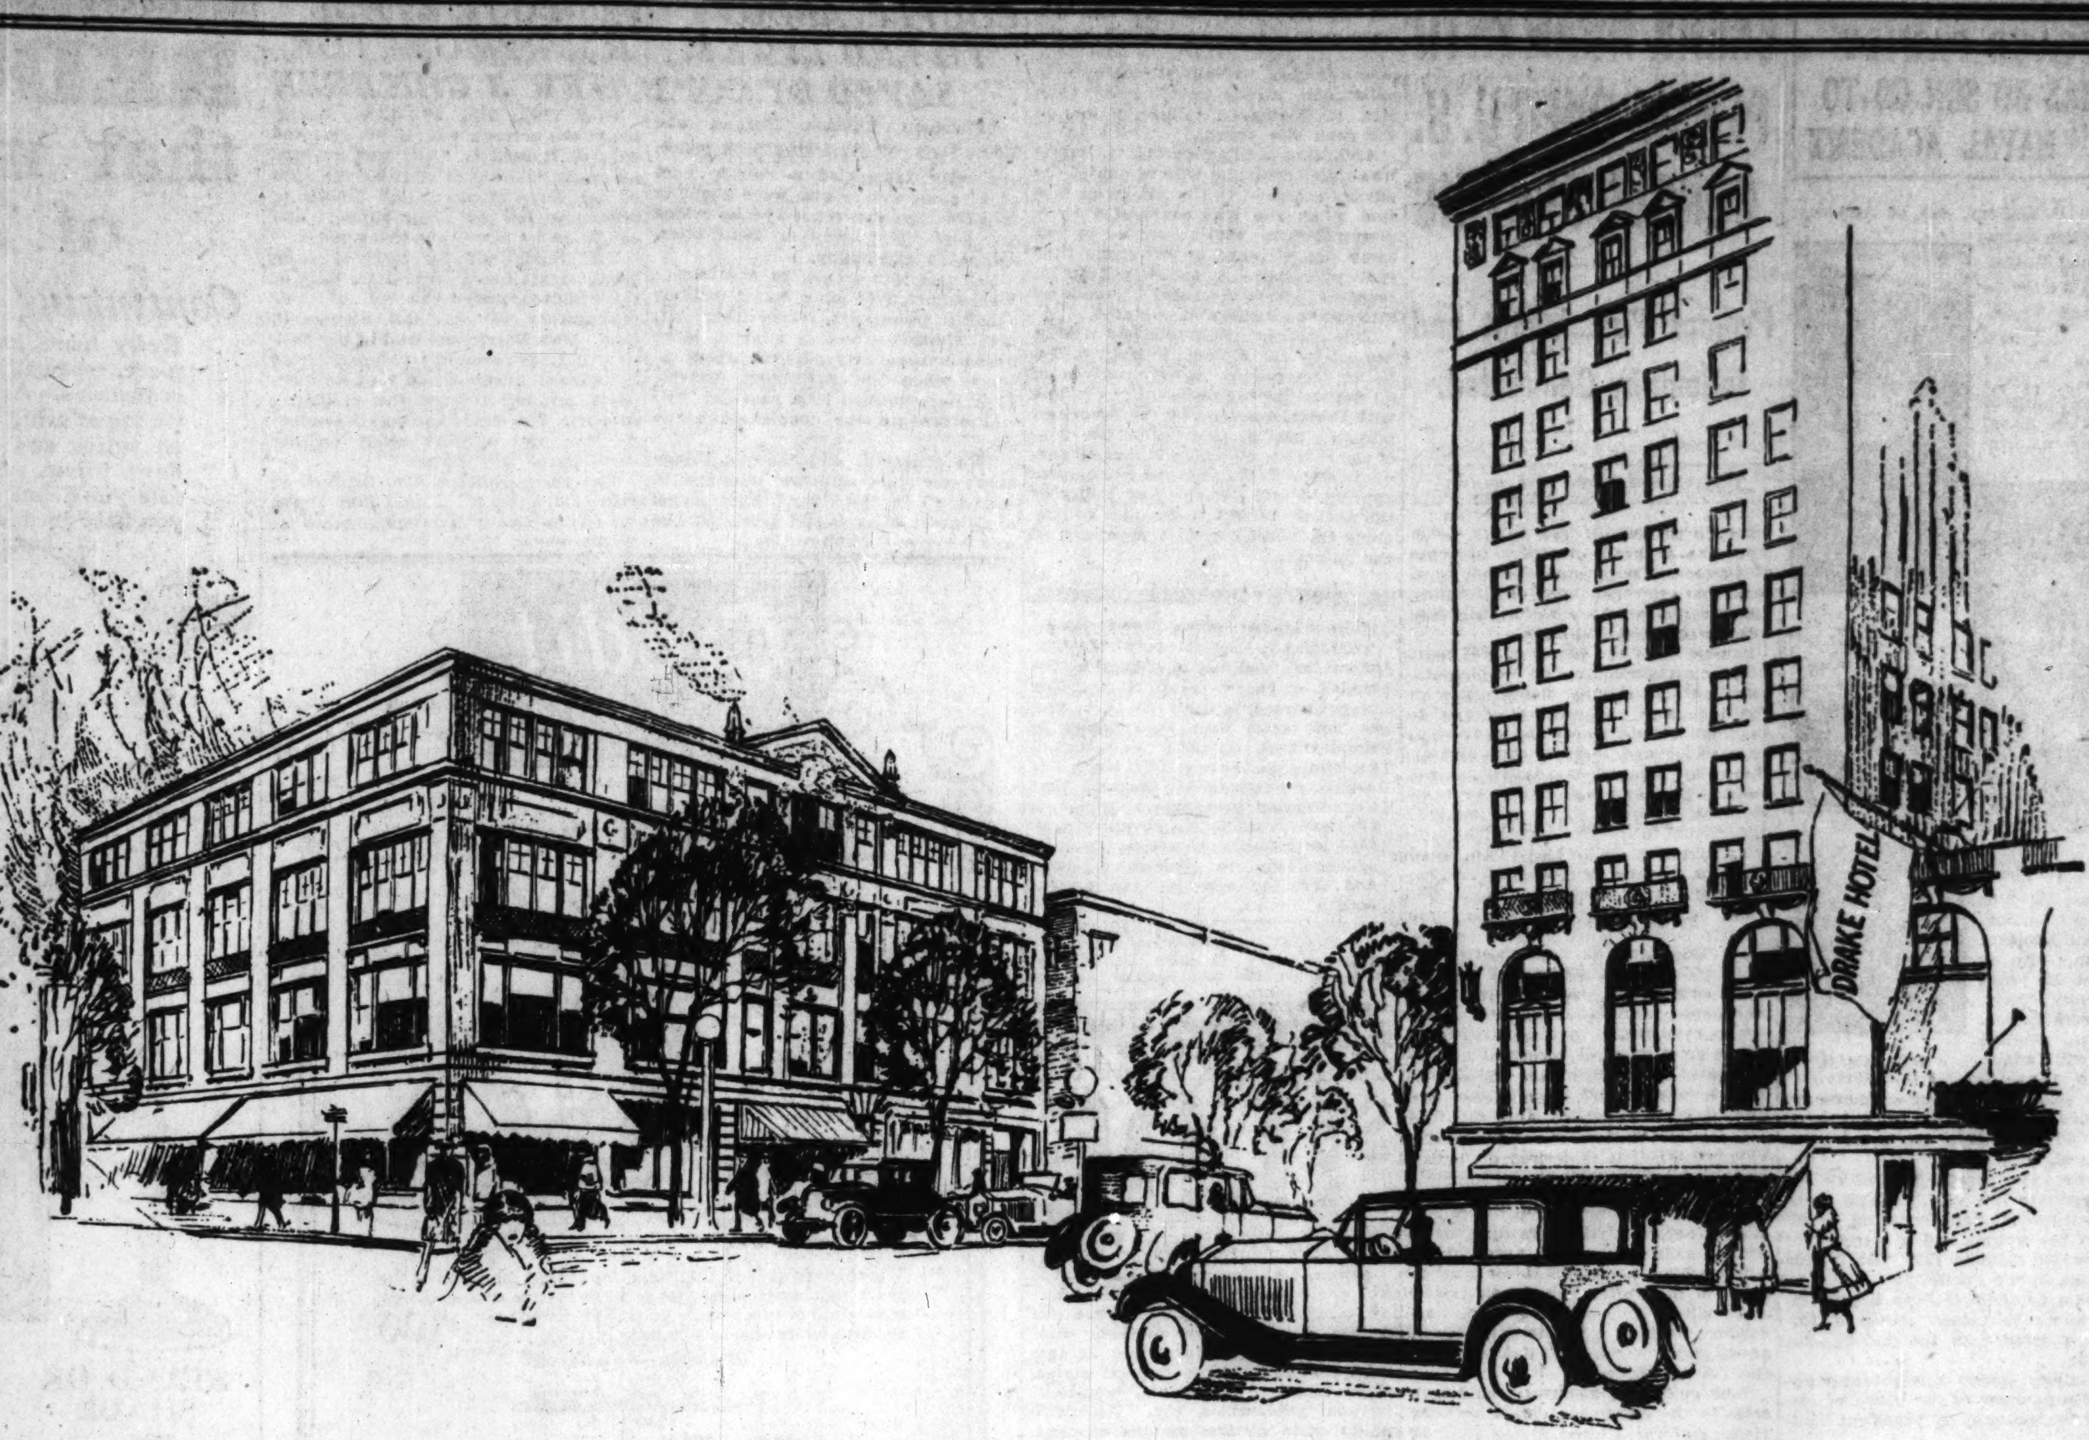
CHICAGO'S INDEPENDENT FUNERAL DIRECTOR



Owners of North Side Property

are invited to Investigate the Advantages of Our Leasing, Sales and Property Management Plan

TWO YEARS AGO the firm of Krenn & Dato opened its offices at 600 North Michigan Avenue, as exclusive agents for the Mrs. Rockefeller-McCormick properties, and gave birth to "A New Ideal in Real Estate Service".

Property valued in excess of ten millions has been sub-divided. And projects amounting to over twelve millions are now well under way on the north shore.

From a very modest beginning, the organization of Krenn & Dato has grown to a gigantic institution. The business has moved to its permanent quarters in the Rockefeller Block at 936 North Michigan Avenue—opposite the Drake Hotel.

As the organization has developed, the ideals of its founders have been carried into the broader phases of Real Estate Service. A department of Leasing, Sales and Property Management has been founded with a personnel which has long been identified, in administrative capacities, with North Side Properties. These men and women are thoroughly experienced and competent to serve property owners as Renting Agents, Property Managers and Sales Brokers.

The better North Side properties will be our specialty. And owners will gain distinct advantages from our plan of operation.

You are invited to investigate these advantages. Your letter of inquiry, or telephone call, will receive our prompt and courteous attention. Personal solicitation will be made only upon your request.

DEVER STAMPS O. K. ON SCHOOL DENTAL CLINIC

Commission to Report on Advisability.

Plans for the establishment of a municipal home nurses' training school and dental clinic for school children in the building at Monroe and Loomis streets recently surrendered by Pageant of Progress officials to the city were revived by Mayor Dever yesterday.

If a commission composed of representative business men, bankers, physicians, and dentists approves the scheme, a special message urging the appropriation necessary to complete and equip the building will be read to the city council in its first fall meeting, the mayor promised.

Had Been Abandoned.

The project, conceived during the Thompson régime, was abandoned by the present administration after a successful "taxpayer's" suit for an accounting from the Pageant corporation had halted construction of the $200,000 building which was to have housed the institution.

The half completed building and $79,000 in cash was turned over to the city. Municipal departments, crowded for space in the city hall, were then encouraged to ask diversion of the building for their purposes by an opinion from Corporation Counsel F. X. Busch. Mr. Busch held that while $100,000 will be required to complete the building for clinical and training school purposes the $79,000 received from the exposition funds is sufficient to finish it for city departmental use.

160,000 Examined.

"I am told that health department physicians examined about 160,000 school children last year," said Mayor Dever. "And that about three-fourths of that number were found to have physical defects of varying degree. The same proportion would have obtained, without doubt, had the 550,000 school children in the city been subjected to the same examination.

"If it is true that seventeen out of every 100 school children examined have defective eyesight and two-thirds of the students have defective teeth, requiring immediate attention, it is plain such an institution is needed. New York, it is said, spends between $800,000 and $1,000,000 reëducating children who fail in their classes because of physical and teeth defects.

Will Urge Creation.

"When, and if, I am convinced by a report of the commission I shall select, that a teeth, nose, and throat clinic for school children, together with a training school for home and public health nurses can be maintained by the city, absolutely divorced from politics, I shall vigorously urge its creation."

Among those suggested by Mayor Dever for membership on the commission are William R. Dawes, president of the Association of Commerce, and Dr. Frank Billings, one of the city's most prominent physicians.

BREAK NEAR WITH PERSIA OVER U. S. CONSUL SLAYING

Prompt Punishment and Indemnity Demanded.

vigorous protest in this treaty aside from the generally accepted precepts of diplomatic usage and the policy of sovereign governments of insisting upon adequate protection for their representatives and nationals.

Article II. of the treaty of 1856 says: "The ambassadors or diplomatic agents whom it may please either of the two high contracting parties to send and maintain near the other shall be received and treated, they and all those composing their missions, as the ambassadors and diplomatic agents of the most favored nations are received and treated in the two respective countries; and they shall enjoy there, in all respects, the same prerogatives and immunities."

Protection Guaranteed.

Article III. of the same treaty says: "The citizens and subjects of the two high contracting parties—travelers, merchants, manufacturers, and others—who may reside in the territory of either country shall be respected and efficiently protected by the authorities of the country and their agents and treated in all respects as the subjects and citizens of the most favored nation are treated," and article V. provides: "All suits and disputes arising in Persia between Persian subjects and citizens of the United States shall be carried before the Persian tribunal to which such matters are usually referred at the place where a consul or agent of the United States may reside, and shall be discussed and decided according to equity, in the presence of an employé of the consul or agent of the United States.

"All suits and disputes which may arise in the empire of Persia between citizens of the United States shall be referred entirely for trial and for adjudication to the consul or agent of the United States residing in the province wherein such suits and disputes may have arisen, or in the province nearest to it, who shall decide them according to the laws of the United States."

Attack on Widow Widens Breach.

The determination of the state department to take strong measures for the protection of American lives and property in Persia and for redress of the outrage against the American vice consul was strengthened today by the receipt of additional reports from Minister Kornfeld in Teheran telling of a subsequent attack last Tuesday upon Mrs. Katherine G. Imbrie, widow of the dead vice consul.

According to this report, Mrs. Imbrie was riding with the wife of one of the officers attached to the American mission when she was confronted by a young Persian, who attempted to tear away her veil and at the same time spat upon her. A native policeman, reported to have been near by, made no attempt to interfere, it is stated.

This further insult followed a joint protest by the diplomatic body in Teheran, comprising representatives of all nations having diplomatic relations with Persia, a protest by the American minister, and assurances on the part of the Persian government that all adequate steps would be taken not only to apprehend and punish those guilty of the assault on Imbrie but also to preclude the possibility of a repetition of the outrage.

"SATISFIES" DIPLOMATIC CORPS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TEHERAN, Persia, July 26.—The diplomatic corps met in council at the Turkish embassy today to consider the government's reply to their protest note sent after the murder of Robert Imbrie, American vice consul. They found the note satisfactory. The Russian representative asserted that as the Persian government seemed to be doing all possible to prevent a repetition of the outrage and to discover the culprits, the diplomatic corps could not but consider the matter closed.

COUPLE, ABOUT TO END LIVES, SAVED BY COPS

Patrolmen Thomas Horgan and Louis Daly, of the Irving park police, yesterday frustrated a suicide pact of a young couple who were about to leap from the Lawrence avenue bridge and sent them away an hour later, reconciled and happy.

The girl, Eve Siegel, 20, 4860 North Washtenaw avenue, a social worker, and her sweetheart, Harry Chatz, 21, 2347 Thomas street, a student, were found hatless and coatless about to jump when the patrolmen arrived. They were notified by a passerby who had overheard the couple make the pact.

"We quarreled and thought things didn't go right and we intended to end it all in the river," Miss Siegel explained. Miss Siegel admitted she was sorry and forgave Chatz.

FUNDS TO ETHEL BARRYMORE FOR HER 3 CHILDREN

New York, July 26.—Ethel Barrymore, the actress, who is the divorced wife of Russell G. Colt, was granted an annual allowance of $2,000 for each of her three children, and $10,000 to reimburse her for their support and education by Surrogate Foley today.

The funds will be received from $50,000 trust funds created for each of the children under the will of their grandfather, the late Col. Samuel P. Colt. She stated she was dependent for her own support solely on her earnings as an actress.

The three children are: Samuel, 15 years old; Ethel B., 12, and John Drew, 11. They live with their mother at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

WARD'S FINE BREAD

A real honest loaf

Just extra good—that's all

This new loaf of yours is just made extra good, that's all. We call it "your loaf" because we asked a number of women to pass on it first and 9 out of every 10 preferred it to all other breads.

It's just the kind of a loaf that we like to think our grandmothers used to make except that it contains more milk, extra shortening and extra sugar—it's more nourishing.

It will satisfy your children's appetites. It will make good sandwiches for lunches and picnics and delicious toast for your breakfast. And it keeps moist and fresh.

It's good—we're willing to emphasize that point.

You must know that we are really proud of it when we have given it our own name—Ward's Fine Bread.

It is made from a good old recipe of Robert Boyd Ward's—our founder—his favorite recipe. We added still more milk, extra sugar and extra shortening—the direction in which he was working.

It is our new loaf, but better than that, it is your loaf.

Try it. Then, if you'll be so kind, write us what you think of it.

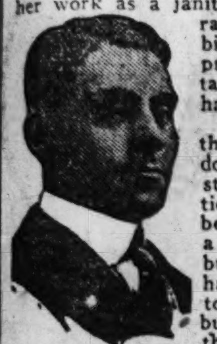
BUSY MOTHERS SEE OIL BURNER AS BIG RELIEF

Never Need Think of Heating Plant

BY MARY DORIS WIDNEY

NEW YORK, July 27.—At last, no mother has to be a fireman. A new-type oil burner "fires up" and "banks the fire" automatically.

With the passing of her rank as a non-union fireman goes much of her work as a janitress. Her dust rag and scrubbing brush have practically been taken out of her hands.



W. W. WILLIAMS

The reason for this new freedom is the high state of perfection that has been reached in a new type oil burner. Women have been slow to accept oil burners just as they were slow to learn to drive the ridiculous two-cylinder motor car of a decade ago.

Forget There Is a Furnace.

"Once installed," exlained Mr. Williams, "Oil-O-Matic is automatic from the moment it starts. By that I mean you simply set your thermostat for whatever temperature you enjoy and forget you have a heating plant.

"I remember two maiden ladies who lived together in Rockford. The furnace was always a burden to them, even though they had a man come in to care for it. After the first winter with an Oil-O-Matic one of our service men stopped to inquire how everything was. 'Why, we don't know,' one of them said; 'we have never been near it.'"

Answers Common Question.

One of the most common questions asked about this new type oil burner comes from practically every woman who thinks she would like to be rid of coal. "What happens if it should go out—will the oil keep flowing?"

This is a natural question for any mother to ask. No mother would have an oil burner in the house if it were not safe. Mr. Williams explains it very simply.

"We perfected a safety device that we call a safety thermostat. The interesting thing about this ingenious device is that it will let nothing work unless everything works. The oil must light and stay lighted when it should, or not a drop of oil can flow. We do not depend upon any sort of trip pan that catches liquid oil to shut off the oil feed."

With such a modern device as the Oil-O-Matic the old coal bin is not only destined to remain empty but is doomed to extinction. A vegetable cellar or children's playroom is already taking its place.

AUTOMATIC HEATING

Every home owner and prospective home builder should have this interesting booklet. Send for it now.

A safe automatic oil burner proved for five years

NOW women in thousands of homes know the comfort of automatic heat. So far as keeping the home warm, they have never had to raise a hand. Not a thought has been given to it.

Any Oil-O-Matic owner will tell you this.

A new era of home cleanliness has been brought about.

A happier use of the basement room. New pleasures for the children. Better laundries. Dens, gymnasiums, billiard rooms, maids' rooms—in the basement, are now becoming popular.

A new-day quiet oil burner is the reason.

When you read this, you will not deliberately buy coal again another year.

Proved for Five Years

Five years ago we perfected a new kind of oil burner. Not because others were being built. But because none we knew of was being built right.

There are four fixed laws in the successful burning of oil in the home. These laws will always penalize those who ignore them.

Our idea was to make the best use of these laws—not to get around them.

The fact that every Oil-O-Matic user is satisfied seems to indicate that natural laws are soundest.

Three Things to Look For

There are three vital requirements in an oil burner. It must be automatic. It must burn ANY kind of fuel oil without adjustment. It must be safe.

If you agree with these three points, you will agree with the thousands of people who have Oil-O-Matics.

A Finished Product

All that folks ask now is an oil burner that is past the experimental stage—a finished product. One as free from care as a common refrigerator. With no more upkeep than a phonograph. One so adaptable it will burn any kind of fuel oil without your touching it. One that keeps the inside of the boiler clean as a china plate and the upstairs comfortably warm regardless of the weather. One so efficient it runs only about 30% of the time in zero weather. Even less in mild weather. In other words, a fully automatic, reliable, clean source of heat.

That one now awaits your inspection—tested and listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories.

Consider These Facts

A complete description of the Oil-O-Matic could easily be written here and every statement true. But it would sound incredible.

Only seeing it and talking with owners will ever convince you. So look for these things:

Open the door of the furnace and you will find no part of the Oil-O-Matic inside. There's nothing to burn out or replace.

Of course there's no pilot light. None is needed. Such waste of gas cannot be tolerated in a modern oil burner.

Before You Build Get These Facts

Your new home may require a smaller and more economical heating plant with Oil-O-Matic. Our Service Department will advise you without charge.

Your heating plant may be placed in a more advantageous location.

You can save money by having a smaller basement excavation.

By eliminating the coal bin and larger furnace room you can plan better use of your basement. Many now have bright, airy playrooms, gymnasium, stag rooms, billiard rooms, maid's rooms, better laundries, etc., in place of the old-fashioned dark basement.

Our newest booklet, "AUTOMATIC HEATING" covers the subject of new homes and has valuable architectural plans for ideal, practical basements. Send the coupon now for these helpful suggestions.

Oil-O-Matic nebulizes fuel oil (finer than atomizing) into such infinitesimal particles that expensive kerosene is no longer necessary or even advised. Cheaper fuel oils give more heat.

It cost us $60,000 a year more for our motors than some engineers say is necessary. A lighter motor would stand up, they say, on 99% of installations. We spend that extra money to safeguard the remaining 1%.

Curtains stay clean longer

New Super-Safety Device

But the crowning feature of Oil-O-Matic is the exclusive safety thermostat. It's all but human.

It watches over the entire plant. If you run out of oil, it warns you by shutting off the Oil-O-Matic.

Everything about your Oil-O-Matic installation must work 100% perfectly or this ingenious device will let nothing work—not a drop of oil can flow, ignition is shut off, the motor stops.

Any good heating plant can be quickly made into a perfect heating unit with Oil-O-Matic. Steam, vapor, hot water, hot air.

These are a few of the things an inspection will make clear to you. The dealers whose names are listed on this page will demonstrate this new-day oil burner.

Pay for It as You Use It

These dealers are authorized to offer attractive terms so that you may pay for it as you use it, if you wish.

They guarantee automatic heat, and if you feel that you are not getting it, they will remove the burner, replace your grates without charge and refund the amount paid. Our guarantee to the dealer is double assurance of satisfaction.

Mail the coupon above for a copy of "Automatic Heating." We know of no booklet on oil heating that is as instructive and authoritative. Tear out the coupon now as a reminder to send for it. After you read it you will want to be one of the 8,500 who are going to rid themselves next winter of the uncertainty, dirt and drudgery of coal.

NEW RECORD SET FOR FIVE YEARS BY OIL BURNER

Dealers Pleased With Unfailing Service

That an oil burner can be made even more dependable than a high grade washing machine is proved by the five year record of the Oil-O-Matic.

"Electric washers require one service call for every 104 hours of running," said W. W. Williams. By actual test, Oil-O-Matic required only three service calls in 1,050 hours, or ten times as long. Two of these calls were for service not in the burner itself. The third was for a minor adjustment."

MILLARD MEYERS HEADS DIRECTORS OF GRAIN MERGER

Chicagoan Is Honored by 26 Million Combine.

Millard R. Myers, Chicago elevator operator, has been selected to head the directorate, announced yesterday, of the Grain Marketing company, the $26,000,000 merger organized recently with plans to control the marketing of 80 per cent of grain produced in the United States.

Those on Board.

Others on the board are:

M. D. Lincoln, Columbus, O., secretary, Ohio Farm Bureau federation.

J. W. Coverdale, Chicago, secretary of the American Farm Bureau federation, and wheat grower of Ames, Ia.

Oscar Ashworth, Mattoon, Ill., grain grower.

A. L. Middleton, Eagle Grove, Ia., farmer.

W. E. Gould, Kewanee, Ill., banker.

L. J. Tabor, Columbus, O., master of the National Grange.

Gray Silver, Chicago, grain grower of West Virginia and Illinois; Washington, D. C., representative of American Farm Bureau federation.

J. F. Reed, Gary, S. D., grain grower, vice president of American Farm Bureau federation.

C. M. Dyer, Spencer, Ia., president of Iowa Farmers' Elevator association.

O. E. Bradfute, Xenia, O., president of American Farm Bureau federation.

W. J. Brown, Thief River, Minn., president of American Wheat Growers, Inc.

Fred A. Mudge, Peru, Ill., president of Illinois Farmers' Elevator association.

Harry L. Keefe, Walthill, Neb., president U. S. Grain Growers, Inc.

$4,000,000 Is Paid In.

The merger opens activities with $4,000,000 of its capital paid in and with no outstanding indebtedness, an announcement said.

"Our concern will have an effective grain marketing organization on a truly coöperative basis," Mr. Silver, who is president of the new company, said.

Mr. Silver contended that "the activities of the farmer for the last several years have brought about a situation from both the operative and legislative standpoints which naturally resulted in an organization of this character."

"We bring to the service of the farmer the experience, talent and demonstrative ability for successful business operation," continued Mr. Silver.

"We believe our organization to be fully as efficient as any grain marketing agency in America, or as any that can be set up which is intended to serve the grower.

Everything in Open.

"Everything will be conducted in the open. We will submit our proposition to the farmer-owned grain marketing agencies for thier support with full assurance that we have ample capital and facilities as well as thorough knowledge of grain marketing locally, nationally and internationally.

"As we expect to buy and sell grain on the open market, the sound principles followed by the 5,000 farmer-owned elevators will be observed.

"The machinery of the firms we have federated will proceed without halt, despite the rapidly increasing volume of grain flowing to market. The business of the former concerns will be transferred to our organization in such manner as not to disturb the flow of the grain.

"We will do a general grain business, serving members as well as nonmembers, as is authorized under the Illinois coöperative marketing act. Rules and regulations of the various exchanges will be complied with. Recognized channels will not be disturbed, but will be utilized; and we will work as closely as possible with farmers' elevators."

Michael Jelenic, 22 years old, possesses a figure which might be envied by the gods, his employer that was, Mark Cohen, tailor, 5726 South Park avenue, asserts. Just now he cuts a figure few would envy him. He's in jail.

Jelenic, according to the police, used his taking ways to get customers of his boss to cash checks for him. They total $1,000 so far as is known, and they are worthless.

The clothing model, accompanying his employer on selling trips, is charged with operating a confidence game. After impressing the buyers with his manly figure he had little difficulty in getting them to produce specie in exchange for his bits of paper, it is charged.

FOUR NEW BUS LINES IN STATE ARE AUTHORIZED

Four new bus lines were authorized in orders issued by the Illinois commerce commission yesterday.

A certificate of convenience and necessity was issued the Joliet, Plainfield and Aurora electric line permitting operation of busses between Joliet and Aurora; the Illinois Power and Light corporation will purchase for $22,500 the facilities of the Decatur Bus company, and a grant was issued the Egyptian Transportation system to operate busses between Herrin and Johnston City. The Peoria Bus Transportation company was authorized to operate from El Paso to Farmington, through Peoria.

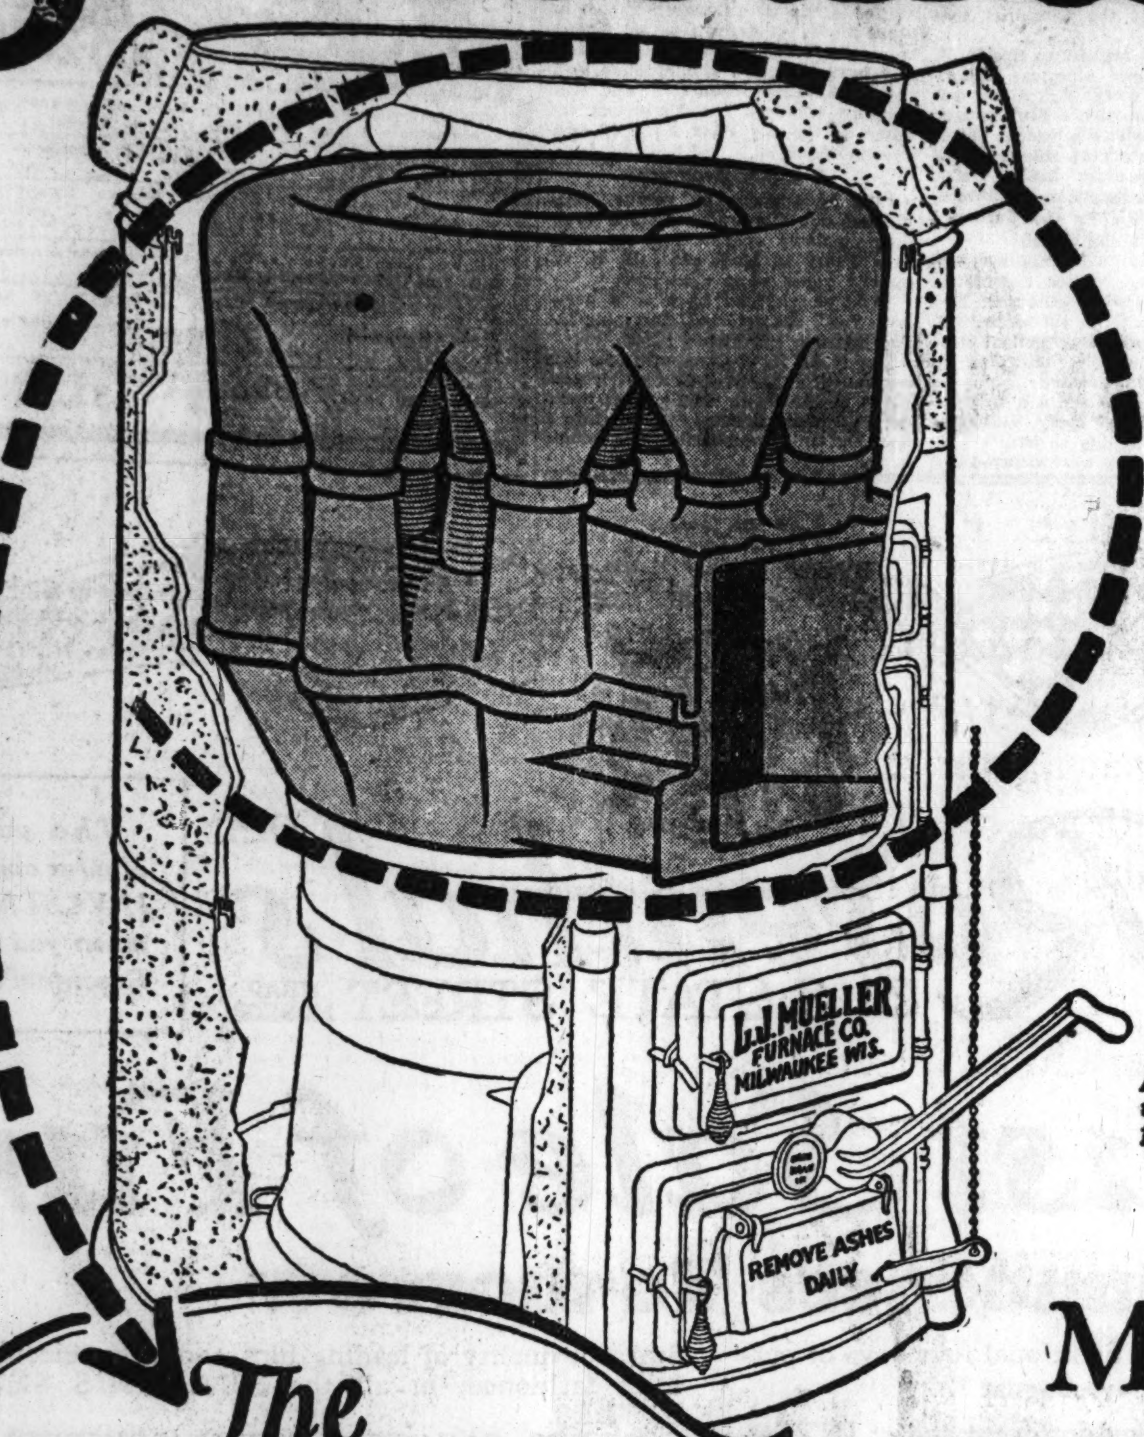
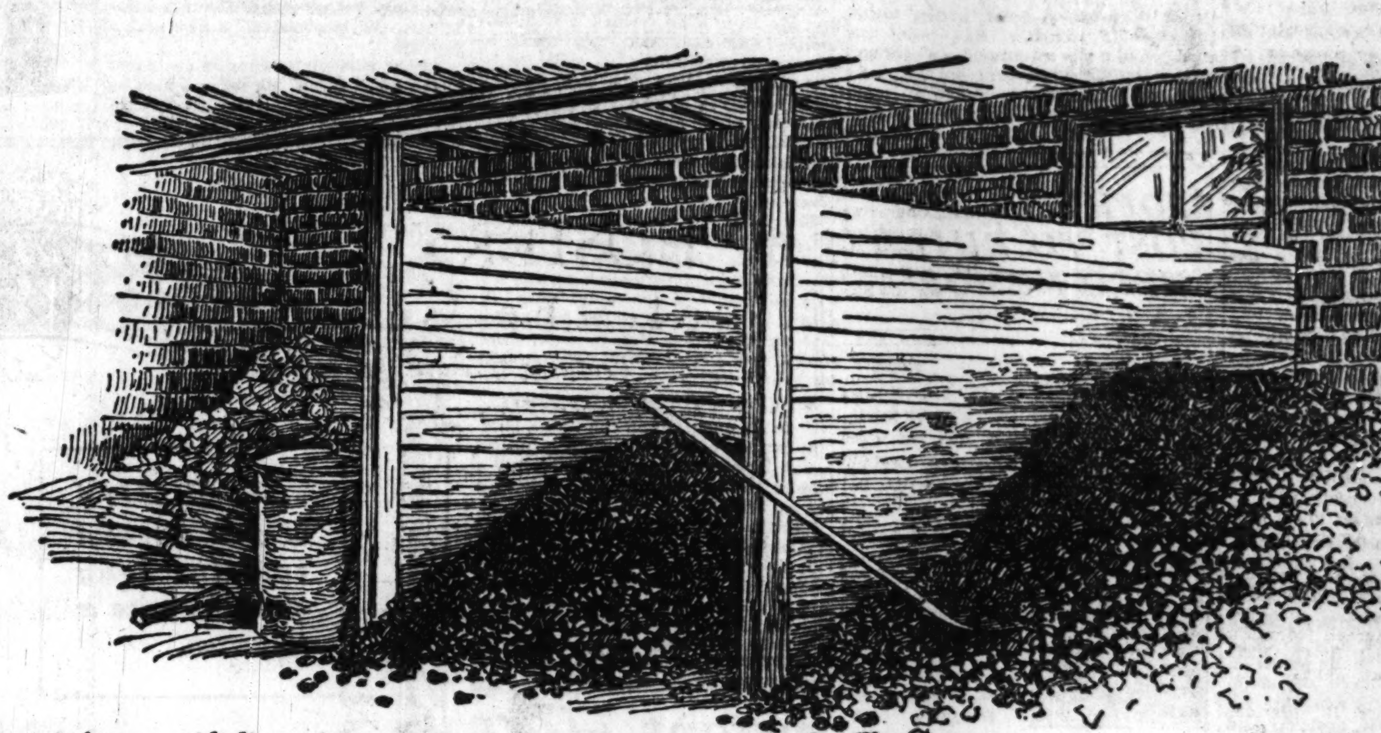
$50 Worth of Coal Saved for Next Winter

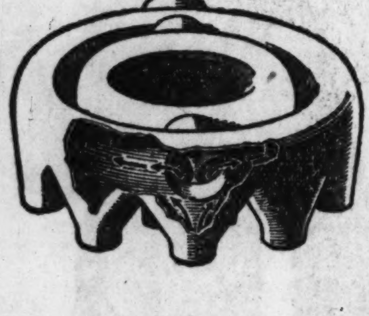


L. J. MUELLER FURNACE CO. MILWAUKEE WIS.
REMOVE ASHES DAILY



A warm air furnace with direct pipe connections to registers in every room. Burns all kinds of fuel. Especially suited to oil burner installations.

The MUELLER Zone of EXTRA Heating Capacity



Water placed in a wide, shallow pan will heat much quicker than if placed in a narrow tin cup, because the pan has more square inches of heating surface. And for the same reason the pan will heat with a more moderate fire — saves fuel!

The Mueller Double Radiator Furnace is like the wide, shallow pan in that it has more square feet of direct heating surface than any other type of moist air furnace of equal size fire pot. That is why it gives the greatest amount of heat for fuel burned.

Hot gases from firebed, passing from combustion chamber dome through twenty radiating pipes and two big, circular radiators, give up every ounce of heat value before escaping to the chimney. This means utmost fuel economy —more heat from a smaller fire.

The Actual Experience of Mr. John Jordan of Milwaukee

INTERESTING, but not unusual, is the experience of Mr. Jordan. After a year of Mueller Dependable Heat in his home he writes:

"You will, no doubt, be interested in the satisfaction our Mueller Double Radiator Furnace has given us. It was installed last summer, 1923, to replace a furnace of another make that had developed the smoking habit and acquired various other old-age ailments. We bought our Mueller furnace because we had heard so much about it—and it has turned out to be even better than we expected.

"Where we burned more than eleven tons of coal in a season with the old furnace, we used a little less than eight tons with the Mueller during this past season—and as everyone knows, the winter of 1923-24 was as cold and long as any we have had in years. We heat five rooms downstairs and one room upstairs—six large rooms in all—and keep the house very warm, between 75 and 80 degrees. In view of this, we think we did remarkably well to get through the season on less than eight tons of coal—a saving of more than $50.00 as compared to what we burned with the old furnace.

"I don't know how to account for this very much appreciated saving of coal—all I know is that I was the beneficiary, thanks to your Mueller Furnace."

What Mr. Jordan Didn't Know

What he was unable to account for was, in reality, due to the "Mueller zone of extra heating capacity"—and Mueller superior design and construction all the way through. He was not interested in the technicalities of a furnace—any more than you are. He was vitally interested in saving fuel and money—just as you are.

The Mueller Double Radiator Furnace has all the worth-while features of other good furnaces, plus more square feet of direct heating surface than any other furnace of equal size fire-pot. Where the ordinary 22-inch size furnace has but 42 square feet of direct heating surface, this better furnace has 88 square feet! That is why it delivers dependable heat at low fuel cost. The heat goes into the rooms of your home instead of up the chimney.

By Way of a Suggestion—

If you are planning to replace your present heating system—or are building a new home—it will be well worth your while to investigate this self-cleaning, better-heating Mueller Furnace. There is a competent Mueller heating man near you who will be pleased to plan an installation for you and give you a cost estimate. He is backed by a skilled Engineering Staff and an organization that has 67 years of heating experience to its credit. More than 236,000 Mueller Furnaces have already been installed. Easy monthly payments for your convenience—a whole year to pay for a lifetime of dependable heat.

YANKEES UNITE TO SUE U. S. FOR LOSSES IN CUBA

No Chance for Justice There, They Say.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, July 13.—[By Mail.]—Americans here as well as those on the other end of the island are protesting their inability to get justice in the Cuban courts, and a movement is under way, in coöperation with Havana business men, to engage attorneys and start proceedings against the United States government for failing to give the protection they feel they are entitled to under the Platt amendment.

"I think we can force the issue," a leading American business man told THE TRIBUNE. "We have enough evidence to prove conclusively Americans are not getting justice in court. We can show our property is not being protected. We can show that American property has been taken from its owner, buildings on it destroyed, with the connivance of the Cuban government."

Platt Guarantee.

The article in the Platt amendment which will be the basis for their suit against the United States claims commission reads:

"The government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of the life, property and individual liberty, and for the discharging of the obligation with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States now to be assumed and undertaken by the government of Cuba."

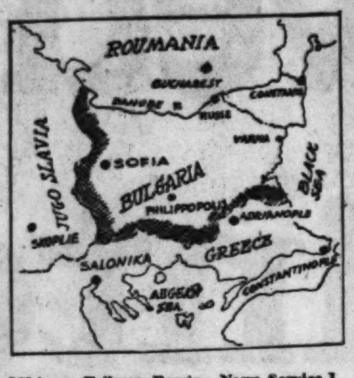
"Even from the Cuban standpoint, the preservation of individual liberty, the United States government is pledged to intervene" the American business man explained. "Everybody knows that individual liberty does not exist here, that all newspapers that criticize the government, which is admittedly crooked, are suppressed, and that political opponents are silenced by force.

Crowder Not Blamed.

"But looking on the other side, had most of us known that the United States merely inserted the Platt amendment as a bluff, we shouldn't have put our money here."

Criticism is directed at Washington rather than at Gen. Crowder, who, every one believes, has informed Secretary of State Hughes in no uncertain terms the exact position of American interests here, as well as the slap the department itself got in the face when the Zayas government got $50,000,000 contingent upon the effecting of government reforms and then failed to execute even one.

WARNS BULGARIA



[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, July 26. — The Greek minister to Sofia, acting with the Serbian minister, has been instructed to make an immediate protest to the Bulgarian government and demand that measures be taken against the concentration of Bulgarian troops on the Greek and Jugo-Slav frontiers.

BROPHY LEGION POST TO BUILD HERO MEMORIAL

JAMES G. BROPHY.

To honor Second Lieutenant James G. Brophy and other west side and Austin soldiers killed in the world war, Brophy post, No. 195, of the American Legion is to construct at Washington boulevard and Laramie avenue a memorial costing $10,000. It is the first one of its kind in Chicago to be established solely under Legion auspices.

Recently Edward J. McCabe, commander, and other officers of Brophy post appeared before the west park commissioners and obtained from them an ordinance setting aside for the memorial the plot at the intersection of Washington boulevard and Laramie avenue. This spot is near the scene of many of Lieut. Brophy's activities for ten years before the war. Opposite is the Stayms club, of which Lieut. Brophy was president for several terms, and close by is St. Thomas Aquinas church, of which he was a member.

Shattuck & Layer, architects, have outlined a plan providing not only for an appropriate monument but for attractive surroundings. At either end of a long rectangle are to be artistic stone benches overlooking a grass plot and flower beds. In the center is a large bronze plinth on a broad stone platform. On the plinth which will form the base of the flagpole will be placed tablets in commemoration of Lieut. Brophy and his comrades.

The cost of the memorial will be defrayed by subscriptions to be raised by leading bankers and business men of the west side.

The dedicatory ceremonies will take place Sept. 28.

GALLANT YANKS ORGANIZE A KLAN TO RESCUE PEARL

But "Prisoner," a Movie Maid, Objects.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 26.—The first Ku Klux Klan formed in Constantinople was disbanded this week in strange circumstances.

It all started in Maxim's on the night of July 4. The place was full of American merchant sailors and American mining engineers, coming from and going to Russia, and American adventurers from every corner of the near east.

The jovial American Negro propietor, Dick Thomas, who fled from Russia and his horse training job there when the revolution broke out, was setting up drinks on the house time and again. A jazz band played "I Loved Her on the Back Porch," and there were Greek and Levantin dancing girls for every one.

American Girl with Dusky Prince.

A dense hush fell on the noisy, singing, cursing assemblage as a beautiful young American girl entered with a handsome Egyptian and two ugly Lascar sailors.

"That's her," whispered the habitués of Maxim's, "and two of her guards."

It is well known in the American colony in Constantinople that Prince Mehmed Ali of Egypt, cousin of King Fuad, had recently arrived in the former kaiser's former yacht Meteor, on which the latter had signed his declaration of war, and that Prince Ali had Pearl Shepherd, an American chorus girl, aboard as a semi-prisoner.

The Meteor, a stunning schooner, was anchored in a charming spit off Prinkipo island, but the American prisoner was never permitted to leave the ship except in company with the prince and his friends or fierce Lascar sailor guards.

Girl's Screams from Yacht.

A woman's piercing screams for help from the direction of the Meteor were heard many nights by Mrs. John D. Spreckels, who is married to another Egyptian prince, and other American residents of the island.

"We can rush those Lascars and rescue her," exclaimed a famous American mining engineer who was en route to inspect the manganese deposits in the Caucasus.

"But the Egyptian has a dozen or more of his sailors outside, and they are armed to the teeth with automatics, knives, and blackjacks," a new arrival warned.

As the wild night wore on the American girl threw deeply appealing glances at her compatriots. But Prince Ali threatened her every time he caught her, and finally dragged her away with fourteen Lascars covering her in the rear. He pushed her into a huge limousine, yelling to the chauffeur to drive like mad for the Galata docks. The Lascars followed in another big car.

The first Ku Klux Klan in the near east was organized just as the sun crept up behind the Bosporus that morning, July 5.

"I swear to be faithful to this K. K. K. and rescue our American compatriot from that awful Egyptian," solemnly chanted in turn a famous mining engineer, the vice president of one of the largest New York shipping companies, an American lawyer from Paris, and half a dozen other Yankees, including several Jews and Catholics.

Scout Visits Yacht.

A clever Turkish fisherman who was a K. K. K. scout, visited the Meteor that afternoon. He reported that here were sixteen men in the crew. He drew up a map of the principal stairways and cabins, and described the precautions against attack.

"We can finish them in a few seconds," he remarked cooly, making a motion of slitting his throat.

The rescue plans were delayed day after day, while the yacht cruised about, but a native fishing boat noiselessly slid up beside the Meteor in the Sea of Marmora one midnight this week when Prince Ali and half the crew were carousing ashore. The barefooted Turkish boatman had overpowered the sailor on watch and stuffed a rag in his mouth before he could move. A dozen intrepid Americans had leaped aboard the Meteor and battered down the hatches leading to the crew's quarters, and temporarily captured the Meteor in the name of the Ku Klux Klan of Constantinople.

A Chilly Reception.

"We have come to rescue you," blurted out the leader as the cabin door suddenly opened, and the Princess Pearl of Hollywood, U. S. A., angrily appeared in a kimono.

"You roughnecks have your nerve with you," she retorted, slamming the door in their astonished faces.

The K. K. K. of Constantinople was permanently dissolved at a killjoy konklave at Maxim's. The roll of members, all married men, was put into a lead box and dropped into the middle of the Bosporus.

Even on "scorching-hot" days our scientific cooling system keeps the North American comfortable

The fresh, cool, invigorating air one always finds at the North American Restaurant isn't a matter of chance or guesswork. It is the result of one of the finest ventilating and cooling systems ever installed—a system which costs us $25,000 to operate, and which actually "makes air to order" according to the weather.

Only fresh "out-door" air is used—and every breath of it is scientifically washed, cooled and dried—the air throughout the entire restaurant being completely changed every three minutes. Consequently one never experiences that "stuffy," "clammy" feeling which is so often noticed in rooms using "makeshift" cooling methods.

The fact that the North American is always comfortably cool plus the reputation it has earned for big portions of the finest food at low prices makes this by far Chicago's most popular dining-place during summer as well as all year 'round.

Come in any time—for breakfast, lunch, after shopping, dinner, during the evening or after the theatre—and you'll find just the food which "hits the spot," and at prices equally as low as the ones mentioned below.

A few of our specialties:

Cold Sliced Turkey: A generous portion with dressing and cranberry sauce . 50c
Lake Superior Whitefish: A portion, enough for two 60c
Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c

And for Breakfast:
Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c
Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c

This is one restaurant where children are always welcome!

LAWYERS BACK TRIBUNE STAND ON "PUBLICITY"

Urge Law to Stop "Trial by Newspapers."

Enactment of a law, prohibiting "trial by newspapers" before trial in court of criminal and civil cases, was indorsed yesterday by prominent members of the Chicago bar. Wide comment among lawyers has followed THE TRIBUNE's editorial advocacy of such a statute.

National restriction by law and governing every newspaper is the one remedy, THE TRIBUNE said. By its enforcement, no newspaper might publish the "propaganda" issued by prosecutors and defense lawyers prior to the trial.

Plea Is Well Founded.

"THE TRIBUNE's demand for restriction of publicity before the trial of cases in courts of justice is thoroughly well founded," declared Russell Whitman, noted lawyer and vice president of the Chicago Bar association.

"Lawyers are far from blameless in the matter; but reputable members of the bar deplore the injustice of permitting a trial by newspaper in advance of a hearing by a court and jury. The statements of counsel giving to the press their version of a case and what they are going to prove and to do make it seem incumbent upon opposing counsel to take issue, also in the press, or to allow partisan claims to go unchallenged.

"Where a case promises to be sensational the contest is on. It is most unseemly. Neither party is under any control—a prize fight and no referee. The spectacle is sickening."

Bar Will Support, He Says.

The bar will rally to the support of any well drawn measure by which the legislature can "put a stop to this menace to private rights and public justice," Mr. Whitman added.

THE TRIBUNE's suggestion that the American Bar association may well take up the problem is excellent, but it should also be taken up locally. No doubt the Illinois and the Chicago Bar associations can be relied on to give the matter consideration.

"The chief difficulty is likely to arise in drafting a measure which will restrict the 'freedom of the press' only when such freedom operates to obstruct the administration of justice. But I believe such a measure can be drawn and enacted into law."

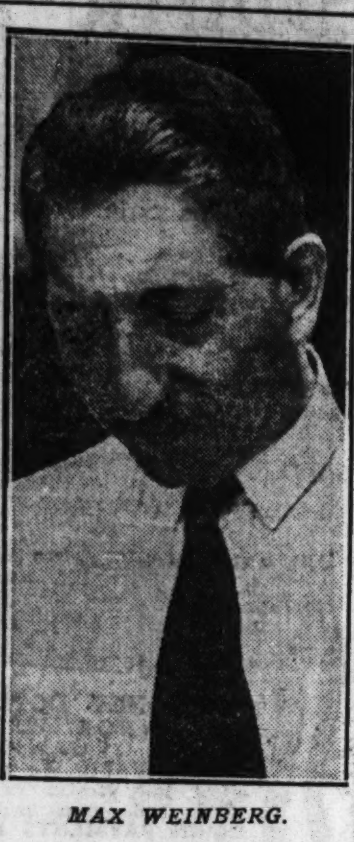
Sees No Need for It.

Newspapers need no new laws to guide them against the abuse of the "newspaper trial," in the opinion of Attorney Andrew R. Sherriff, chairman of the committee on relations of the press to judicial proceedings of the Chicago Bar association.

Mr. Sherriff placed the responsibility directly upon the shoulders of newspaper editors and refused to concede that all newspapers must cease the practice before any one paper dared to deprive its readers of what another furnished.

"By its editorial, THE TRIBUNE, with characteristic courage, takes the lead in promoting a great and inevitable reform," Mr. Sherriff said. "The remedy proposed is as interesting as the attack. THE TRIBUNE says: 'There is one remedy. Drastic restriction of publicity before the trial must be imposed by law.' How many times have I read your complaints about the destruction of constitutional liberty and the sinking soul of democracy under the ever-increasing load of restrictive legislation?

Slugged for Pay Roll



MAX WEINBERG.

Oueration of pay roll bandits and safeblowers netted them more than $6,000 yesterday morning.

Max Weinberg, cashier of the E. Edelmann & Co., 2332 Logan boulevard, was beaten and robbed of $2,400, the weekly pay roll, by two armed men as he entered the door of the plant. The bandits after firing several shots to frighten employés, escaped in a black Hudson automobile.

More than $4,000 was obtained by safeblowers who looted the office of the Prudential Insurance company at 4247 West 22d street. The robbery was discovered by an employé of the company.

Weinberg was returning from the Greenebaum & Sons' bank with the money in a taxicab. As he entered the hallway of the plant an unshaven bandit in a green sweater felled him with a blow from his revolver, seized the cash and escaped in an automobile which was waiting with a driver at the curb.

John Lynch, the taxicab chauffeur, picked up a policeman and gave chase to the fleeing bandit car. After a chase of several miles over west side boulevards he was outdistanced at Lake street and Cicero avenue.

The job at the offices of the Prudential company was pronounced the work of expert cracksmen by detectives who were rushed to the company's offices. Although the safe door had been blown clean from the hinges no one could be found who had heard any sound.

No finger prints could be found, and police believe the robbers wore gloves.

Anglo-Soviet Conference in London Comes to Life

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 26.—With the end of the London conference on the Dawes plan in sight, interest is reviving in the Anglo-Russian conference, which has been hanging fire. M. Rakovsky has gone to Moscow to consult the soviet government, probably to obtain wider powers, and M. Joffe has arrived in London to assist the delegation here. M. Krassin also is on his way here. The significance of M. Joffe's arrival is that he is the chief soviet expert on treaty making, and his arrival is taken to indicate that a commercial pact is nearing completion.

AFTER 14 YEARS SAYS 2 BROTHERS KILLED PARENTS

Witnesses Delayed Him, Accuser States.

Coatsville, Pa., July 27.—Emphatic denial of having caused the death of their parents fourteen years ago was made today by Benjamin F. Dorsheimer of Atlantic City, N. J., and Chester A. Dorsheimer of Harrisburg, Pa., who are under arrest on charges preferred by their brother, Frank E. Dorsheimer, owner of an automobile painting shop at Thorndale, near here.

Benjamin was arrested when he alighted from a train here last night and Chester was taken into custody at York, Pa., where he is treasurer of a manufacturing plant.

Says They Were Asphyxiated.

Benjamin, said to be in the real estate business at Atlantic City, was formerly in the hotel business at Coatesville, Allentown, and Parkersburg, W. Va.

Frank charges that Benjamin and Chester caused their parents' death in Lancaster, Pa., by gas asphyxiation. They were found dead in their bed with a gas jet turned on. Peter Dorsheimer, the father of the three men, was a liquor dealer and reputed to be wealthy. Benjamin was made an executor of the estate.

Says Witnesses Delayed Him.

Asked today why he had waited fourteen years to bring a murder charge against his brothers, Frank said important witnesses had refused to talk about the case because they had been intimidated. As the years passed, he said, they talked freely about the circumstances of the death of the aged couple.

Frank did not divulge the names of the witnesses, but said he had sufficient information to justify the murder charge. He denied he had consulted a spiritualistic medium regarding the case. He said the death of his parents had worried him for years.

MAYOR IS WITH SCHOOL MA'MS IN COUNCILS FIGHT

Thinks Common Sense Should Settle It.

Public school teachers' council meetings, now the subject of renewed controversy between Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew, the board of education, and the teaching staff, are "necessary, proper, and valuable," declared Mayor Dever yesterday.

The use of a modicum of common sense might have prevented the friction which has given rise to rumors that Supt. McAndrew will resign unless his plan to reorganize the councils is approved by the school board, continued the mayor in his first public comment on the breach between the teachers and the superintendent. Resumption of the quarrel is deplorable, he asserted.

Needs Common Sense.

When an opinion of the school board's attorney held that the superintendent was required to call the teachers' meetings, Mr. McAndrew prepared an amendment to the board's rules, making the organization of the councils optional with him rather than obligatory as at present. The amendment is now pending before the board and a number of the members are said to oppose its passage.

"What the school board, in common with a number of other city departments, needs is common sense," declared the mayor, who insisted that his was the criticism of a private citizen rather than that of the mayor.

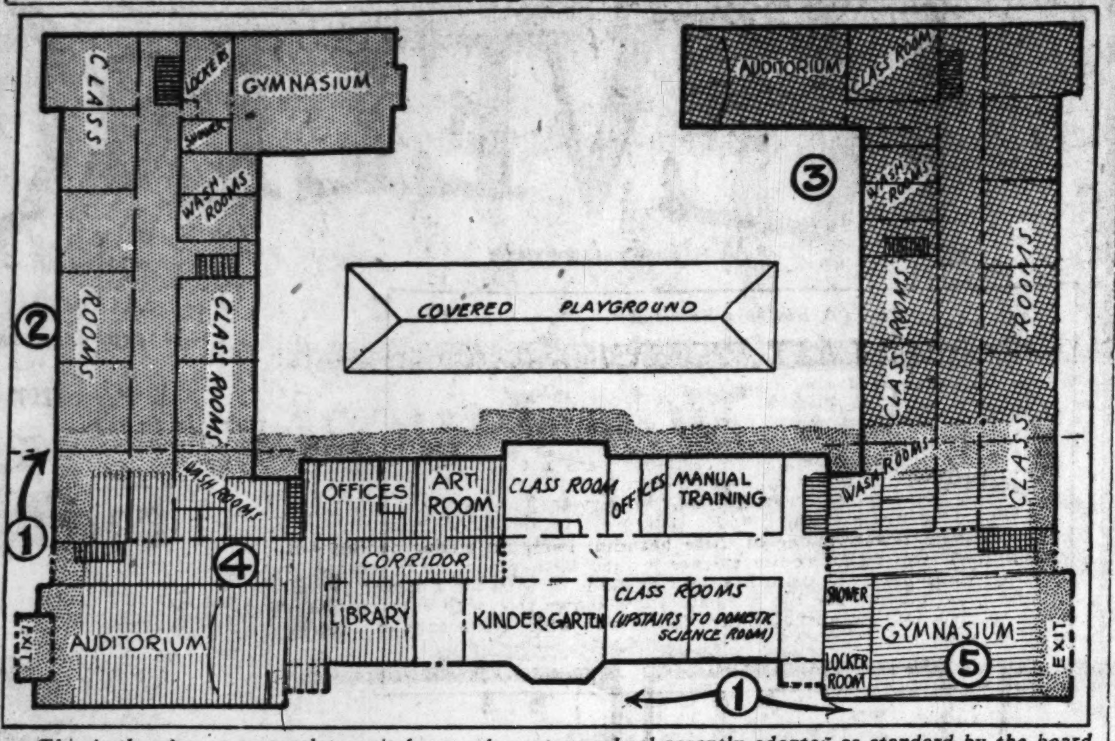
"The continuance of teachers' councils is a mere matter of administration, and their discussion should never have caused any trouble. It is inherent in school affairs that any discussion almost develops a panic. There is considerable room for argument on the junior high school and platoon systems, because those are fundamental educational problems.

Thinks Time Well Spent.

"But the question here is whether it is a waste of public funds to allow the teachers to meet four or five times a year, for an hour or so each time, during school hours. Teachers must meet sometime and discuss matters peculiar to their work. Ten thousand teachers must have an opinion on questions which affect their work; that opinion, by virtue of their experience, must be worth something, and it can not be lightly ignored. They should be recognized.

"This is the twentieth century, and all about us industry has taken its workers into its confidence through workers' councils and through other means. My view of the teachers' councils is that the time taken for them from school hours is well spent if it has a tendency to cause harmony in the school system."

A TYPICAL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL



This is the plan of a complete unit for an elementary school recently adopted as standard by the board of education. Each unit can be added as needed, and the building is designed for community services as well as for educational purposes. No. 1 in the diagram shows the first unit, a complete school in itself; 2, a wing that can be added as needs demand; 3, a second wing that also can be added. The original heating plant is designed to ultimately care for these wings. (4) The auditorium, offices, art room, and library can be used for community purposes while the rest of the building is closed. (5) The gymnasium also can be opened to the public without opening the entire school.

Burglar Uses Ladder to Enter Flat; Takes $200

Lock your windows and close the doors leading to porches when you leave your apartments and homes. This was the advice of the police department after a lone burglar using a ladder entered the home of Albert Finholt, 2133 North Springfield avenue early yesterday morning, and escaped with jewelry valued at $200.

GYPSY MONARCH ORDERED TO JAIL FOR 1 TO 10 YEARS

King Tino Bimbo, gypsy monarch and one of the best customers Chicago's police courts ever had, was sentenced to prison for from one to ten years by Judge Hosea Wells today.

The king has stood trial for a variety of things, including a battle over a pig that the queen cooked. But it remained for Millie Marks to give him a row of convict numerals. After unsuccessfully prosecuting Bimbo for assault, Millie, who is a gypsy sovereign herself, had him indicted for confidence game. She said he kept $2,250 which she paid as a dowry before Bimbo's daughter, Princess Rosie, refused to marry Queen Millie's son.

A riot threatened when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty last week. Nothing much happened yesterday after Judge Wells passed sentence except that King Bimbo cussed out the entire courtroom.

CHARGE KILLING TO RUM RUNNERS.

Glencoe police, investigating the murder of George Pietres, 43, 1745 North Wood street, whose body was found a little off the Green Bay road near Glencoe, Friday night, declared that apparently the man was the victim of beer runners.

for on the same day I ordered my Presto-Up Garage at Harris Brothers, Russell, my next door neighbor started a carpenter to work on his garage.
Two days later I was using my Presto-Up. They put the roof on Russell's garage yesterday. That was three weeks ago. My Presto-Up Garage cost me complete $195.00 Last nite
Russell told me he has paid out $266.00 and there's a weeks more labor and some material still required to finish the job. Of course, he realizes his mistake now. I tried to prevail on him to wait until he saw my Presto-Up, but he wouldn't listen to me until it was too late.
Since then three other Harris
Garages have been erected in

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

"Babe" Ruth, like old bono publico, can be fooled part of the time, but not all the time. Sergeant George Connally fooled him yesterday; fooled him plenty with an assortment of twisters that had the Bambino pawing the air, but eventually there came a reckoning.

30

After thirteen rounds of sensations that had 25,000 Comiskey park patrons glued to their seats, "Babe" picked the spot to do his stuff. He was first up in the fourteenth and Connally, a bit careless because of his prosperity in the previous stands, let one slip into "Babe's" grove. Away went the pill into the right field seats and away went the ball game, the Ruthian smack, which was No. 30 for the season, giving the champion Yankees a 5 to 4 verdict over the White Sox.

Bust Until Last Inning.

Prior to his wilting smash Ruth had been a big bust and the bugs who came to see him hit, and yet hoped that he wouldn't, paid homage with the customary boos. These were especially pronounced when "Babe," leading off in the eighth, fanned. They were louder and more protracted in the ninth when the hope buster whiffed for the second time with three mates on the paths. Then in the eleventh he exploded a double as a sort of preliminary to the climax. The double went to waste because Connally fanned Meusel to end the inning.

During the time that Ruth was in eclipse, Maurice Archdeacon was rolling up hits so fast that he had the Yankees running in circles trying to outwit him. Twice he poked leisurely bunts toward Ward and both times he beat them. Three times he simply pushed the ball over or through the inner defense that was drawn in to offset his tremendous speed. And out of these five hits he produced three Sox runs, one of them tying the score in the ninth at 4 to 4, after the Yanks had taken the lead in their half. It was the last run registered until Ruth cut loose.

Sox Errors Give Yanks Run.

If the Sox defense hadn't crumpled in one particular spot, Ruth might never have had his chance in that fourteenth. In the ninth Collins muffed the easiest kind of a roller. A moment later Barrett, who had just come into the battle because McClellan had worn himself out with some great playing, made a wild heave on a force play. Then Dugan beat out a hit and the bases were filled. This was where Ruth fanned and the multitude howled, but Connally walked Meusel and a run was forced home.

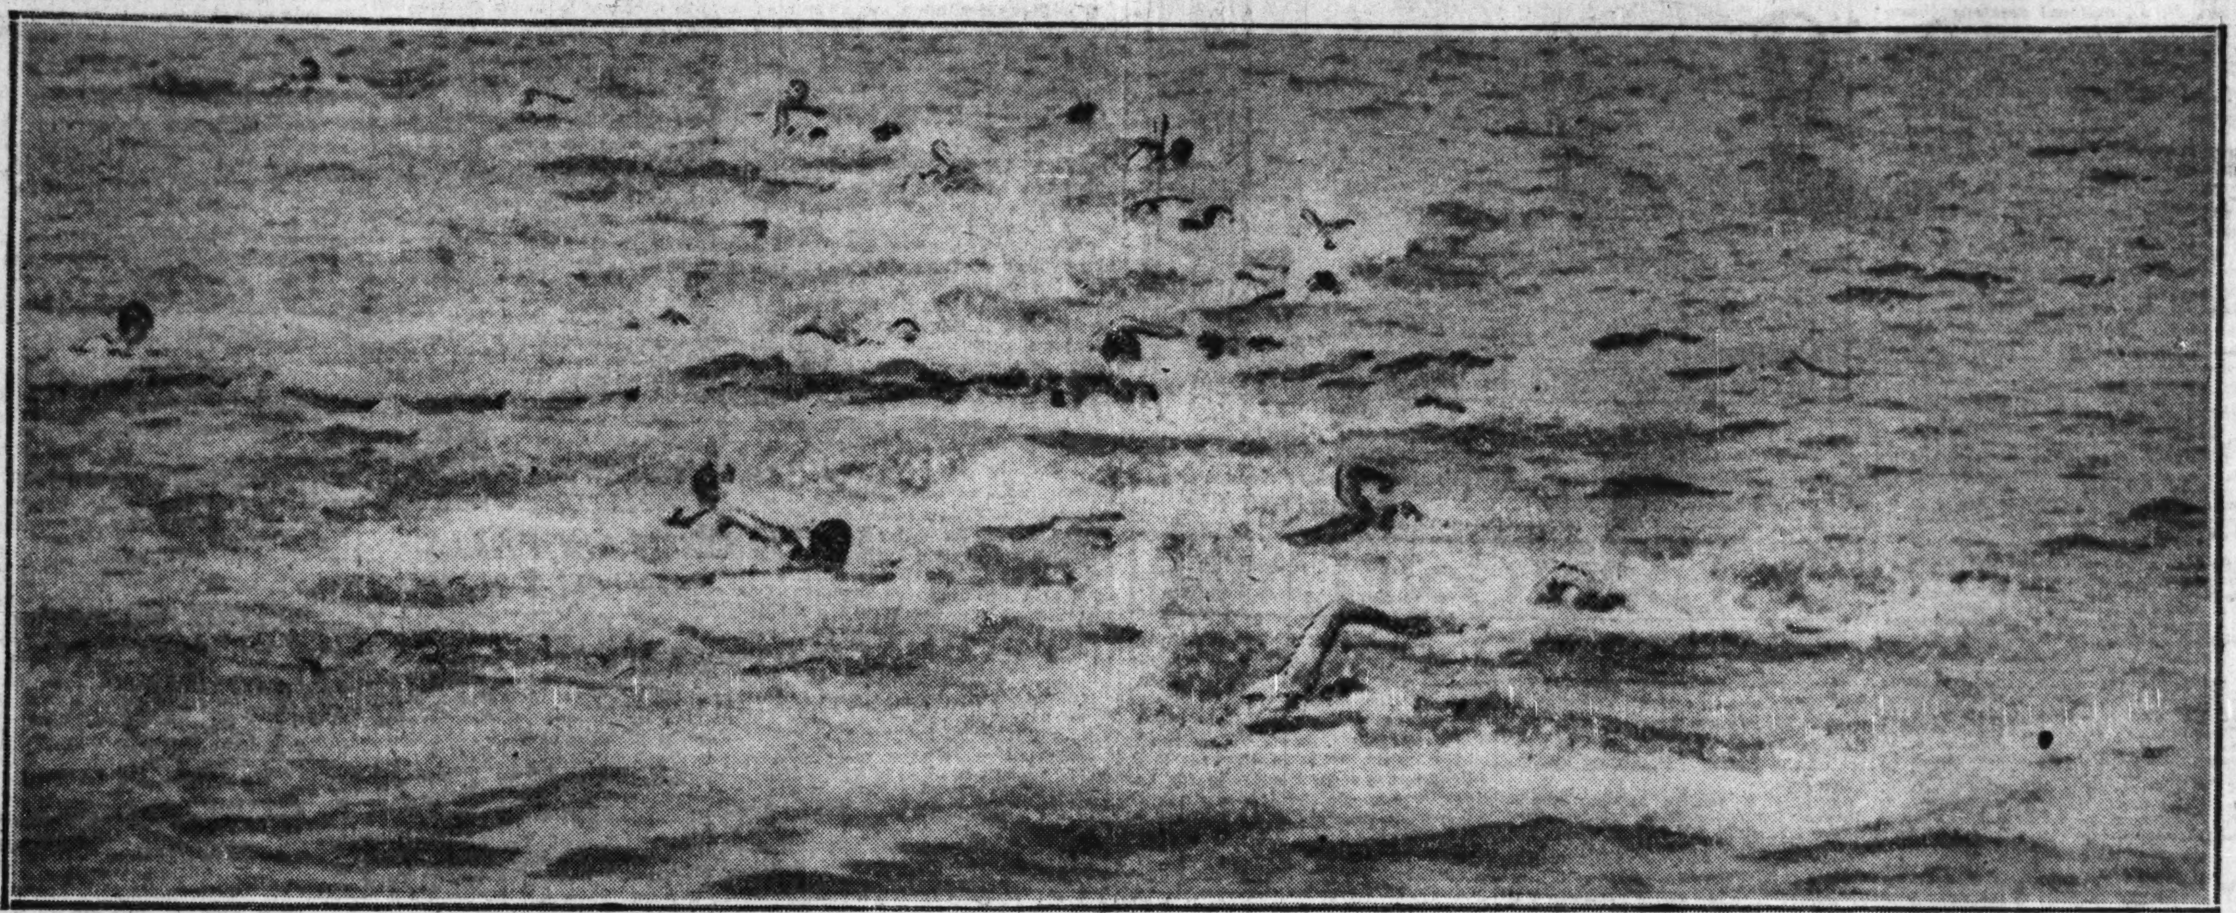
Archdeacon was the first man up in the home ninth and he singled through short. The hit finished Gaston, who had relieved Jones after the sixth, and "Lefty" Pennock took up the job. A hit by Collins and long fly by Sheely let the run get home. Falk was passed for fear he might drive in the winning tally and Kamm fanned. That was one of the five chances that Kamm had to drive in runs and he failed on all of them. In three of his failures the bases were filled, once in the seventh, once in the eleventh, and once in the thirteenth.

Sox Lead Until Seventh.

The Sox got a flying start by scoring twice on Jones in the first inning. Hits by Archdeacon and Collins and errors by Ward and Ruth did it. On Archdeacon's second hit in the fifth and a safe bunt by Hooper they added another, and they maintained the advantage until the seventh. At that stage Connally wabbled a bit and singles by Pipp and Schang and a pass to Ward loaded the bases with none dead. One of the runners got home on a long fly and Witt singled the other across, tying the score at three apiece.

Collins added a few thrillers to a game that already was sensational enough by copping three bases and running his season's total to twenty-nine. He copped one in the ninth after singling. In the thirteenth he hit again and not only stole second, but third as well. Sheely and Falk drew passes in the wake of the last two thefts, and with the bags chocked Kamm grounded to Dugan to end the inning.

GEE, WHAT A SPLASH!



Scene taken just north of the Municipal pier a moment after the twenty-seven swimmers in the twenty-fifth annual river swim had hit the water. The men swam around the pier and back up the river to the Wells street bridge, a distance of about two miles, twenty-six of the twenty-seven finishing.

Billy Gibson, manager of Tunney, who is the American light heavyweight champion, is considering the offer made by Coffey, while Eddie Kane, manager of Gibbons, agreed to the match before he and Tom left for England to box Bloomfield. Coffey expects to make a definite announcement regarding the match this week.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

By use of a powerful crawl stroke John Ball of Peoria, competing under the colors of the Illinois A. C., yesterday won the sixteenth annual river swim of the tri-color club by ten yards over Paul Manovitz of Northwestern university. The winner's time was 1:00:30, considerably slower than the record of 56:20 made for the two miles by Richard Howell of Northwestern university in 1922.

Ball and Manovitz were easily the class of the field of twenty-seven starters who were sent away from the shore line on the north side of the Municipal pier. As they stroked out around the pier, 1,000 yards from the starting point, the tri-color club and Purple natators were on even terms and 200 feet in advance of Greller and Jaffee.

Manovitz Gains on Ball.

As they turned the pier and headed for the mouth of the river Ball went off his course and Manovitz gained about ten yards. The tri-color club swimmer, however, gained back the lost advantage when they passed the life saving station.

Taking advantage of the current the two swimmers paddled into midstream to get the full benefit of the running water. Little by little Ball pulled away from the Purple natator and was five yards in advance as the Michigan avenue bridge was reached. From this point to the finish Ball steadily increased his lead until he went under the finish line at the Wells street bridge about ten yards in the lead of Manovitz, who swam an excellent race.

Greller followed the leader under the line and Jaffee of the Jewish People's institute was a good fourth. From this point until the first ten had finished the starters were strung out for blocks. The struggle for seventh place between Meese, an unattached starter, and Colburn of the Central Y. M. C. A. was interesting, and the latter went under the wire a winner by a yard.

Thousands Watch Race.

With so many of the stars in Europe, where they competed in the swimming competition of the Olympic games, the field was not as classy as that of former I. A. C. river swims, but the race for first place between Ball and Manovitz was one of the best finishes in the history of the event.

The event attracted the usual interest and the bridges and docks were lined with thousands of persons who watched the water procession pass by. Ted Canty kept the throng informed as to the leaders from one of the harbor patrol boats, while Bill Howe was chief timer and Roy Davis starter.

According to officials of the race, there were no accidents and all but two of the original twenty-seven starters finished.

Bobby Jones and South Champ Win in Foursome

Savannah, Ga., July 26.—Bobby Jones, former national open golf champion, and Perry Adair, former southern champion, defeated Eugene Cay and Dave Spittal, professional, in a best ball foursome at the Savannah Golf club this afternoon, 1 up.

Here are the winners—John Ball (right), of the I. A. C., who captured first place, and Paul Manovitz (left), swimming for Northwestern university, who came in second in a thrilling finish.

In the Wake of the News

WESTERN GOLF.

STANDING out as a feature of the Western amateur golf tourney at Hinsdale was the coterie of young players who turned in low medal scores for the qualifying rounds.

While Art Sweet, medalist, was put out in the first round, and others of the younger school met early reverses in the exacting match play rounds, they showed golf that, with tournament experience, will make them more dangerous factors in what is becoming each year a more difficult test.

Never was there such an array of good players in the Western tourney. They seem to be springing up from everywhere. While match play is the supreme test, those medal scores show inherent golf ability. Veterans, frequent winners of the past, may well look to their laurels.

In the 1923 tourney of Cleveland scores of 156 were safe, and two of the four tied at 157 qualified among the thirty-two who decided the title. This year, 155 or better was necessary. That means two rounds of 78 failed to earn a place. Those figures speak for themselves.

Since 1895 Chicago players have won ten of twenty-seven national amateur titles. No other western city, unless Pittsburgh with three champions be included in the west, has been in the list. Scores at Hinsdale indicate future national champions from other middle west cities as well as Chicago may be in the making.

Memory of Washington Park.

Never more will a Murphy or Garrison guide
His mount to the fore with mad burst;
Ne'er again will a Bullman or Helgesen bring
A Lucas, a Picket, in first.

Where once these great horses passed under the wire,
Naught now remains, not a trace;
A lamp-post or letter box may mark the spot
Where ended each sternly fought race.

Ne'er a Modesty, coming in first by a nose,
Volante, or Silver Cloud, Todd,
Emp'ror of Norfolk, Spokane, Uncle Bob,
Strathmeath, or Carlsbad, by a rod.

Nothing is left to remind of Boundless' great win,
Rey el Santa Anita, Pink Coat,
The bold Sidney Lucas—that stout hooded horse—
No memento their feats to denote.

Ne'er again will the multitude roar with delight
As when third to Parader befell;
Ne'er again will the stands shake and tremble with cheers
For little old Robert Waddell.

Drake's Wyeth, The Picket, and lastly Highball—
The ill-luck of the east to redeem—
Every vestige of deeds that thrilled thousands is gone—
The American Derby's a dream.

At a small dinner party the other night, a lady, in speaking of her husband, said, "He's the quickest thing I ever heard of—he can take a bath and shave and be all through and dressed for dinner in four or five minutes." A married lady at the table, seeking to corroborate, broke in with, "That's not exaggerated a bit. I've seen him do it."

Chicago Net Players Take Badger Titles

Milwaukee, Wis., July 26.—[Special.]—All of the Wisconsin state tennis titles will roost in Chicago for a year, following the final and semi-final matches at the Town club here today. George Lott Jr., with Tom McGlinn of Philadelphia as his partner, annexed the doubles championship by trouncing John Barr and Ledie Coleman, two tall Texans, in a five set match, 6—1, 6—1, 2—6, 0—6, 6—4. Lott and McGlinn are Illinois junior doubles champions.

Miss Katherine Waldo renewed her hold on the ladies' singles championship by winning from Mrs. Helen Stewart, also of Chicago.

In the mixed doubles, Mrs. Stewart and Eddie Wilson slipped over a win on Miss Waldo and George O'Connell, taking a hard match, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3.

Lott Meets O'Connell.

Lott and George O'Connell will battle for the singles title today. Both Chicagoans won their semi-final matches, Lott taking a straight set victory from Emmett Pare, while O'Connell dealt the same fate to Joe Thelen, veteran Milwaukee player.

The match between Lott and Pare was the first battle staged between Chicago's young aces, and the University High lad showed his superior generalship by chopping the ball past his younger opponent, winning 6—4, 6—2, 6—1. Pare's backhand netted the ball frequently. When Lott took the net his overhead was unbeatable and after a brush in the first set he grabbed the last two sets easily.

Rally Wins in Doubles.

The best match during the day was the doubles, in which Lott and McGlinn walked off with easy wins in the first two sets. Then the Texans started planting the ball at McGlinn's feet, and allowed the Quaker City lad and Lott but two games in the third set and none in the fourth.

In the final round, the two lithe southwestern champs were unable to cope with Lott's service, and the U. High boy played all over the court, taking most of the shots, and after the set was four all the winners pulled out two games for victory.

WALKER, AFTER PLANE WRECK, EQUALS MARK ON BADGER COURSE

JANESVILLE, Wis., July 26.—[Special.]—To be in an airplane wreck, a forced landing, and to equal a course record all in one day, was the experience of Cyril Walker, National open golf champion, today. The champion, playing an 18 hole best ball match, paired with Bobby Cruickshank against Marty Cromb, Janesville pro, and Jack Burgess, pro, won 3 up. Walker turned the last nine in 33 to even the mark set some years ago by Chick Evans of Chicago.

Missing their train at Minneapolis last night, the stars left the Mill town this morning by plane. They appeared over the links here at 4:15 as the pilot started to land on a fairway the machine ran out of gas and lit in an oat field. Sliding to rest it hit a small ditch, pitched its nose straight into the ground, breaking the propeller and shaking the golfers considerably. They had been forced to land earlier for gas at La Crosse.

In the golf match, Walker made the course in 69, one under par, his 33 being two under.

The Question.

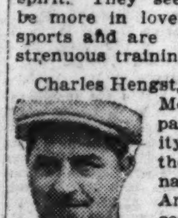
How do you account for the superiority of American athletes in the Olympic games?

Where Asked.

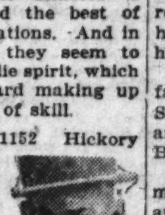
Lawrence avenue and Broadway.

The Answer.

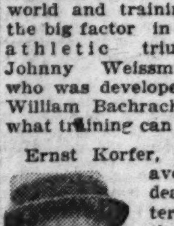
W. H. Allen, 1629 Fargo avenue, telephone official—The principal reason is that the Yank athletes have received the better training and in addition have more of the "go out and win" spirit. They seem to be more in love with sports and are willing to undergo strenuous training to achieve victory.



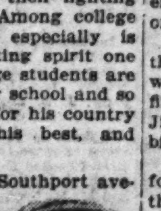
Charles Hengst, 5041 Fletcher street, Monarch Brewery company—Their superiority is probably due to the mixture of various nationalities. In most American athletes is combined the best of many nations. And in addition they seem to have more of the do or die spirit, which goes a long ways toward making up for any default or lack of skill.



Michael Langan, 1152 Hickory street, police officer—Our American athletes are trained by some of the best coaches in the world and training is the big factor in any athletic triumph. Johnny Weissmuller, who was developed by William Bachrach, is an example of what training can do.



Ernst Korfer, 3125 North Hoyne avenue, real estate dealer—Two things enter into the success of the American athletes—their superior training and their fighting spirit. Among college athletes especially is the fighting spirit one of the big items. College students are willing to fight for their school and so any athlete competing for his country abroad is willing to do his best, and even more.



Arthur Swinke, 2924 Southport avenue, salesman—I think that the American athletes are superior because it is naturally born in them to be so, as it is with Americans in most other things. They know the value of victory and fight to realize what they know is valuable. And besides they are better trained.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Fighting as game a battle as can be found in the annals of American golf, Harrison R. Johnston of the White Bear Yacht club of Minnesota, won the twenty-fifth amateur championship of the Western Golf association, defeating Albert R. Seckel of the Riverside Golf club and Western champion in 1911, 1 up in the 36 hole final at the Hinsdale Golf club.

Johnston, after a long and gruelling battle in which he had trailed most of the time, left the 31st green 4 down and 5 to play, and was, to all intents, a defeated man. From that point on, however, he played spectacular golf, winning five holes straight, three of them with birdies. His win on the 35th evened him up and they started away from the last tee all square. Both had played their seconds on the green and then Johnston sank a 25 foot putt which settled the match.

Two Titles in Week.

It was a notable triumph for the blonde Minnesotan in that in the preceding week he had won the Gopher State title for the fourth time and had to call on all his physical powers to go unscathed through the hard week at Hinsdale.

Too much praise cannot be given Seckel as he was not given much consideration in the early stages, but in turn he defeated Raymond Daly, 2 up, Frank Dyer of Memphis, former Metropolitan champion, Jimmy Manion of St. Louis, the trans-Mississippi champion, 1 up, and then staged the battle yesterday.

One of Seckel's greatest assets is nerve and added to this yesterday was a streak of wonderful putting seldom seen in a championship final. The championship crown meant little to the Riverside star when he was going for the cup. He holed putts from distances of from 3 to 15 feet when he needed them and this accurate work must have had a disconcerting effect on Johnston.

Met Twice Before.

Jimmy is a good putter himself but could not get them down and all through the morning he was unable to sink a long one. In the afternoon, however, he rammed in a 25 footer on the eighth green and although later in the round he twice missed short putts, yet he compensated for these misses by his crowning putt at the home hole.

Johnston, who started as one of the favorites, defeated Lawson Watts of St. Louis, 2 and 1, E. Hoover Bankard, 6 and 5; Eddie Held, 3 and 1, and Burton Mudge, 1 up.

The Minnesota star and Seckel had met twice before, once in the national amateur championship at St. Louis where Seckel was 5 down in the morning and eventually lost 2 and 1 and again in the first round of a Western amateur match where Johnston was 4 up with 8 to play and had to be content with a victory by one hole. Jimmy consequently had a wholesome respect for Seckel as a game fighter.

Great Golf in Morning.

The morning round was a fine exhibition and although their play was by no means stereotyped their mistakes many times were offset by fine recoveries and final analysis showed a card of 72 for Seckel and 71 for Johnston.

It was a fight for halves most of the time and 12 out of the 18 holes were divided. Johnston made a great finish as after Seckel was dormie 2, Jimmie won the next two holes with birdies.

A crowd of about 1,200 was on hand for the afternoon match and for once there was not a prospect of a shower. They halved the first two holes in the afternoon and then Johnston messed up the fourth and Seckel took the lead. Then at the short fourth Seckel holed a sixty foot putt for a birdie, took the next hole 4 to 5 and won the short water hole with a 3. He was 4 up and looked like a winner. But again the pendulum swung in the other direction as Seckel played the seventh hole badly having eight shots.

Seckel Three Up.

At the eighth Johnston sank a 25 foot putt for a birdie and was 2 down. But Seckel won the ninth with a long putt and was 3 up at the turn hole. This lead Seckel increased to 4, and then Johnston began his march to victory, playing the last five holes in 17 shots, winning the title.

This finished one of the greatest finals in the history of western golf, one which kept the gallery on edge almost from start to finish. It was a happy crowd of Chicagoans when Seckel had his lead of 4 up but their enthusiasm dimmed as at each hole Seckel made mistakes. Johnston's fine play did not go unnoticed, however, and when he sank his final putt he was given a round of applause, the new champion being one of the most popular players among the modern stars.

PLAY BY HOLES

MORNING ROUND.

Hole 1, 406 yards, par 4—Johnston outdrove Seckel 35 yards. Both got home in 2, Johnston being closer, and then halved in 4.

Hole 2, 285 yards, par 4—Seckel pulled to the long grass and punched out to the left of the green. Johnston's pitch was perfect, and he sank his putt for a birdie 3 to Seckel's par 4. Johnston, 1 up.

Hole 3, 410 yards, par 4—Johnston outdrove Seckel ten yards. Seckel's mashie was on the pin, 19 feet short while Johnston was 12 feet short. It looked like a stymie, but Seckel just skimmed by for a par 3. It was a great putt. Johnston missed, and the match was square.

Hole 4, 144 yards, par 3—Seckel's high tee shot just cleared the trap in front of the green and left him a 25-foot putt. Johnston pulled his tee shot a little and escaped being trapped by a foot. Both ran their approach putts close and halved in 3.

Hole 5, 335 yards, par 4—Seckel pulled to trap, Johnston going down the middle. Seckel's mashie was to the right and forty feet short. Johnston's fine pitch was seven feet short of the hole, but he missed, and Seckel got a half in 4.

Hole 6, 128 yards, par 3—Seckel shot over the lake and was twenty feet short of the pin, but Johnston pulled to the left. Jimmy, from the sand, hit the bank, going twenty feet by the hole. His putt lacked six inches of reaching the cup, and Seckel made his 3 and won, 3 to 4, being 1 up.

Hole 7, 558 yards, par 5—Both spanked long drives with the breeze behind them. Seckel's second was just inside the trap, but on the slope. Johnston played a pitch and run shot from 100 yards and was sixty feet short. Seckel's third was short and they holed four foot putts for a half in 5.

Hole 8, 370 yards, par 4—Both drove 260 yards. Johnston's second was fourteen feet to the left and Seckel went twenty feet over the pin. Both putted over the hole six inches and halved in 4.

Hole 9, 365 yards, par 4—Both spanked good drives. Jimmy hooked a high mashie pitch which stopped dead 20 feet from the hole. Seckel's high pitch hit a hard spot and bounded 10 feet in the air, running through a trap to the eighteenth green. From there he used his putter over a ridge and placed his ball 7 feet from the cup. Johnston's putt slipped past the hole, and again Seckel's putt for a half went straight into the cup. Seckel was out in 34 and 1 up.

Hole 10, 353 yards, par 4—Seckel pulled to the edge of the green, Johnston being straight. Seckel pitched to the edge of the green, Johnston's mashie being 18 feet short. Seckel's 30 foot putt stopped just short of the cup, and they halved in 4.

Hole 11, 503 yards, par 5—Both got long drives, but Johnston's iron second was off to the right while Seckel's wooden shot was trapped to the right of the green. Johnston's third was a weak run-up, 12 feet short. Seckel chipped from the trap and went over 15 feet, but he holed for a par 4, and Johnston missed. Seckel, 2 up.

Hole 12, 458 yards, par 5—Johnston's pulled drive stopped close to a trap and he had to put one foot in the trap to shoot, and his second shot left him 100 yards from the green. Seckel's bad pitch was 40 yards short of the pin, but it looked as if he had the hole won when Johnston's third went over the green to a trap. His run up was poor, however, and they halved in 6.

Hole 13, 130 yards, par 3—Both drove the green and ran long approach putts close, halving in 3.

Hole 14, 360 yards, par 4—Their drives were down center and their pitches left them 16 foot putts, but they missed and halved in 4.

Hole 15, 317 yards, par 4—Seckel drove out of bounds, but got a good second. Johnston got home with a good mashie which ran 15 feet by. Seckel's third was 13 feet past the pin. Johnston's putt was inches shy, and Seckel, with a fine putt, snatched a half in 4. Seckel still 2 up.

Hole 16, 248 yards, par 3—Seckel's drive went a little to the right, but got through a trap. Johnston's drive split the pin, 25 feet short. Seckel was confronted with a nasty downhill putt of sixty feet, but he played it perfectly to three feet by. Johnston's putt was poor four feet short and they halved in 3. Seckel, 2 up.

Hole 17, 500 yards, par 5—They got long drives from the elevated tee, but Johnston's long second was just short of the green. Seckel's iron was seventy feet short and his runup went by the cup ten feet. Johnston came close to holing for an eagle 3, but won, 4 to 5. Seckel, 1 up.

Hole 18, 390 yards, par 3—Johnston sent a long ball down the middle, but Seckel pushed his drive away into the long grass. He punched out from this, but was trapped to the right of the green. Johnston's pitch was a peach, sixteen feet from the flag. He holed his putt for a birdie 3 to Seckel's 5 and squared the match.

AFTERNOON ROUND.

Hole 1, 406 yards, par 4—Johnston sliced to a trap but made a fine recovery to six feet from the pin. Seckel's iron second ran to the right hand corner. He approached up close and got a half when Johnston missed his putt.

Hole 2, 285 yards, par 4—Seckel pulled to the rough but was home in 2, forty feet from the pin. Johnston's pitch was fifteen feet to the right and they halved in 4.

Hole 3, 410 yards, par 4—Johnston made a woeful pull landing in deep grass on the hillside. His second went only twenty yards and his third was trapped near the green. Seckel's iron was nine feet away and he won, 4 to 6. Seckel 1 up.

Hole 4, 144 yards, par 3—Seckel pushed his tee shot off to the right just getting clear of a trap. Johnston's tee shot stopped on the edge of the trap in front of the green. Seckel brought a great cheer from the gallery when he sank his sixty foot uphill putt for a 2. Johnston tried for a 2 and went wide and he lost, 3 to 2. Seckel 2 up.

Hole 5, 335 yards, par 4—Seckel's drive was straight, Johnston pulling to the rough. Johnston's mashie pitch was 55 feet to the right, but Seckel overplayed his pitch to a sand pit. He made a grand recovery to six feet from the pin. Johnston's approach putt was bad ten feet short and when his next putt was just to the edge of the cup he left Seckel a big hole. His putt went straight to the hole for a win 4 to 5. Seckel was now 3 up.

Hole 6, 128 yards, par 3—Seckel's shot over the pond was ten feet short. Johnston going by 25 feet. Jimmy overplayed his downhill putt and after Seckel had put his second dead. Jimmy blew a 3 foot putt for a 3 and lost 4 to 3. Seckel 4 up.

Hole 7, 558 yards, par 5—This was a tragedy for Seckel who after a fine drive sliced his wooden second to the deep grass. His third shot went 20 yards, his fourth, six feet and his fifth went over the green to a trap. Johnston pulled his drive to the edge of the rough and went only sixty yards on his second being still in the rough. Seckel failed to get out on his sixth and just out on his seventh. His eighth was six feet short. Johnston ran his approach put to six feet and holed for a 5. Seckel 3 up.

Hole 8, 373 yards, par 4—Johnston drove 250 yards, Seckel slicing to the rough, but getting home on his second. Johnston's pitch was 26 feet short and a little to the right and after Seckel had run his third shot close Johnston holed the best putt he had made for a win. Seckel 2 up.

Hole 9, 365 yards, par 4—Both had good drives and great pitches. Johnston missed a 5 foot putt for his birdie 3. Seckel making a 4 footer for a win, 3 and 4. Seckel was now 3 up. Seckel was out in 36, including his eight.

Hole 10, 353 yards, par 4—Johnston got home in 2 and was down in 2, Seckel taking 3 to the green and losing, 5 and 4.

Hole 11, 503 yards, par 5—Seckel played this hole finely, being on in 3 and down in 2, while Johnston pulled his iron second into the rough and had a poor out and lost, 6 to 5.

Hole 12, 458 yards, par 5—This was halved in normal fours. Seckel, 3 up.

Hole 13, 130 yards, par 3—Both got on with their tee shots. Johnston was on the inside, but he was 2½ feet over on his approach putt and missed the return. Seckel ran his second close and won, 3 to 4, making him 4 up.

Hole 14, 360 yards, par 4—This was a crucial hole for Seckel, as a half would have put him dormie 4. He sliced to the rough, and, while he got a good one, he was not home. Johnston sent a fine pitch 12 feet to the right of the pin and cinched his par 4. Seckel had an 18 foot putt and missed, losing, 5 to 4.

Hole 15, 317 yards, par 4—Both put their seconds in the green, Seckel being 14 feet to the right and Johnston 6 feet from the pin. Johnston holed for a birdie 3 and won, 3 to 4. Seckel, 2 up.

Hole 16, 248 yards, par 4—Johnston drove a long, straight ball to the green, 10 feet to the right of the pin. Seckel was 30 yards short and clipped by 12 feet and won, 3 to 4, and was 1 down.

Hole 17, 500 yards, par 5—Johnston's drive was down the middle, but Seckel sliced out of bounds. His next shot was nearly out of bounds and landed in shrubbery, from which he got a short out. His fourth was off the right corner of the green. Johnston put his second on the green 16 feet to the left of the hole and cinched his par 4, which squared the match.

Hole 18, 390 yards, par 4—Both sliced their drives. Seckel getting into light rough, but they got home on long iron shots, Seckel just getting on. He missed his long approach putt and then Johnston sank a 25 foot putt for a birdie 3 and the title.

TANK SWIMMERS SINK BRITONS IN DUAL BATTLE

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL, England, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—America's aquatic stars, fresh from their overwhelming victory in the Olympic games at Paris, today defeated the best of the British empire's water sports performers with as much ease as Uncle Sam's track and field athletes had worsted their British rivals at Stamford Hill a week ago when the Americans won eleven events and the British three.

The Americans today took nine events for a total of 70 points, while Great Britain's men and women performers accounted for two events and piled up 50 points.

Weather Conditions Bad.

Conditions for open air swimming were far from ideal, for, besides the rain which fell during several events, there was a chilly wind sweeping down upon the pool, which the competitors had to face when making for the finish line.

Andrew Charlton, the young Australian stellar performer, won the 440 yards free style swim with ease, but he would not go back to the ice cold water for more victories.

No world's records were broken, but in the first event the 110 yards free style for women, it was noticed that Miss Mariecnen Wehselau, America's only entrant in this event, was making the pace very warm for her rivals from the very beginning of the sprint. When she finally touched the rail three yards ahead of her nearest rival, she had equaled her own world's record for the distance of 1:12 2-5.

Yanks Win Polo Game.

Those who were disappointed at not seeing Great Britain pitted against the United States at water polo in the Olympic games had their desire fulfilled today. Although the final score of 2 to 1 was in favor of the Americans, there was not much to choose between the two teams in the matter of tactics. Summaries:

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALF

SIGNALS WITH DIFFERENT MEANINGS.

BLUE PETER, echo, reverse and high low are names for the same play in auction bridge. The meaning of the signal, however, differs according to the declaration.

At no-trump the echo means command of the suit in which it is used, or at any rate, high card strength in that suit. Thus with a no-trump declaration at your right, from a holding of king and three small diamonds, you could discard first the third best and then the lowest, unless the ace of diamonds lay at your left in dummy. The player at the right of the declarer could not echo from the same holding unless the ace lay in dummy.

It is by no means always wise to show strength in a suit when you have the requisite cards in that suit. For instance, holding ace and small cards with the king at your left in dummy, it would be extremely foolish to advise the declarer that his king was in a safe position. Players must always consider to whom information will be more valuable.

When there is a declared trump the echo means that the player using it has no more cards in that suit. It should never be used for any other purpose, such as showing that the user holds a guarded queen. Suits rarely go around three times when there is a declared trump and the third player is unable to tell how many cards in that suit his partner held originally. Following is an example: The declaration was three spades and the king and ace of hearts were opened at declarer's left. Third hand holding queen, eight, deuce, played the eight and then the deuce. The third round of hearts was led and declarer trumped, establishing the ten of hearts in dummy and giving the declarer the game and rubber. It is always dangerous to try to make one play mean two entirely different things.

bid two no trump and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

West secured six tricks only.

The play of the deal occurred at trick three. North overtook his partner's king of spades with the ace, thereby establishing the spade suit for the adversaries. North did not know that his partner had no more spades and it was probable, therefore, that the play of the ace would lose a trick. North did know, however, that he could defeat the declarer's contract by getting in at once and playing his only remaining diamond through the queen exposed in the dummy. Had the king of spades held the trick, west would have made the rubber with ease.

The next deal shows an unblocking play of a very different order.

West scored ten tricks.

The declarer's success in the last deal resulted from his unblocking with the nine and ten of trumps, in order that the eight of spades might win a trick in dummy. Game would have been impossible had he failed to preserve the trey of spades until the proper moment. It was necessary, of course, to finesse the ten of hearts after finding the ace of that suit in the wrong hand.

CURTAIN FALLS ON OLYMPIC GAMES TODAY

PARIS, July 26.—[By Associated Press.]—The formal ceremonies of bringing to a close the Olympic games of 1924 will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Colombes stadium which was the scene of a chief part of America's sweeping triumph in the protracted international athletic battle.

While probably a majority of the athletes of the forty-five competiting nations have already left for home, a representative group including members from nearly all the nations in addition to officials of the committee is expected to take part in the formalities over which Baron Pierre De Coubertin, president of the International Olympic committee, will preside.

The ceremonies will follow the conclusion of the equestrian sports in the stadium, which, with the cycling events being held at Vincennes, mark the end of the Olympic competition, which has been in progress since last January in twenty branches of sporting activity.

GRAEME EQUALS OLD TRACK MARK AT HAWTHORNE

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Camden owned 3 year old Graeme tied the Hawthorne track record when he raced to victory in the $2,500 Hotel La Salle handicap yesterday. Jockey McDermott figured as prominently in the victory as Graeme himself, for it was his beautiful ride that sent the Blue Grass turf aristocrat under the wire in front.

It was Graeme's first Hawthorne victory despite the fact that he has been trying almost since the meeting opened. Each race showed him running in improved form however, and the public took a fancy to him yesterday. McDermott was content to let him trail at the start, but moved up in the backstretch and took the lead on the last turn.

Chicago Horse Second.

The Chicago owned Postillion after making the early pace dropped back before the rush of Graeme and was second. Bourbon Boy, the favorite, was third most of the way and was in that position at the wire. It was another near record breaking day at the west side turf battle ground.

In the first race Tangerine, owned by Mrs. A. Swenke, of Baltimore, came along to win and shatter the mile and three-sixteenths record. He ran the distance in 1:59, beating out a band of famous distance runners. The Archer was the favorite but finished second.

Like Graeme, Tangerine scored his triumph by a mighty stretch sprint after The Archer and Over Fire had made all the early running.

15,000 See Races.

Upwards of 15,000 half holiday pleasure seekers and racegoers watched the day's sport. It was probably the most colorful throng of the season at Hawthorne, Derby Day excepted.

While Graeme's triumph marked the high spot, the most popular victory came in the running of the Pullman handicap, in which the Kentucky filly Sanola was the victor. The triumph was the fifth of the Hawthorne season for the bluegrass miss, and, while she did not make a record breaking pace, she outran her field throughout the six furlongs and snatched the purse by a nose from the far western dark horse, Moss Fox II.

When Sanola came to Hawthorne three weeks ago, she probably could have been purchased for a few thousand dollars. Her performances here have made her a $25,000 bit of thoroughbred flesh, and she may go on in the coming fall season to beat the best fillie sin America.

Favorites Upset.

The program provided some of the best racing of the season. Good sized fields accepted the issue in most instances, and the sport was of the highest order in every contest. Favorites were upset in striking regularity.

After Tangerine had broken a record running the first race, Riviera, Chicago filly owned by R. D. Robson, captured the two year old special, the Douglas Park purse, by a length and a half, outracing her rivals at every post. She might have won by a much handier margin, had Jockey Weiner crowded her in the late going. The favorite, Georgia Rose, was up close enough to claim the place money while Mark Master, after running a good race, was next under the wire.

The running of the fifth brought still another form upset when seven year old Betsinda raced to the front and stayed there long enough to win. Humble was second and was crowding the winner at the finish.

Flower Shop Wins Again.

Little Mack Garner and Flower Shop triumphed in the last race. It was their third straight victory within a week, and was won just as handily as they had gone to the front a couple of days ago. The contest was one of the best of the day. The Honolulu 4 year old Kau-ila, showing much late speed, finished second, with Plus Ultra, the early leader, third.

It was the first triumph of a favorite throughout the afternoon. Extra Edition and Rock Bottom were long shot good things, but they had nothing to say about it once the stretch battle was on.

CHAMPIONS BEAT FLORSHEIMS.

The St. Michael semi-pro champions walloped the Florsheim All Stars 6 to 1 at the Michaels' field yesterday. Chester Sullivan's three base hit in the seventh inning scored two runs and put the game on ice for the Michaels. Score:

NORTH SHORE TAKES SOCCER LEAGUE TITLE

By defeating Western Electric in the final game of the Chicago and district league's season, the North Shore soccer team won the league championship for the season 1923-1924, finishing one point ahead of Harvey.

The Evanstonians thereby achieve the distinction of having won gold medals twice and silver medals once during the last three years. Last season Harvey nosed out North Shore for the championship.

In the second division, American Jugo-Slav easily won the gold medals of its division, having lost no games, and tieing only one. The Jugo-Slav team, this season, has characterized its play with a fine degree of sportsmanship which has been a revelation to all soccer enthusiasts.

The Chicago and district soccer league already is preparing for the coming season, which is expected to be a record breaker in the number of teams competing. The annual meeting, at which entries for the coming season will be received, will be held Thursday at 8 o'clock, in the Great Northern hotel. Standing:

CONTRACTS LET FOR NEW AURORA MILE RACE TRACK

Aurora, Ill., July 26.—[Special.]—Contracts for a ten year lease of the racing plant at Exposition Park, a million dollar fair grounds north of here, and for the building of a mile track, club house and additional stables were signed here today by Charles E. Ford, one of the lessees of the Hawthorne race track in Chicago.

It was announced that a 25 day running meeting will be held at the park this fall and that starting next year there will be 60 days of racing, 30 days in May and 30 in September.

Ford represented members of the Fox River Valley Business Men's Jockey club, who have placed $100,000 in a fund to pay the cost of enlarging the plant.

Work Starts Tomorrow.

The contract for building the track was awarded to H. H. Enbody & Co., of Aurora, and work will be started Monday with four steam shovels and sixty teams. Day and night shifts will be worked in order to have the track completed in time for the fall meeting.

The lease for the grounds was secured from the Central States Fair and Exposition association, owners of the park. It was announced that the construction work will in no way interfere with the horse and automobile racing at the third annual Central States fair, Aug. 15 to 23.

A twenty day running meeting was held on the half mile track at Exposition Park by Ford and his associates last summer. At that time negotiations for leasing the grounds and building the mile track and other improvements were started but the contracts were not signed until today.

The seating capacity of the present steel and concrete grandstand is 15,000 and 300 horses can be accommodated in the stables already up. Barns for 600 additional horses are to be built at once. Work on the club house and paddock will also be in progress while the new mile track, which will have a quarter mile straight way in the main stretch, is being built.

Special Trains to Grounds.

Arrangements have been made with the Northwestern railroad to run special trains from the Northwestern passenger station directly into the grounds. A branch of the railroad runs through the park and Chicago fans will be unloaded 100 feet from the entrance to the grandstand. Two main paved highways, the Roosevelt and Ogden avenue roads, lead from Chicago directly to the main entrance of the park.

Under the terms of the contract the racing plant will be used by the Central States Fair association at all times of the year but the dates of the spring and fall running meeting.

HOPPE GRANTED DIVORCE DECREE ON JURY VERDICT

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—An interlocutory decree of divorce for William Hoppe, billiard champion, from Mrs. Alice Beatrice Hoppe, was filed in the Supreme court today, based on the verdict of a jury finding Mrs. Hoppe guilty of misconduct with a traveling salesman at the Hotel Imperial last November. The evidence was obtained in a raid in which Mr. Hoppe's mother took part.

The decree directs the disposition of the children, Alice Beatrice, 12, and William Thomas, 5 years old. The father is to put the daughter in a Catholic boarding school and she is to divide her vacations equally with her parents. The mother also is to have the boy for certain months of the year, and will receive $60 a month for his support when he is with her.

A. GUMP, R. H. L., MANY OTHERS AT TODAY'S BENEFIT

HELP! HELP!

HELP, Help, Harvey Woodruff, conductor of The Wake of the News, has promised to attend the baseball game at the Cub park this afternoon and take part in the festivities.

The game is for charity. The proceeds will be used for giving poor children vacations in the country. Fans of the Wake should come to the game and see Help Help himself.

Baseball fans will get a chance to see some good sport this afternoon at the Cubs park when the Algonquin Indians meet THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE nine in combat. The game will be called at 3 o'clock.

The affair is staged for charity, the proceeds of the game going to the Camp Algonquin fund and THE TRIBUNE Free Ice fund, two most worthy philanthropies THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE conducts each summer for the benefit of the poor mothers and children of Chicago. The free ice fund provides free ice tickets for the poor mothers. The camp gives a vacation in the country each year for poor kids who suffer from the city's heat and dirt.

Andy Gump to See Game.

As a curtain raiser to the diamond activities a list of TRIBUNE cartoonists will stage some entertainment. Sidney Smith, the daddy of Andy Gump, will knock out flies. Frank Willard, who created Moon Mullins, will exhibit some trick baserunning. Carl Ed, who imagined and then made famous Harold Teen, the male snocker, will be there. Carey Orr and Gaar Williams, editorial cartoonists, will attend.

Richard Henry Little, conductor of the Line o' Type or Two, with his famous goat, Vangie, will also be among those present. He will be the master of ceremonies. A band will offer music. Pretty girls will sell programs. Then will come the ball game.

The Algonquin Indians have been dishing up some excellent baseball this summer. Some of the semi-pro stars of the city are on the team's roster and they have played together for three years.

College Stars on Trib Team.

THE TRIBUNE team is composed of TRIBUNE employés and many of them are college and semi-pro stars. Ben Thelan, the skipper of the crew, says the game will be a tussle from start to finish.

The general admission to this game will be $1. Children under 12 years old can pay a quarter and sit in the grand stand. The bleachers will be 25 cents and boxes of six seats are selling at $10 a copy.

Try This Test
TAKE two or three friends for a ride in your car. Cover the speedometer and at a certain point ask them to guess the car's speed and make a note of it. By driving with the hand accelerator you can maintain an even speed, long enough to guess and then look at the speedometer. The results will surprise you.
Remember that an error of even 2 or 3 miles in guessing speed would place you in danger of arrest were it over the speed limit.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 26.—[Special.]—Chicago's young Cubs paid no attention to the umpires today but instead they went out and played ball for all get out against the Phillies, the result being a clean and decisive victory in the second game of the series, 5 to 1. It broke a winning streak that the Phils had enjoyed for five successive games and sent a crowd of 12,000 highly excited fans home in grief.

With Manager Killefer banished for three days because of strong language used on the previous day when the boys tried to beat the umpires instead of the Phils, the boys were instructed to forget the mistakes of the arbitrators today and give all their attention to the game.

Manager Bill sat in a box at the end of the Cubs' dugout and spoke words of advice to his men all through the contest, showing that a suspension in these times is mostly a joke.

Batting Order Changed.

The Cubs were given a bit of a shake up after a meeting at the hotel this morning. Gabby Hartnett, who has been hitting the cover off the ball, was moved into the clean up position in the batting order. Then at the field, when it was learned that Clarence Mitchell would pitch for the enemy with his left hand, it was decided to put Hack Miller in left field in place of Grigsby and Bob Barrett on first base in place of Cotter.

The shift gave the Cubs a lot of punch, the hardest puncher of the lot being young Mr. Barrett, who was placed down next to the pitcher in the batting line. He poled two singles and a home run, the latter blow being a terrific line drive that landed among the spectators in the left bleachers. All of the boys, excepting Friberg and Keen, were smashing the ball and a total of a dozen blows were collected.

Keen Swell Hurler.

Mr. Keen didn't have to wallop the ball. He was a great pitcher and devoted his time with intensity toward getting the other fellows out.

A bit of wildness was his only fault, the lone tally counted by the Phils being forced home with a base on balls. Looked like a perfect strike, too, from the press stand, but the boys made no squawk. They simply swallowed a couple of times and never said a word.

Killefer's gang got to Mitchell in the fourth round for a couple of runs and really needed no more. After one was out, Hartnett began an attack with a single. Friberg fanned, but Hack Miller delivered a successful punch to right that sent Gabby to third. Vogel also slapped one into right that scored Hartnett, while Hack stopped at second and then Barrett slammed one to right that put Hack home and Vogel on third. Barrett then swiped second, but Keen fanned.

Two More In Next Inning.

In the next round the game was put on ice with two more runs, the attack starting with a single by Statz on a sizzler that skipped off Sand's fingers. Hollocher flied out but Adams bounced a nasty one down third base way and Wrightstone tried for a force play at second but was too late. Right then Mr. Hartnett proved that it was worth while having him in the cleanup position. He cleaned up with a two bagger to left that sent Statz in and put Adams on third from where he galloped home on Friberg's long sacrifice fly to Williams.

The game was pretty well salted with those two tallies, but Barrett demonstrated to the manager and the public that the team needs him to hit against left handers when in the next round, he poled his four baser off Mr. Mitchell.

In Distress in Eighth.

Keen's only distress was in the eighth when Mitchell led off with a single. Mokan batted for Sand and singled and then Emery ran for Sand. Harper drew a pass, filling the bases with none out. In this crisis old Cy Willims tapped to Keen who knocked the ball down and recovered in time to force Mitchell at home.

Schultz fanned, after objecting to his second strike so hard that Manager Fletcher entered the argument and was put off the field. Wrightstone then drew a base on balls and forced Emery to count after which Holke died on a fly to Miller.

Ford opened the ninth with a single but Henline ruined the last hope by hitting into a double play, after which Mitchell ended the game with a fly to Miller.

The Cubs will rest here tomorrow and renew the scrap with the Phils on Monday.

NORMALS STILL IN THE DIAMOND WORLD; PLAY FUQUA GIANTS TODAY

It's a cinch that the fellow who started the rumor to the effect that the Normals had disbanded will discover he was wrong when the south side semi-pro aggregation goes to bat against the Fuqua Giants at Normal Park today. Jim Keown, Normal manager, yesterday emphatically denied the report that his team had given up its season. He is still performing at the old stand, 61st and Racine, and dispensing the real article of baseball, he said. Sam Crawford will pitch for the Giants Sunday, while either Neckerman or Overlock may toss for the Normals. Other Chicago league games today are:

Chicago Elks at Elgin, All Chicagos at Joliet, Chicago Giants at Murley park, Rogers Parks at Cermak park, House of David at St. Michaels, Cubans and American Giants at Schorling's [two games], Romeos and Blues at California and Morse, Cragins at Glen View, Speedboys at Blue Island, Florsheims at J. & B. park, Cicero at Highland Park, Belle Plaines and Atkins & Freund at Welles park, Roseland at West Side Sportsmen, Greers at East Chicago, Pirates and Hoffmans at Morton Grove, Algonquin and Tribune at Cubs' park.

NIESENS CHANGE LINEUP FOR LAST BELOIT CONTEST

Beloit finishes its series here this afternoon at Niesen's park, playing the Niesens in a Midwest league game. Manager Bill Niesen signed up George Metter, formerly of Simmons, for shortstop and has released Bill Harley. Paddy Driscoll will move out to left field and Buddy Allen is now entirely recovered and will strengthen the club at second base.

The Logan Squares finish up at Massillon, O., today, their last game of the season in Ohio. Other Midwest games today are: Simmons at Racine and Canton at Nash.

BIG TEN GRIDIRON GAME IS SHIFTED

Columbus, O., July 26.—Ohio State will play Indiana here November 8, making six at home football engagements instead of five as planned, according to announcement today. The Indiana game was to have been played at Bloomington, opening the new Hoosier stadium, but was transferred because of difficulties which arose in the construction of the new athletic plant.

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON THE BASS FISHING GAME.

After fishing over a period of several weeks in the Flambeau Indian reservation in Vilas county, Wis., and keeping a sort of record of the different lures and methods used with results attained, it doesn't take so long to figure that early morning fishing methods and midday fishing methods must often be quite different—if a fellow wants to catch any fish. Moreover, this fact is also worthy of comment: Before fishing a lake that you have never seen, better inquire whether it is a clear or a dark water lake as some bodies of water containing all kinds of fish aren't worth a rap on clear days as far as casting is concerned unless early morning or late evening fishing is resorted to.

One day we visited a dandy little bass lake that is known to be well stocked with both large and small mouth bass. We didn't hit this lake until midafternoon and one look at its clear water and unruffled surface was enough to give us the hunch that there was nothing doing in the way of casting. Artificials didn't stir up anything. Then is when live bait rings the bell. Ben had brought along some minnows as he contends that first, last, and all the time there is nothing like live bait for Mr. Bass. Working the deep water of the edges of weed beds and near the tips of old snags yielded eleven bass in short order. Midday fishing, if the day is clear, the sun bright, and the bass even slightly educated, usually means fishing with the old standbys, minnows or frogs. On a wilderness inaccessible little bass lake which is fished but four or five times a year, live bait was not needed and the feathers and spinners raised hob with those uneducated bass.

In hot weather and on a clear day the hard working fisherman might just as well lay off in the middle of the day and take a nap after lunch or otherwise kill time until late afternoon, as there isn't much doing at that time. In the cool of the evening when the fish come out of deep water and go into the shallower parts of the lake to feed is when a fellow can expect to connect up with the scrappers. If there is a hatch of flies and many are dropping on the surface of the lake you can see the bass more than feeding on the surface while along the shore the big fellows will be splashing around after minnows.

Just a short time ago we rowed across Fat lake in the Flambeau Indian reservation when the sun was just disappearing below the horizon. Rowing close to the weed beds along the shore we saw bass cracking away at the minnows and a few casts into the shallow water soon showed us that they were on the job, whereas in the middle of the day all the fish would have been in cool deep water.

NEW TROPHY IS PRIZE AT ROBY AUTO RACES

Three speed events and a tire changing stunt are on the card for decision at Roby speedway, 108th and Indianapolis avenue today. Heavy cars and light cars will each race ten miles, the fastest cars to qualify for the Sheldon Clark trophy race of twenty miles. Many famous drivers are entered for the events, among them the holders of all mid-west dirt track marks. Al Cotey, Leslie Allen, and Cliff Woodbury are expected to feature the heavy car event. Paul Clancy, piloting a 183 inch Frontenac, will be the only entrant not driving a rebuilt Ford in the light car races. The events will start at 2:30. Entries:

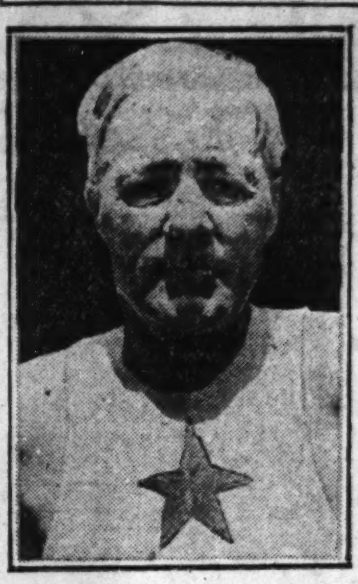
LOOK OUT, KIDS!



George Stokes, on Aug 9, his sixty-ninth birthday, will attempt to lower the pedestrian record for 100 miles between Milwaukee and Chicago. The record of 21 hours 56 minutes was hung up a score of years ago by a Chicago walker, Henry Schmell.

Stokes, sprightly and eager to get back into the game, promises to leave Milwaukee the evening of Aug. 8 and wind up his jaunt at Logan Square, Chicago, on Aug 9 well under 21 hours. He is an Englishman by birth, is the only pedestrian ever to have defeated Dan O'Leary. In Kansas City in 1912, they walked twelve hours a day for six days. Stokes registered 418 miles against O'Leary's 416 miles.

Race Pilots Split Honors with Motor Makers for Year

Gold and Perfect Motors Line the Wake of Speedsters.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Close to $300,000 in prize money for automobile racing events was distributed by the contest board of the American Automobile association during 1923, according to figures just made public at the Washington headquarters of the A. A. A. This covers eighty-eight events, sixty-six of which were on dirt tracks.

Altogether 334 cars were registered in this contest work, which is generally regarded as the backbone of American automotive engineering development. Exactly 525 drivers were required to handle these cars with an additional 210 mechanicians to keep them burning the road.

The contest board points to the unpopularity of reliability and economy runs as evidence of the great change that has come over motoring as a result of the speed events. The report shows that there was but one reliability and economy run sanctioned during the last year.

"The reliability run is no longer necessary," the board's bulletin reads. "The remarkable performance displayed by small displacement racing cars and the ability of these cars to withstand the punishment of a 500-mile speedway event is proof enough to the average motorist that the American car manufacturers, and the accessory manufacturers, have been able to place reliability on a remarkably high plane. The public enjoys an occasional 'stunt,' but the big 'stunt' is the way cars stand up on the speedways and dirt tracks.

"Under sanctions of the A. A. A. contest board 2,050 miles were run off on the speedways as against 3,170 on the dirt tracks. Every mile of this was a reliability run in itself."

"So far as economy is concerned, the average car owner nowadays is more interested in the economy of car life rather than in gas mileage. He knows that the lessons learned from the race track are being applied to the building of more trustworthy cars, which in the long run is the real economy to consider.

"The biggest amount of prize money was distributed at the speedways. These eight big events involved prizes amounting to $205,000, paid to the people who make a business of making the automobile perform beyond our greatest expectations, and $91,075 was distributed at the dirt tracks.

"On July 5 Jimmy Murphy headed the list in the annual A. A. A. championship race with 1,095 points to his credit. Cooper followed with 600, Corum with 570, Fengler with 548 and Hartz with 351. Comer, Hill, Wonderlich, and Milton are all under 300 but above the 200 mark. Boyer stands at 15, Vail at 34 and Durant at 5, but one is reminded that the year is still young."

WITH a grand total of 103 golf courses offered to tired business men and women—as we go to press—Chicago and its environs may well be pictured as it is here, in the shadow of the omnipresent golf ball.

The map is worked out in detail for the benefit of all motorists who mix bogey with their driving, with the paved and good gravel roads leading to each course plainly indicated.

In heading for the course at Genoa City, it will be well to use the Antioch-Wilmot-Twin lakes route at present and until construction work in the Fox lake district is completed. Roosevelt road is closed from 17th avenue, Maywood, east with Washington boulevard to 17th avenue the best detour. The Ogden avenue road is now complete and open into Aurora and that troublesome detour has been eliminated.

Crack State Road.

The new concrete pavement under construction on the Lincoln highway between Aurora and Plainfield, a distance of fifteen miles, is being rushed by the state highway department, and the work is expected to be completed this season.

Upon the opening of the new section late this fall the Lincoln highway will follow a new alignment into Aurora, eliminating railroad crossings and right angle turns. This section is the final stretch of the Lincoln to be paved in Illinois and completes the program undertaken in 1916. Prior to that date there was no pavement on the highway in this state outside of municipal limits. Next spring through travelers will cross Illinois from the Indiana line to the Mississippi river on the Lincoln on a completed, connecting concrete pavement which has cost the state of Illinois over $5,000,000 to construct.

ANIMALS ON ROADS.

All of the wild animals in the world don't live in Minnesota woods. Some of them are allowed to drive autos on our highways.—Wadena News.

Money and Shade Trees to Improve Roads in Ontario

TORONTO, Ont. — Twenty-eight million dollars will be spent by Ontario in surfacing highways throughout the province with a permanent cement top in the next five years, according to Premier G. Howard Ferguson, in a statement to the provincial legislature.

There are 700 miles of road in the province requiring such surfacing. The cost per mile for the work, Ferguson said, will be between $35,000 and $45,000, based on 1923 prices of material. Work has already begun on three highways and by the end of the season it is expected 150 miles will be finished with hard surface.

"Ontario," said Mr. Ferguson, "has the most extensive system of hard roads in Canada. Paved highways already total more than 1,000 miles. At the present rate of building the province will be unequalled anywhere before very long."

Highway improvement is going forward rapidly throughout eastern Canada. Nova Scotia has spent $12,000,000 on good roads in the last four years, according to Hon. William Chisholm, provincial minister of highways. During this time more than 700 miles of main trunk roads have been reconstructed and 1,500 miles of secondary road improved. Bridge building and culvert construction have represented an outlay of $4,000,000. The province is making an effort to attract tourist traffic by providing up-to-date roads.

Quebec highways will be beautified by trees this summer, according to J. L. Perron, minister of roads. Ten thousand trees, he said, will be planted along the Montreal-Quebec highway and the Montreal-Sherbrooke road within the next few months.

Canada's investment in good roads represents nearly $600,000,000, according to government statistics.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for The Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question C. A. Eland, 1636 Cortland street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

How do you picture motoring in 1934?

Where Asked.

Addison street and Lincoln avenue.

The Answers.

Arthur Fischer, 1746 Newport avenue, cutter—I can imagine a big improvement in driving a car ten years from now. In the first place, I believe that we will have wide paved roads leading out of every city, with the passenger car and truck traffic separated; express and local roads, carrying the fast and slow machines, and the pavements made safe by elevated intersections, guard rails, and one way streets. I think there will be more but cheaper cars, and that all of them will go faster with safety.

Frank Koir, 1539 Wolfram street, bowler—If we keep on the way we are going today, in 1934 we'll all be stuck in the kind of traffic jam that nobody can break. They'll be serving us meals in the car unless the subway is built and we have more parking room.

Joseph A. Weber, 2924 Southport avenue, retired—The biggest change we will see in 1934, in my opinion, will be in the improvement of our city streets. I believe that a subway in Chicago will probably be started at least by that time and that subway boulevards will be built to take care of fast travel and through automobiles. Elevated sidewalks or something of the sort will probably separate the pedestrian and automobile traffic and save the constant mixups between the two. There will probably be more air traffic in those days, too, and congestion will be done away with.

John H. Fichter Jr., 3325 Lincoln avenue, real estate—We may all be flying by that time, but I believe that the people who need automobiles will have smaller, cheaper cars to use, and that the streets and roads will be improved so that they can use them to the best advantage. Maybe by then we can do away with traffic cops, too. If streets and roads are built to serve the traffic and make it safe, justices of the peace and coppers may not be necessary.

Joseph Feeley, 3040 Greenview avenue, molder—I can see better roads and smaller, more economical cars as the rule ten years from now. By then I think that almost all of the main roads in the country will be thirty-six or more feet wide and lighted at night, and that overhead or subway avenues will carry most of the traffic in cities.

Open New Plant.

A branch assembly plant is being established in Stockholm by a well known American manufacturer of light cars, Acting Commercial Attaché H. Sorenson reports. It began operations in June. As in the case of the branch at Copenhagen, the organization of the plant will take the form of a native share company with a capital of 1,000,000 crowns, practically all of which will be in the hands of the parent company.

"One-Shot" Lubrication System

AMERICA has never known an automotive success more sweeping and brilliant than that of the 1925 Cleveland Six.

More than a million have seen it! More than a million have marveled at the new convenience feature it introduces—the "One-Shot" Lubrication System.

No Grimy Hands

If you're tired of using the grease gun and oil can to silence squeaks and prevent worn parts—take ten minutes to inspect this exclusive, patented feature. A plunger projects through the floor board. When you step on it all twenty-three vital parts of the car are lubricated. No grimy hands! No wasted hours! Simplicity itself!

Mileage Motor

One ride in the 1925 Cleveland Six will reveal the spectacular performance mastery of the Mileage Motor. Silent, smooth and economical, this new and larger power plant ranks with the outstanding motors of the day. Its speed, acceleration and hill climbing powers were never before offered in any car of comparable size and price.

Balloon Tires

Nor was such a low priced car ever so comfortable at all speeds. Scientifically hung springs prevent side-sway. A longer wheel base eliminates jouncing. And the genuine balloon tires which are furnished at no extra cost turn all roads into boulevards.

4-Wheel Brakes

Front wheel brakes are optional at a few dollars extra. These are of Cleveland Six design. Their efficiency and simplicity are exceptional.

We urge you to see and drive this newest and finest of sixes! Superbly beautiful bodies. One ride will reveal the reason for its sweeping national success!

Low Cost Now—or Lower Cost Later

Valve—one-piece construction. Drop-forged, chrome nickel steel, double heat-treated. Common practice is to use a two-piece valve with a cast iron head welded to a steel stem; which construction does not wear as long and danger of breakage is increased.

There is such a thing as paying too little for a motor car—just as there is such a thing as paying too little for a suit of clothes.

It has been proved, time after time, that it costs less per mile for the comfortable, satisfactory mileage the Hupmobile affords.

No car of lower price can equal it for actual low cost per mile—investment, upkeep, and operation all considered.

In other words, the Hupmobile owner actually enjoys the brilliant, reliable performance of his car, its remarkable freedom from tuning and tinkering, at less total cost per mile than any lower priced car we know of can give him.

Let us tell you the facts discovered by Hupmobile owners—and see, in our Parts Display, the reasons for Hupmobile's saving service.

Field Museum

Chicago is rightly proud of the Field Museum, in which the habits and thought of other eras and ages are reflected by the relics that have been handed down by the centuries. To view, among other things, the crude vehicles of bygone epochs is to realize how very fortunate a person is to live in this modern age of the Automobile.

ON the basis of the happiness Overland brings to owners, it is worth many, many times its price—for who can set a price on happiness? The wonder is that Overland, with all its quality, costs so very little to buy.

You buy automobiles for the freedom and pleasure they bring you. You buy them for what they are, for what is in them, for what they will do for you. Judged by these things, or by any test you give it, Overland amply merits its reputation as the most car in the world for the money.

Overland is every ounce and every inch a reliable motor car—the only touring car under $800 with an all-steel body... the only touring car under $800 with a genuine baked enamel finish... the only touring car at the price with a speedometer, foot accelerator, disc clutch, fully adjustable windshield as standard equipment.

An easy-riding car noted for its patented springs that gently pull instead of push the wheels over bumps ...noted for the strength of its Mo-lyb-den-um rear axle, 50% heavier than that of any car under $700 ...noted for big power...noted for big mileage on gasoline and oil... noted for staying clear of the repair shop!

There is no getting away from it—Overland has the right stuff in it—qualities that tell in the long run —a satisfaction value that outweighs many times over the car's actual dollar value. Buy Overland and you buy advantages over and above the mechanical advantages of the car itself. You buy the key to all outdoors...independence to go when and where you please... seven-league boots to carry you to new scenes and pleasures...fresh air, health and happiness.

Traffic Pressure Increases on Cook County Highways

New Freight Traffic Plan Promised by W. S. Engineers.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

FIELD workers in the survey of Cook county highways being made by the federal government and the Cook county highway department began their second round of the field stations Friday morning. When the working parties checked in Thursday night each of the eighty-seven stations where data is being collected had been occupied at least once, and within a few days summaries giving a fairly accurate idea of the traffic being carried by Cook county roads will be available.

Before the work is completed, late in October or early in November, each of the stations will have been occupied for the full period of twenty-four hours on different days of the week. In addition numerous special surveys will be made, at selected points, which will be a check on the other traffic figures and enable the investigators to strike an average which past experience has shown is an almost wholly accurate count of the number of vehicles using the highways.

One result of the check of passenger cars has shown that long distance tourists are not routing themselves around Chicago to an extent. At station 81, on 147th street, between State and Halsted streets, between 6:30 a. m. and 4 p. m. on July 18, 495 passenger cars were enumerated, and among them were the following long distance travelers:

Cumberland, W. Va., to Alberta, Calgary; Columbus, O., to Denver; Chicago to Atlanta, Ga.; Paducah, Ky., to Kenosha; Niagara Falls to Milwaukee; Detroit to Fort Worth, Tex.; St. Paul to Cleveland; Washington, D. C., to Logan Square; Indianapolis to Ashland, Wis.; Milwaukee to New York; Chicago to New York; Washington, D. C., to Waupaca, Wis.; Fresno, Cal., to New London, Conn. (two cars traveling together); Little Rock, Ark., to Chicago; Austin to Sawyer, Mich., and Alexandria, La., to Milwaukee. The last was a family making the trip in a truck.

A sample of the truck traffic on a fairly heavily traveled road is shown by the daylight figures for Station 62, Lyons between Ogden and Archer avenues. The checkers listed 521 trucks. Of these 245 were empty. Twelve carried bakery goods, 88 crushed stone, 7 milk, 30 building supplies, 11 oil and gasoline, 17 fruit and farm produce, 13 groceries, 10 laundry, and 88 miscellaneous cargoes.

Prof. J. G. McKay, chief of the division of highway economics of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, under whose general supervision the survey is being conducted, spent four days in Chicago during the past week, and was well pleased with the progress being made. He expressed himself as especially appreciative of the co-operation being given by the motoring public. In the first two weeks of the survey only twenty-five drivers refused to stop, out of nearly 30,000 vehicles passing the observing stations.

As a direct result of the Cook county campaign, Prof. McKay has ordered a detailed investigation of highway freight transportation with Chicago as the middle west center and terminal. This work, to be done by government engineers, will be launched before Aug. 1 and is expected to result in an official freight traffic highway plan for the middle west.

Federal forces will compile data concerning every move of trucks in the Chicago territory—their ownership, capacity, points of departure and destination, what they carry, profits derived and their relation to railroads and industries, their routes and highway needs. The first investigation will cover the heavy tonnage freight zone about Chicago, and is expected to include such points as Elgin, Aurora, Joliet, Hammond, Kankakee and the Calumet district generally. If the traffic warrants the engineers expect to extend their investigation to other terminal points such as Milwaukee, Madison, Rockford, Springfield, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Fort Wayne and other cities in the second zone.

Facts and figures gathered in this survey, it is expected, will serve to substantiate the campaign for 36-foot pavements within a radius of at least 100 miles of Chicago and complete the data on the need of new belt line and terminal freight highways.

Progress in Peru.

Completion of a twelve kilometer highway between Callao and Lima, which is expected during July, should do much to stimulate motor transport in Peru, says Consul C. E. Guyant in a report from Callao. Callao is the principal port of entry in the country and over 60 per cent of the total imports pass through that harbor. A large share of these imports is taken to Lima for distribution throughout the republic. The present means of transportation is by two wheeled carts or by the railroad. The haul being so short, it is expected that auto trucks will replace the old style of transportation to a large extent and auto dealers are looking forward to the opening of the road with considerable anticipation.

MASTER OF LAST ROUND.

Jack Dempsey added a new sport to his accomplishments the other day when he officiated as starter for the automobile races held on the famous Ascot speedway, Los Angeles. Note the footwork he employs in giving the winner the checkered flag! [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

TWENTY-ONE well known automobile manufacturers have placed their stamp of approval on genuine, full size balloon tires and are furnishing them as standard equipment on all models following more than a year of rigid tire tests, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Firestone Tire and Rubber company through J. P. Patterson, Chicago branch manager. The statement adds that the original principles of gum dipping and side wall construction used in the Firestone pioneer tire are going into the tire today.

The Federal Motor Truck company, through its president, M. L. Pulcher, has announced the production of the "Federal-Knight," a speedy business truck, at a chassis list price of $1,095. The new truck is the result of the friendly association of Pulcher with John N. Willys, producer of the popular Willys-Knight motor.

Paige and Jewett cars, for the third successive year, ran away with the honors in the Albany hill climb this month. A Jewett lowered the hill record by 22 seconds in spite of the longthening of the course this year from eight-tenths to nine-tenths of a mile. Forty-nine cars competed in the famous test, which was run under A. A. A. sanction this year.

Increasing Franklin business is shown by reports of over 250 per cent more shipments made during the first half of July as compared with the corresponding period in June of this year.

The Stutz company has announced a new "Toursedan," a custom built car priced at but a slight advance over open models and embodying all of the latest developments in body construction.

FARM AND GARDEN

Tale of Two City Girls Who Traded Jobs for a Farm

Are Applying Business Principles and Proving That It Pays.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

EAST-OF-THE-CHIMNEYS, a chicken, goat and dog farm near Batavia, Ill., is being successfully run by two former Chicago girls, who got tired of the hubbub, hurry up life of the "city of go." They traded their jobs of running the business end of a dramatic magazine for the task of gathering eggs, milking goats, and feeding whining pups, all for the purpose of making a living in the open.

The two girls, Miss Julia Clymer, former advertising manager, and Miss Estelle Snow, former circulation manager of the Drama magazine, bought the East-of-the-Chimneys farm of fifteen acres and took charge of it about a year and a half ago. They resigned their positions, donned knickerbockers and started out in a field quite foreign to dramatics. In managing the farm and selling eggs, chickens, goats' milk and puppies they are employing the same business principles and salesmanship methods they used in adding new names to the magazine's list of subscribers and selling white space to advertisers.

What Women Can Do.

They found what city people want to buy—eggs, milk, chickens and pups—and picked out animals that women can easily manage and care for. They have demonstrated to city and country girls that there are other ways for a woman to make a living besides pounding typewriters, measuring ribbon, making hats, dressing hair, manicuring, or operating a telephone switchboard.

On the farm, in the Fox river valley a half mile southeast of Batavia, the two girls do all of the work. Ten acres of the place are used to grow alfalfa, which furnishes range and pasture for goats and chickens. An orchard, grape arbor, vegetable garden and farm buildings cover the other five acres.

All their eggs are shipped to special customers, who pay a premium price. The 660 layers kept on the place throughout the year produce on an average of 225 dozens of eggs a week; 205 dozens are sold to a candy store and two restaurants in Chicago. The other twenty dozen are sold to individuals.

Getting Premium Prices.

The three business firms pay a premium price of 5 cents a dozen above the highest price quoted in THE TRIBUNE each day. The buyers pay the transportation cost both ways, so that the price to the East-of-the-Chimneys farm is net. These eggs are shipped by express in thirty dozen cases at a cost of 48 cents a case from Batavia to Chicago, a distance of 32 miles.

The individual customers, in order to get fresh eggs from the country, pay a premium of 10 cents a dozen above the highest quotation and also pay the parcel post charges, 6 cents a dozen.

Through this direct method of selling a net profit of $2 a hen is made each year, or a total of $1,320 on the flock annually.

A definite system of management is followed by the girl managers. They do not attempt to incubate eggs on the farm. This year they bought 1,400 White Leghorn baby chicks at 25 cents each. All of them came from trap nested flocks where the birds produce not less than 200 eggs each year. Approximately 1,200 of the chicks were brought up to frying size; 500 were cockerels and the rest pullets. A few days ago Miss Clymer said they sold all of the cockerels, averaging 2 pounds each, at 26 cents a pound. By selling to a local dealer the owners believe they made more money than if they had shipped them to Chicago, paid the transportation charges, and stood the shrinkage, with the wholesale price around 30 cents a pound.

The pullets are all being kept; a few of them will be used as fryers and the usual 660 will be kept for winter layers to replace the old hens, which are not kept over the second winter at East-of-the-Chimneys.

"In June we began culling," said Miss Clymer. "We have already culled our hens twice and sold the culls. All the rest of our layers—last year's pullets—will be sold by the middle of August, because we never keep hens more than one year. We get 18 cents a pound for hens, and they average 3½ pounds.

The hens are kept in a tile poultry house, equipped with 132 nests, or one nest for every five birds. The layers enter the nests from the rear. When the eggs are gathered, the drawerlike nests are pulled out in front.

Galvanized water fountains equipped with lamps so the water can be warmed in winter are kept in the poultry house.

The owners of East-of-the-Chimneys farm say the tile house is much warmer in the winter and cooler in summer, and is much more desirable than a house made of wood. Last winter when the temperature went down around 20 degrees below zero and frozen comb chickens were common all over the middle west, only two chickens suffered from frozen combs at this farm.

For Malnutrition Patients.

Fifteen pure bred Toggenburg milk goats are kept on the farm; seven are does giving from three to five quarts of milk a day. Twelve quarts are sold each day to the Kane County Tuberculosis sanitarium at 50 cents a quart, bringing in more than $2,000 a year. The rest of the milk is used on the farm.

Most of the milk is fed to patients suffering from malnutrition, who are sent to East-of-the-Chimneys farm by Chicago physicians. The girls are equipped to take care of six patients, who are fed goats' milk as the principal part of the diet prescribed by nutrition experts. A mother and child are charged $30 a week for this service, which includes the goats' milk.

Miss Clymer is a graduate of Lake Forest university, Lake Forest, Ill.; Miss Snow of Simpson college, Birmingham, Ala., and a former postgraduate student at the University of Chicago. She has had practical experience in farming, having been on her father's ranch in New Mexico for six years, where she raised Duroc Jersey hogs, Rambouillet sheep, Jersey cattle, Airedale dogs and greyhounds. Her success as a ranch-woman in New Mexico encouraged her to try the unique and specialized idea of farming that she and Miss Clymer follow on their East-of-the-Chimneys farm.

FLIVVER GRAZING

MEEAH-AH, WHY WALK?—These aristocratic, intelligent, pure bred Toggenburg goats have found a new way of getting about while they are grazing in a knee-deep alfalfa field. The three on top of the automobile hood here are members of the herd kept at East-of-the-Chimneys farm, near Batavia, Ill. Does in this herd of fifteen Toggenburgs bring in more than $2,000 a year cash from milk sold at 50 cents a quart to the Kane County Tuberculosis sanitarium.

Dairymen's Jottings

Sweet clover will, no doubt, play an important part as a pasture crop in dairying sections of the middle west. More and more of the one crop wheat farmers of Kansas are going into the dairying business, and when they run over the list of the best legumes for pasture they usually choose sweet clover. In that state, as well as others, legumes—sweet clover falls in that class—are regarded as the cheapest source of protein for live stock. Sweet clover is favored more among the dairy farmers in northern Illinois than ever before, because it not only furnishes an excellent summer pasture but it stood the test during the recent army worm invasion. The worms cleaned up all other crops in sight, and left sweet clover standing.

"Fewer and better" cows is the slogan that dairymen in the New York and Chicago districts are adopting to meet the present conditions confronting them in the marketing of milk.

Oil-Regulating Piston Rings

A Word from Walter P. Chrysler

The same engineering genius which with the Chrysler has literally revolutionized practice and performance in the six-cylinder field, has now made the good Maxwell equally outstanding among four-cylinder cars.

My meaning is precisely this: That no other four-cylinder car—at anything like the Maxwell price—is giving the combination of performance, ease of riding and driving, economy, long life, and practical elimination of vibration, that the good Maxwell gives to its owners.

ATTORNEY SHOWS COURT APPROVAL OF CO-OP TRADING

BY SCRUTATOR.

The writer has received from Abe Waldauer, representing the National Council of Farmers' Coöperative Marketing associations, and of counsel in the Tennessee case in which the constitutionality of some of the provisions of the coöperative laws is attacked, an interesting summary of the contentions of those supporting these laws.

Mr. Waldauer's letter is in itself an outline of the recent evolution of legal doctrine concerning the classification of citizens, which is of tremendous importance to every American and of significance to all business. His letter, unfortunately, is too long for reproduction in full, but salient points follow:

"Opponents claim that coöperative marketing laws are unconstitutional, upon the theory that in selecting the farmer as a class for special beneficial legislation the coöperative acts are offensive to the protection provision of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution.

"The position is based primarily upon the decision in the case of Connolly vs. Union Sewer Pipe company, wherein the Supreme court of the United States decided that the exemption of farmers from the anti-trust act of Illinois rendered that act unconstitutional.

"Since the decision of the Connolly case, more than twenty years ago, there has been a trend toward farmer coöperation. The federal government, in addition to the section 6 of the Clayton act, exempting farmers from the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust act, passed the Capper-Volstead act, which definitely legalizes coöperative marketing.

"Moreover, the Supreme court of the United States in decisions handed down since the Connolly case, has definitely approved the classification of farmers as distinct from others.

"'In New York Central Railroad company vs. White [1917], 243 U. S. 188, and Ward vs. Krinsky [1922], 66 L. Ed. 616, an exemption of farmers from the operation of workmen's compensation acts was held constitutional.

"'And in Miller vs. Wilson [1815], 236, U. S. 373, the exemption of the fruit harvesting and canning industries from the womans' eight hour law of California, was held constitutional.'

"During the war, the Lever act was passed by the national congress. This act prohibited the hoarding of food and other products, but exempted farmers from its provisions. It was assaulted as unconstitutional because of this exemption. The court unhesitatingly upheld the act, stating in effect that the classification of farmers as distinct from others was reasonable and proper.

"The decision in the Connolly case is more than twenty years old. Only one judge who participated in that decision now remains on the court; Mr. Justice McKenna, who wrote a dissenting opinion at that time. Since that date, standard coöperative acts are law in thirty-two states. Since that date, the federal government has exempted farmer coöperatives from the payment of income tax, and this exemption has been upheld. Since that date, the Capper-Volstead act has been passed. Since that date, the legality of coöperative acts and contracts have been upheld by nine state Supreme courts.

"Since that date the rural credits act, making a distinct classification of farmers as a group, has been passed. Since that date, the Supreme court of the United States, in no less than five cases, has definitely upheld the reasonableness of farmer classifications.

"The provisions regarding liquidated damages, injunctions, mutuality, and other legal phases of both law and contract have been upheld.

"In short, since the decision in the Connolly case, the whole public policy of the United States definitely favors farmer coöperation. Advocates of the system welcome a test in the Supreme court of the United States. They are confident of the entire legality of the coöperative acts and contracts."

Speculating.

Many people think they are investing when, in reality, they are speculating. To purchase a security with the sole purpose of selling it later at a profit is not investing. It is speculating. The purchaser is simply betting that the market price of the security will go up rather than down. On that he is depending to get his return. This is, of course, a perfectly legitimate way to make money, but one should realize that there is nothing safe or sure in this form of transaction. The element of chance is strong. A great many factors—many of them unforseeable—enter in, which may affect the price trend of his security in particular or which may so influence the entire securities market as to cause his security to fall in sympathy with the others even though there is no weakening in the security itself.

Apparently the odds are against the amateur speculator, as a great many more lose than gain in these transactions. Those who wish to speculate, or "play the market," should realize the risks they are taking. They should not risk their entire savings on the chance that the market will rise. We read, occasionally, of someone who has made a fortune on the market, but we seldom hear of the many thousands of others who have lost their entire savings there. Unless it is the case of some prominent figure who has lost a large fortune these matters do not get into print. They exist, just the same, and many a man or woman has seen everything swept away and has had to begin all over again because the market was not kind.

Speculation, like any other form of betting or game of chance, should be indulged in only with the surplus funds which one could afford to lose. It is the height of folly to risk everything, or even more than one can get along without, on a game of chance.

The real investor purchases a security with the purpose of receiving regularly the income in the form of dividends or interest which it pays. If he is prudent he will ascertain that the continued payment of this income, as well as his principal, is reasonably safe. He does not, then, have to bother about its fluctuations on the market. The market price, if it falls considerably, is of interest to him only as a possible indication of some weakening of the safety of his security and should suggest to him that he check up on conditions causing the slump. These may be found to be general conditions which have no effect on the strength of his particular security and his investment is just as safe as ever.

The sounder a security, the less likely it is to fluctuate on the market. Conversely, the less safety there is in back of a security the more likely it is to fluctuate: For that reason, the weaker or more uncertain stocks frequently are chosen as the best subjects for speculation, which is an additional element of danger for the speculator.

Speculation is no game for a poor man. It should be indulged in only by those with surplus funds which they can afford to lose.

Heat With Hot Air

THE Hess Furnace System, with a furnace of proper size, properly planned and properly installed, cannot be surpassed for efficiency and economy.

It is inexpensive; costs loss to install than steam or hot water. Requires less room, for unsightly radiators are not used, and the space they occupy is available for other uses.

Is more flexible; producing mild heat in cool weather, quickly, with little fuel; steady heat in cold weather, and may be forced, if necessary, in extreme cold. It is safe. No danger of leakage, nor explosion, nor from freezing if neglected.

Cost of maintenance is less than with any other method, and repairs are made by unskilled labor without dismantling the heater.

Hess Furnaces have been made for fifty-one years—progressing from the round cast-iron "pot" furnace to the present welded steel leak-proof heater—simple—economical—absolutely and forever proof against leakage, and fully guaranteed for efficiency and durability.

25 Fundamental Reasons Why the

HESS WELDED STEEL FURNACE

Excels in Efficiency and Economy

1—SQUARE SHAPE—gives maximum radiating area, evenly heated, none overheated.

2—FIRE BRICK—retains high temperatures essential to perfect and complete combustion of fuel; withstands intense heat. The only thing for oil burning.

3—LOW FIRE DOOR—easy to lift fuel, which is dropped just inside the door—no tunnel to firepot.

4—FRONT DRAFT DOOR—gives greatest effectiveness in "booming-up" fire. Chain operated from upper floor.

5—GRATE BARS—individually operated from outside; easy to rock gently or turn over.

6—LARGE ASH PIT DOOR—facilitates easy cleaning of ashes. Serves as draft door also.

7—WELDED STEEL RADIATOR—guaranteed never to leak dust, soot, smoke, nor gas. The only acceptable construction for oil burning. Immense radiating surface Quick results from quick-heating steel.

8—HOT WATER COIL—provides an ever-ready supply of hot water.

9—RECTANGULAR FIRE BOX—of highest efficiency. Maintains even depth of fire; same area at top as at base; no dead corners; firebrick lining and individually operated grate bars.

10—GRATES BURN ANY FUEL—hard or soft coal, coke, lignite, soft coal slack, wood, corncobs; operated separately will clean any part of the fire without disturbing the rest of it.

11—RECTANGULAR ASH PIT—smooth bottom, vertical sides, square corners. Your shovel reaches every part.

12—BOTTOM AIR SPACE—permits air supply to spread under and to all sides of radiator, insuring equal distribution of air.

13—SMOOTH SQUARE SETTLING CHAMBER—Nothing to clog; the vertical sides prevent accumulation of soot to retard draft and reduce radiation of heat.

14—CLEAN-OUT DOOR—Direct access to soot chamber at base of smoke pipe makes cleaning simple.

15—INDIRECT SMOKE OUTLET—The heat goes to top of furnace and is saved—the cooler smoke settles and escapes at the bottom—no heat wasted.

16—INNER CASING—creates double air-space around furnace. Insulates against loss of heat to basement.

17—CHECK DRAFT—admits air directly into smoke outlet, effectively checking fire. Operated from above by chain.

18—SMOKE PIPE OUTLET—direct and straight, no crooked flues to clog and reduce heating efficiency.

19—DIRECT DRAFT—connects directly with chimney; at top of radiator, creates strong draft for emergency use.

20—LOW CAP STYLE—for high ceiling basements; permits pipes from top, most efficient.

21—AIR SUPPLY COLLAR—on either side, returns cooled air from first floor for reheating and recirculation.

22—PERFORATED FIRE DOOR—sprays fresh air on fire, burning gases and smoke. Equipped with check-wheel.

23—AUTOMATIC DRAFT ACTION—automatically opens Direct Draft when fire door is opened, drawing off smoke and gases, preventing their escape into cellar when firing.

24—WATER PAN—placed high, where heat is strong, will evaporate necessary amount for properly humidifying the air.

25—HIGH CAP STYLE—with pipes leading from sides. For low ceiling basements.

WHEAT REFLECTS WORLD TROUBLES; MAKES NEW HIGH

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Foreign markets and Winnipeg are leading the advance in wheat prices. Confirmation of extremely heavy damage to the crop in the three provinces by Canadian authorities and a realization that an acute world's situation had developed, bringing in immense buying, which swept prices to a new high for the season. Spot wheat at Liverpool was up 7@10½c, while Winnipeg futures made a sensational advance, 5⅝@7⅝c, and are up over 10c from the low of Friday on July, when closed at $1.53¼, being the first North American market to get above the figure predicted by bulls some time ago. Local values were up 3⅜@4⅜c for the day.

Deferred deliveries of corn and all deliveries of rye also sold at a new high for the season, corn gaining ¼@2⅝c, with deferred futures leading, and rye was up 5⅝@6¼c, with May at $1.00 at the last. Oats advanced ⅞@2c.

Bull Week in Wheat.

One of the biggest bull movements in many years is on in wheat, and at no time have futures sold as high at this season under normal conditions as they are at the present time. Immense profit taking and hedging sales, the latter probably aggregating 1,000,000 bu. yesterday, failed to check the advance and at the last prices were within a fraction of the best figures with net gains of 8⅛@8½c for the week. Corn, while strong, was unchanged to 1⅜c higher as compared with a week ago. Oats gained 1⅛@2⅜c, and rye 7½@8⅜c. Provisions also broke into new ground with gains of 47½@62½c on lard, 72½@80c on ribs, and 95c@$1.22½ for bellies as compared with a week ago.

The long expected export demand for American winter wheat has apparently developed. Local handlers sold 280,000 bu to exporters during the day and the seaboard reported 600,000 bu. sold abroad. Individual operations or news had little effect on values, and the rapidity with which immense profit taking sales were absorbed mystified the trade. July sold up to $1.38⅜, and was $1.36½ at the last, with September $1.35¼@1.35; December, $1.38@1.37⅞, and May at $1.42@1.41¾. At the high July showed 36⅝c over the inside figure of the season.

Crop news from the Canadian northwest continues bullish with further mention of rust in Manitobas. Dry weather also prevails there and each day sees a further reduction in the outlook.

Commission houses and local bulls were aggressive buyers of the deferred deliveries of corn, but the nearby futures after showing strength early flattened out toward the last, and closed rather heavy with contract grades in the sample market selling at a delivery basis at the last. July finished at $1.09¼, September at $1.05⅞@1.06, December at 95⅝@95¾, and May at 96½@96⅝c. There was nothing in the general run of news to account of the buying.

New High on Provisions.

Provisions advanced sharply on buying by commission houses on the strength in hogs, grain, and cotton. Lard gained 10@15c, ribs 25@27½c, and bellies 15@20c for the day. Deliveries on July contracts were 250,000 lbs lard. Prices follow:

PIT NOTES

Wheat prices have advanced so fast and are up 33⅝c to 34½c from the low point of the season that despite the fact that the trade is looking for higher prices later on, commission houses and trade leaders are advising against buying on sharp bulges like that of yesterday. Liverpool and Winnipeg are leading the advance but caution is necessary as the market has become too wild.

Rye is being bought by speculators and exporters and is gaining friends, as it is regarded as too low as compared with wheat, being up only 25⅛c, as compared with 34½c in wheat. Speculation is getting into rye again and exporters are giving the market more attention.

One of the big local traders who bought more than 1,000,000 bu of corn on Friday starting the advance in December took his profits on the advance above 95c. The trade is bullish but is disposed to go slow in buying on bulges.

July corn broke from $1.11½ to $1.09 with hardly a trade intervening and cash corn was on a delivery basis at the close. September corn at times went ½c between trades.

CANADA STARTS PROBE IN RUST ON WHEAT RUMOR

Ottawa, Ont., July 26.—[Special.]—Contending that either the wheat market has been rigged or the dominion government's $1,000,000 statistical system of securing crop information is a dud, government officials late this afternoon strenuously denied officially that black rust was playing havoc with Canada's western grain crop. They opened an investigation.

All rumors of black rust and statements that Canada's 1924 wheat crop is facing a serious outlook is said by government officers to be absolutely unfounded, but a special inquiry of the situation will be made immediately. If the reports received by brokers are found to be correct the government's statistical bureau will likely be scrapped. But if it is found that Canadians have been working in coöperation with United States brokers to rig the market, charges will be made against those found involved on this side of the border.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 600,000 bu wheat, and probably more, were put through at the seaboard yesterday, with 500,000 bu rye, the latter including a full cargo to France, which needs rye for mixing purposes with wheat, owing to government flour regulations.

Chicago handlers sold 70,000 bu wheat, 40,000 bu corn, and 70,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with 280,000 bu wheat to exporters, and charters were made for 160,000 bu wheat at 1½c to Buffalo. There was 100,000 bu wheat sold to go to store. Deliveries on July contracts were 65,000 bu wheat, 25,000 bu oats and 5,000 bu rye.

Offerings of cash wheat on spot here were only fair and prices moved up 2@4c in sympathy with futures. No. 2 hard was ½@7c over July. Receipts, 181 cars. The big movement west of the Missouri river is expected to get under way this week. St. Louis and Omaha were 2@3c and Kansas City 1@3c higher for the day. No. 1 dark northern spring sold at $1.60 to arrive at Minneapolis, the highest price of the year.

Demand for cash corn was slow, and buyers refused to follow the advance in futures. Early sales were 1c higher, but the close was weak and ½c lower with No. 2 mixed ½c under to ¼c over July, with yellow ½@1½c and white ½@1¼c over the future. Receipts, 135 cars. Milwaukee, after being 2c higher early, was up only ½c at the last. Omaha was unchanged to 1c lower and Kansas City unchanged.

No. 2 white oats went to a delivery basis selling down to July price toward the last while No. 3 white were ¼@1c under the future. Receipts, 65 cars.

Ali Baba's Cave Rediscovered

In one mail 212 requests came to us for this book

Every day an average of six score men and women write to us for this new book, "Ali Baba's Cave Rediscovered."

One, having recently received a copy, writes: "It has shown me a definite plan that fits my case exactly. I shall put the plan into action at once."

Another says: "Full of facts and figures that convincingly illustrate the remarkable growth of money wisely invested."

Another writes: "Every man and woman who has a thought for the future should have a copy. The most interesting book on saving and investing I ever read. It will be the architect of many a fortune."

It is interesting—vitally interesting to anyone who can save and invest even as little as twenty dollars a month—equally so to those who have hundreds and thousands for fortune building.

It contains page after page of illustrative financial charts. It shows how to accumulate various amounts from $10,000 to $200,000 in from 10 to 40 years.

It tells what a few dollars a month accomplishes—what fifty, a hundred dollars and other sums amount to in different periods of time, when invested in Forman 6½% and 7% Real Estate Bonds, with the interest reinvested.

Shows how money adds to money—how it doubles itself—how even a small amount, systematically invested, mounts to a snug fortune—all without risk or speculation of any sort.

Whatever your station in life, send for this book. We will gladly forward you a copy, postpaid, free from any obligation whatever. Simply forward the coupon below. Or, if convenient, call at our offices for your copy.

The New York Times.

New York, July 26.—Saturday markets in these piping times of generally rising prices are most likely to be lively affairs despite the natural "pull" of holiday influences, which would distract attention from financial and business affairs. Today's two hours of trading was active, featured by a long succession of "new high prices for the year" in the stock market, in the grains and with a particularly strong upturn in cotton which carried the staple up an average of $7.50 to the bale.

Influences of a more cheerful sentiment in trade generally now are apparent in most markets. There is no absolute confirmation of any considerable flow of new business to the basic industries, but there is at least no longer apparent the urge to "sell out," and if price concessions become an incident to the sale, to make them. Most of the country dependable "index figures" have gained sharply during the last fortnight and the trade reviews speak most optimistically of business sentiment and cheerfulness following in the wake of higher prices.

Following the irregularity which prevailed on Thursday and Friday, the stock market today displayed a firmer tone. As a result of the continued upward movement in many of the active railroad and industrial issues, the averages today recorded a new high record for the year. Trading for the two hours this morning approximated a half million shares, placing the market on a parity with the recent nine consecutive million share days.

American Can Leads Industrials.

American Can was the leader in the industrial group, closing at 120¼, with a net gain of 2¼ points. Buying of this stock was unusually heavy just before the close, and a sympathetic advance was recorded among other speculative issues. General Electric was most prominent among the electrical issues, advancing to 255, a new high record for all time.

Coppers again displayed a firm tone, Utah gaining 1½ points to 79½, duplicating the high record for 1924, made earlier in the year. Kennecott sold at a new high. In the railroad group, Lehigh Valley, which was the leader on Friday, sold off a point on profit taking, but the reaction in this stock and Northern Pacific was offset by gains in other active issues.

While the net return earned by the railroads as a whole was less for the first five months of this year than in the corresponding period of 1923, it was pointed out today there have been improvements in the financial results by the groups that needed it the most. In 1923 three groups earned less than 4 per cent; the New England lines which earned 2.3 per cent, the Northwestern group with 3.42 per cent and the Southwestern group 3.67. All of these groups earned more in the first five months of this year than in 1923.

Oils Hold Their Own.

Oil stocks as a group just about held their own today, fractional gains in some of the better grade issues being offset by declines in other stocks. Early in the day advices were received to the effect that the Magnolia Petroleum company announced a reduction of 25 cents a barrel in Mexia and Powell crude oils. Like most other reductions in crude oil prices of late, however, the market paid little attention to the reduction. After the close of the market, however, a more important cut was announced. The same company, according to private advices received in financial circles, made a cut of 25 cents a barrel in midcontinent crude oil above 33 degrees gravity.

The coming week is likely to prove one of importance to all markets, and most particularly to the foreign exchange market, which of late has come to be regarded as an accurate barometer of sentiment about the conference in London over reparations. The conference now reaches its critical stage. Ways and means must be found to provide sufficient security for a German loan, in order that it may find ready welcome and successfully fight its competition in the markets of the world.

The task is no small one; on its success the Dawes plan for reparations depends. The money to be derived from such a loan may be likened to the power which puts a perfect piece of machinery into operation. Without the loan, the scheme of reparations, the plan remains but a scheme without the power to give the international aid for which it was devised.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE

Money in Chicago firm at 4½ per cent on collateral; commercial paper, 3¼@4 per cent; 4¼@5¼ per cent over the counter; bankers' acceptances, 2@2¼ per cent; New York exchange by wire, par; by mail, 14@22c discount. Chicago bank clearings yesterday were $91,700,000, compared with $97,800,000 a week ago, and $84,000,000 a year ago.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Stock prices continued to respond to reports of improving business conditions, moving upward on a large volume of trading under the leadership of the rails, sugars, public utilities and merchandising issues. Twenty-four stocks established new high prices for the year during the brief session, including six rails, five public utilities, six merchandising issues and seven miscellaneous industrials.

Heavy buying of American Can, which crossed 120 for the first time since its sharp decline earlier in the year, was one of the day's features. Other pivotal issues also improved, Baldwin closing a point higher at 118 and U. S. Steel and Studebaker closing fractionally higher at 101½ and 37⅞, respectively.

The market had to contend with the usual volume of week-end profit taking, but selling orders were well absorbed. Further accumulation of the railroad issues resulted in net gains of a point or more in Rock Island, Lackawanna "Katy" preferred and Wabash, while Baltimore and Ohio common and preferred, Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, Pittsburgh and West Virginia preferred and Southern Railway preferred, broke through their previous peak prices. Lehigh Valley, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, and Rock Island 7 per cent preferred, each fell back about a point on profit taking.

Broadening of the security trading market progressed to a substantial degree on the curb exchange all through the week and in that period a number of important stocks moved up to new high records on a heavy volume of business. Glen Alden Coal held a prominent position especially in the late transactions when it showed a gain of 11½ points at 110. Lehigh Valley Coal also was heavily traded in, advancing 3 points to 39⅛. Public Utilities failed to maintain their display of activity and strength which had made them prominent until a recent period. Ward Corporation A rose 6 points to 101½, and United Bakeries B advanced 3 points to 81.

COTTON PRICES HIGHER

NEW YORK, July 26.—COTTON—An excited market with heavy trading and an advance equal to $7.50 a bale was made at the close. Short covering was extensive due to misinformation on Friday regarding Texas rains. Crop reports were regarded as less favorable and the moisture situation in the southwest is a most important factor at this time, general rains being needed to prevent crop deterioration. The cotton trade is watching climatic conditions in Texas. Moderate recessions from the top prices were made at the close. Prices follow:

NEW ORLEANS.—COTTON—Weather conditions in the western belt combined with heavy buying of futures advanced prices sharply with net gains of 149 to 155 points. Spot cotton was unchanged at 30.00c. Prices as wired to Thomson & McKinnon follow:

There Are Fifty Men In This Town Who Know What I'm Talking About

THIS is really an open letter to fifty men in this town who do not believe in gambling on anything.

They are the aggressive, thinking, solid, substantial citizens to whom character and reliability mean everything.

They are the men who buy the safe bonds—keep industry going—keep civic spirit alive—in short, they have made this town what it is.

Ten or fifteen years ago these men started to buy motor cars.

Reliability was what they demanded.

Reliability was what they got.

But in those days reliability could only be realized in the heavy cars.

They paid for one thousand pounds more weight than is now necessary, just to gain reliability.

But motor cars are changing—and so are the minds of these men.

Two things are making them think.

One is weight, which means expense.

Another is depreciation, which means loss.

You can't get enough in the resale market for the old fashioned, bulky car to make it a good investment.

You can't drive it all day and return without fatigue.

You can't find your place easily at the curb.

You can't handle the car in the traffic with sufficient ease.

These fifty men, and their point of view, determined the character of The Great Jordan Line Eight.

They want modern beauty of line.

They want modern balance which means proper distribution of weight.

Their wives want a reliable car that is not too big, too unwieldy to handle. They want more style.

The Great Jordan Line Eight, when judged by standards of economy and reliability, is a little bit better car than has been produced before in America.

Travel at any speed you care to drive.

Because it is well balanced, it holds the road perfectly. It cannot skid with four wheel hydraulic brakes and balloon tires.

The motor is simple, without complication—the service expense is low

The resale value is very high.

These fifty men will set the example for the conservative, careful buyers of this community.

These fifty men will investigate The Great Jordan Line Eight.

Mr. Dooley on Expert Testimony

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE

"IF I had a son," said Mr. Dooley, "there's wan business I wuddent't let him go into."

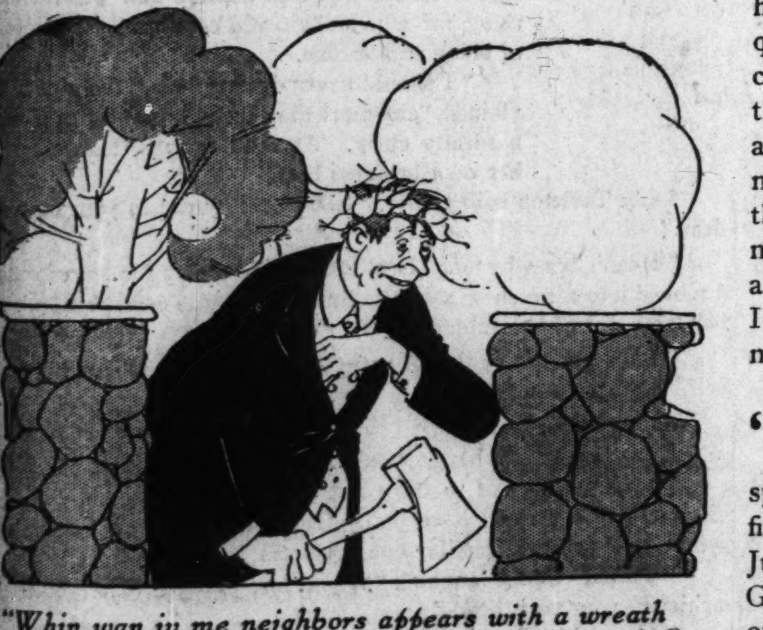
"I s'pose it's ye'er own business," said Mr. Hennessy. "I niver knew iv a father that didn't feel that way. Ye wudden't raise this here imaginary son to be a bootlegger."

"I'm not a bootlegger," said Mr. Dooley. "I'm what most iv th' successful men in this counthry ar're, I'm a merchant. I'm what Hogan calls an intermeejary; I'm a middleman. But bootlegger I am not. I stand between th' mannyfacthrer or his agent who makes or delivers th' produck, an' th' ultimate consumer or sucker or suicide who dhrinks it. But if I had annything to say about what this dhream child wud become, it wudden't be a doctor.

"Look at Dock Larkin. A betther man niver lived. He's ushered at laste fifty thousan' souls into life an' bowed about half that manny out. He must wondher whin a new guest is inthrajooced be his hands into th' dull boardin' house they call th' wurruld, what's goin' to become iv him. Th' baby has no buttons on at th' time, so th' Dock can't say whether he'll be rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief, doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief. All he can do with th' little newcomer is to start it in life be givin' it a taste iv what life will do with it later on. So he spanks it as hard as he can. Th' baby chokes, splutters, howls, an' decides to live. It gets th' same threatment through life an' gin'rally acts th' same way. Dock Larkin wondhers what's goin to become iv his patients as they come into th' wurruld; an' Father Kavanaugh wondhers th' same thing about thim that ar're goin' out.

"BUT th' Docks have a hard life an' I'm always at a loss to know how they come to look so hearty. Maybe it's because they don't take medicine iv anny sort. Dock Larkin says he niver felt rugged enough. Ye won't see anny more medicine in a doctor's house thin ye will books in an author's, pictures in a painter's, or harness in a harness maker's. They're as abstemyous about usin' th' hop they disthribute among their patients as bartenders used to be in th' days that Hogan calls 'Sweet as remimbered kisses afther death, th' pre-Volstead days that ar're no more.' They wurruk arly an' late. I hear Dock Larkin's car go splutterin' by at anny hour iv th' night. He says that ninety per cint iv th' patients that call him in don't need him an' th' other tin per cint he can't keep. No wan pays anny more attintion to his bills thin a candydate does to a platform. Whin he kicks out, which I hope won't be f'r two or three hundherd years, those iv us who survive him will prob'bly have to pass th' hat f'r th' band at his fun'ral.

"So I won't niver raise this little Cecil or Percy iv mine to be a doctor. That is, th' kind iv doctor Dock Larkin is, who washes th' babies, holds th' mothers' hands, an' disthributes freely among th' suffrin' a purscription readin': 'Spir. Frum. 12 oz. Night an' mornin'. Ad lib.' There's no money in that. But if my little offspring wants to be another kind iv a Dock, if he wants to be an alienist, I'll say to him: 'Me boy, go in an conker fame an' fortune.'

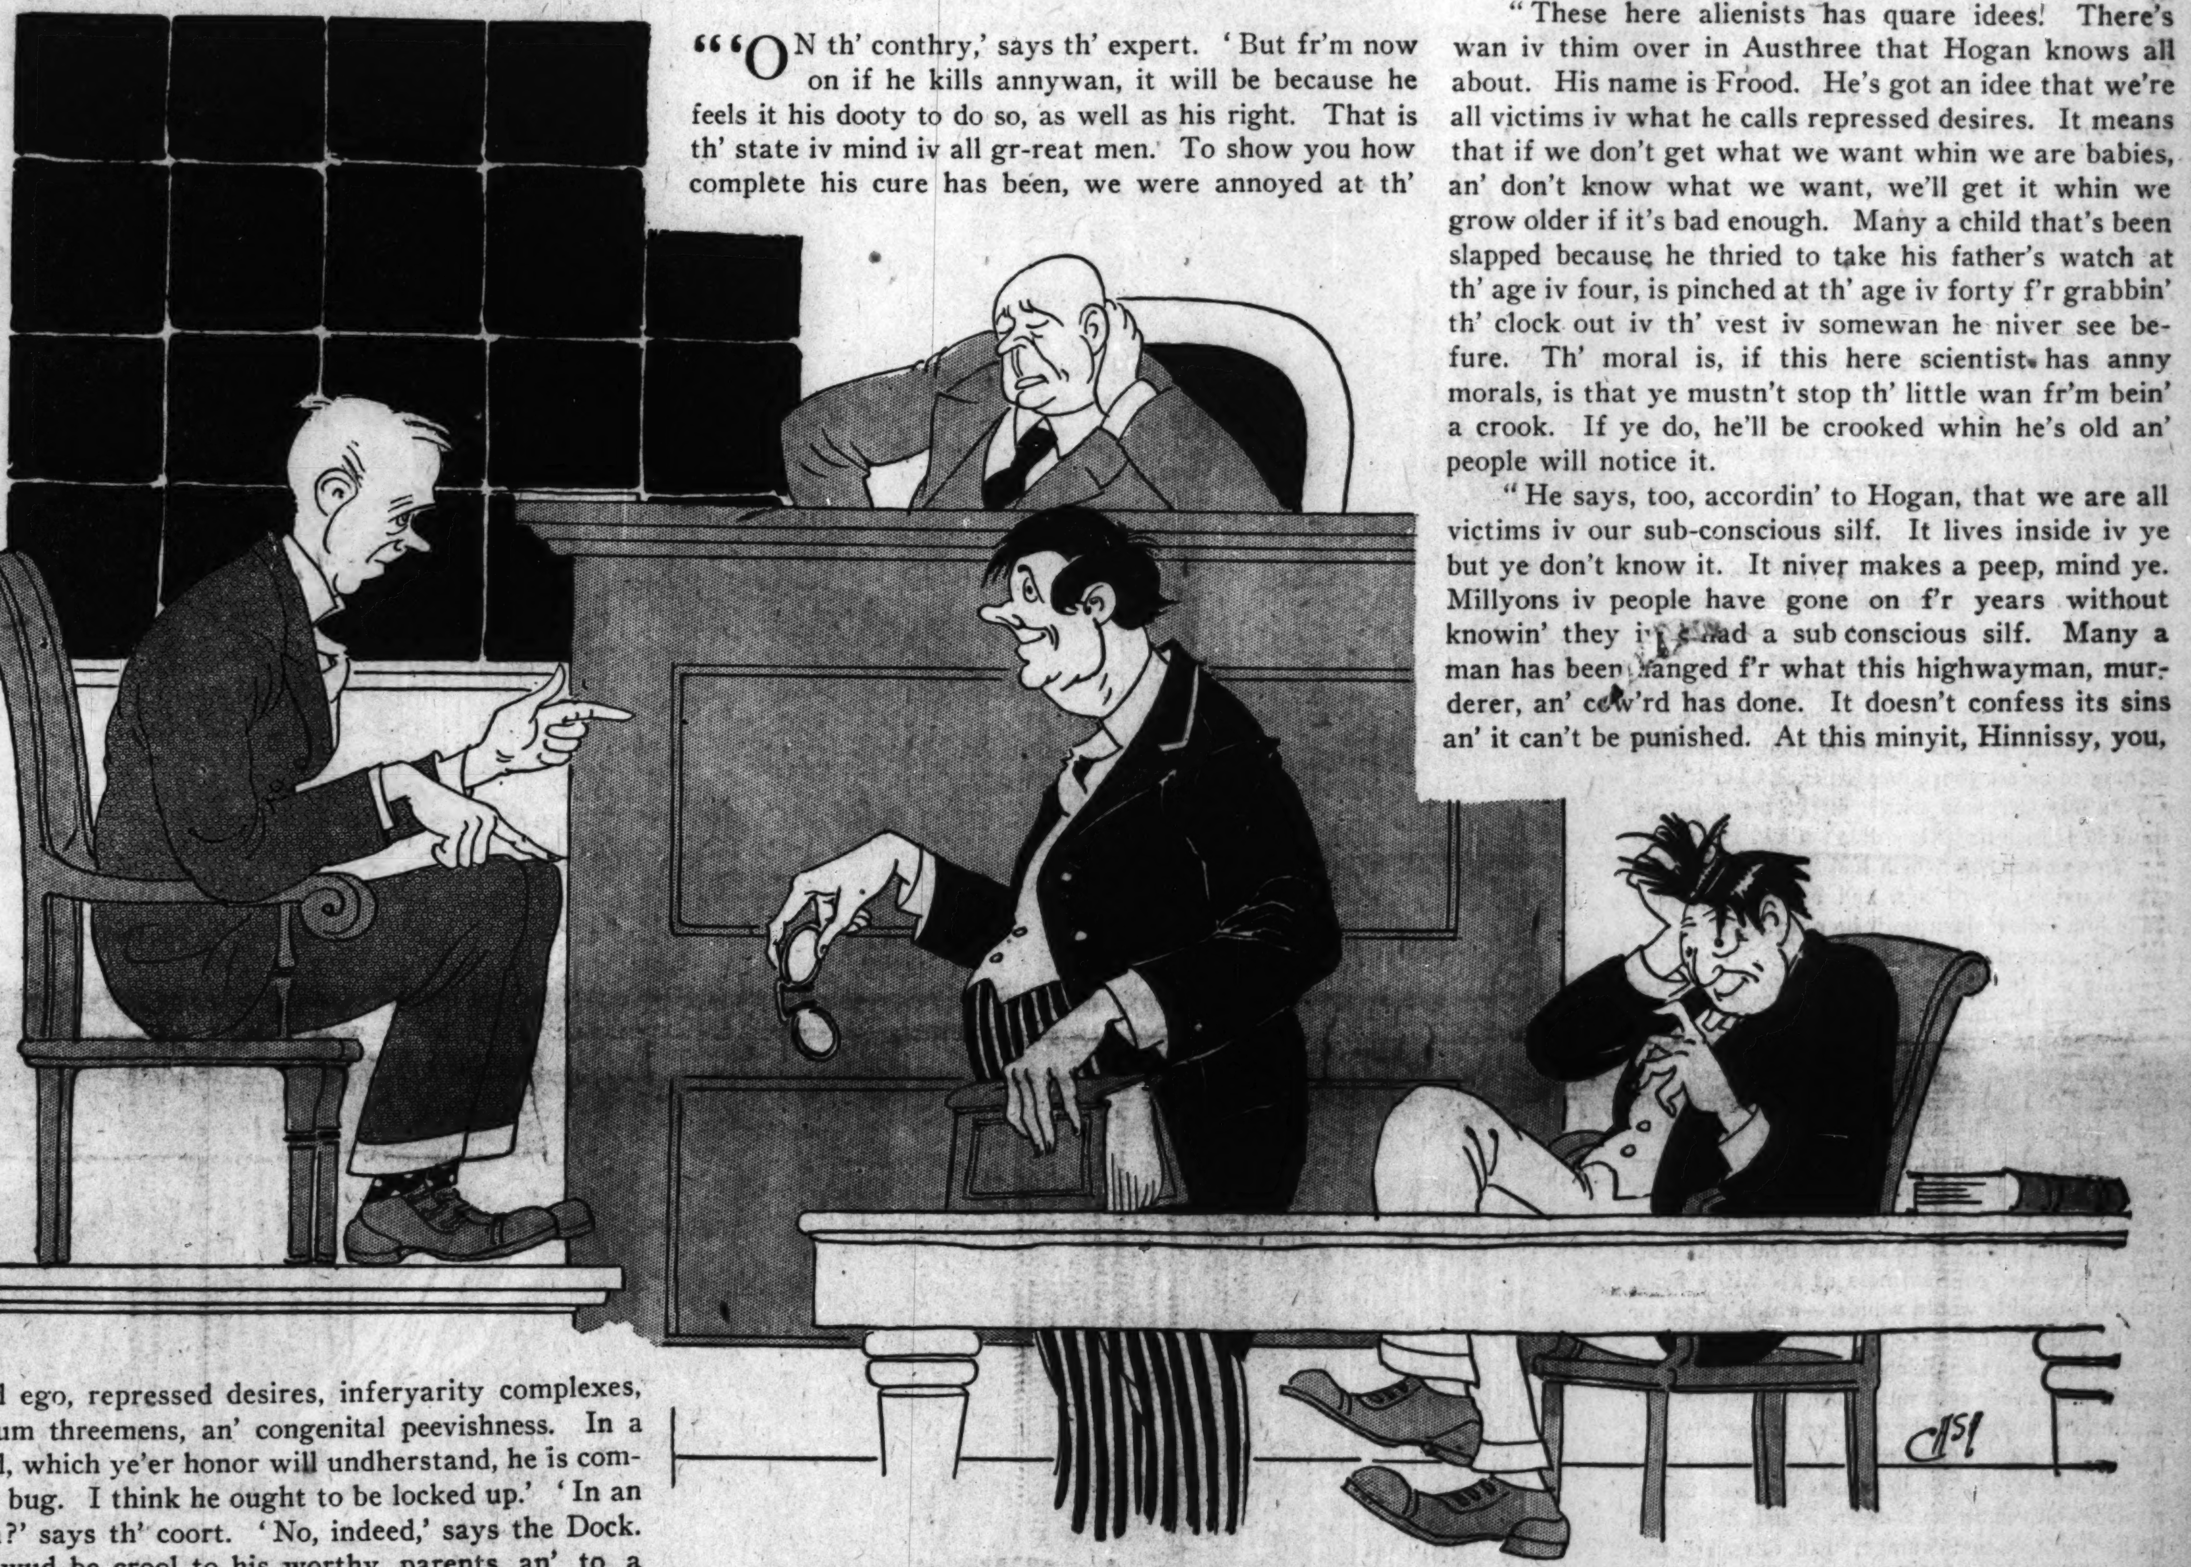


"Whin wan iv me neighbors appears with a wreath iv radishes an' an ax, th' threatment is simple."

"'WHAT is an alienist,' says ye? I s'pose ye think it's some kind iv an immigration inspictor. But it ain't. An alienist is, as Hogan wud say, a scientist that has applied himself to th' study iv cereebral disturbances or, as you would say, a nut doctor. He don't practice much. Ye niver see an alienist's car parked in front iv a patient's dure. He niver visits his patient ontil th' patient is indicted. In this part iv th' city there are no alenists. Whin wan iv me neighbors wakes up wan mornin' with th' idee in his mind that he is Napolyon Bonypart or appears in public with a wreath iv radishes in his hair an' an ax in his hand, th' threatment is simple. Th' fam'ly sind f'r th' polis wagon an' that's th' last ye hear iv him onless he escapes.

"But over on th' Lake Shore dhrive, it's diff'rent. If Napolyon Bonypart comes out iv wan iv these stately mansions an' bats a passer-by over th' head with his cleaver, he's arristed, iv coorse. That's a mere formality. An' he's thried as a matter iv rootine. Thin th' expert alienist comes in.

"'D'ye know this prisoner?' says th' coort. 'I do,' says th' alienist. 'How long have ye known him?' 'I see him first an hour ago, but I have sized him up. This young sign iv a wealthy fam'ly is suff'rin' fr'm parynoya, dementia precox, dementia Americana, submerged ego, repressed desires, inferyarity complexes, deeliryum threemens, an' congenital peevishness. In a wurrud, which ye'er honor will undherstand, he is completely bug. I think he ought to be locked up.' 'In an asylum?' says th' coort. 'No, indeed,' says the Dock. 'That wud be crool to his worthy parents an' to a young man who has been brought up in luxury an' who, outside iv th' few thriflin' ills I have mentioned, is entirely normal. I suggist that he be sintinced to some quite rethreat in th' counthry, where he will have ivry attintion that a young man iv his means requires f'r his comfort—dilicate food, a well stocked cellar, an 'th' companionship iv his akels. I can direct th' coort to such an institution. It is pleasantly situated in a rollin' counthry, with tennis, goluf, swimming, et cethry an' so on. There this eccenthric but on th' whole lovable young man can spind his days in manly exercise or in long walks an' talks with th' other afflooent cuckoos who rave undher its hospitable roof. I know just such a reposeful nook. In fact, I own it mesilf.'



"'He is no longer suffrin' fr'm dementia precox, mania pazooza, or bean paralysis, an' few, if anny, deleeryum threemens. His infeeryarity complex—'"

"SO th' pris'ner is put away. But afther awhile th' lodgin' becomes irksome. His fellow guests rayspict his title as Impror iv th' Fr-rinch, but he soon finds they are all insane. Wan iv thim thinks he is Julyus Cayzar, another Mohammed, or Pether th' Gr-reat or King Solomon or Hinnery Ford, or some other celebrity. A little fellow has th' nerve to say that he himsilf is Napolyon Bonypart. But th' rale Bonypart, th' bonyfidy hero iv Marengo, soon subjoos this base-born pretinder with a poker.

"But th' bould Corsican is not contint. He longs f'r th' gr-reat, wide spaces in th' tenderloin. So he sinds a command to th' ol' fam'ly lawyer be his vallay, an' gives him an aujeence. Whin it is over th' ol' fam'ly lawyer consults th' ol' fam'ly sheriff who calls an' ol' fam'ly jury. An' young Mr. Kale is put on thrile again.

"On'y wan witness is called. It is th' alienist. Says he, 'I have had this youth undher me fatherly eye f'r siv'ral months an' have noted a wondherful improvement in his condition. He is no longer suffrin' fr'm dementia precox, mania pazooza, or bean paralysis, an' few, if anny, deleeryum threemens. His infeeryarity complex——'

"'What is that?' asks th' coort.

"'An infeeryarity complex,' says th' Dock, 'is where th' victim knows he's so worthless that he's got to go out an' show th' wurruld that he ain't an insect be killin' somewan. But I am happy to say this is all changed in me young friend through our threatment. At th' prisint moment he is forchint enough to have a supeeryarity complex.'

"'What is that?' says th' coort. 'Does it make him meek an' humble?'

"'ON th' conthry,' says th' expert. 'But fr'm now on if he kills annywan, it will be because he feels it his dooty to do so, as well as his right. That is th' state iv mind iv all gr-reat men. To show you how complete his cure has been, we were annoyed at th' college be th' turbulence iv some of th' more wayward iv th' students. Me young friend, an' I think I can call him so, wint down to th' village, bought a pistol, an' chased th' more livily iv th' boys up to th' roof. Again, we were kept awake at night be th' outcries iv male an' female cats. Our hero enticed these varmint into th' backyard an' cut off thir tails, laughin' cheerfully as he performed this act iv jooty. So I think, ye'er honor, 'tis high time, f'r th' counthry's sake, that this splindid type iv young American manhood shud be restored to a civilization that he will adorn. I have here a petition fr'm th' attindants an' all th' loonyticks askin' that he be set free or annyhow, moved out.'

"'So ye think he is now well balanced?' says th' coort.

"'Well balanced, is it?' says th' Dock. 'Judge, ye make me laugh. Why, his balance at th' First National bank this mornin' was two millyion five hundhred thousan' dollars.'

"'Thin it wud be a shame to restrain his liberty anny longer,' says th' coort. 'I direct th' jury to give a vardick that he is no longer top-heavy, an' th' coort wud be honored if he wud have supper with th' coort an' the coort's wife tonight.'

"'Th' Impror iv th' Fr-rinch an' th' Impress Josephine do not accipt invitations fr'm th' canal,' says th' man, stalking haughtily out iv th' coort room. An' th' last seen iv him he was in a hardware store testin' an ax on his thumb nail.

"Well, it's a good job an' I thried to have Dock Larkin take it up. But he says he was born iv poor but honest parents an' he can't affoord it. Besides, he says, he is too much puzzled be th' overloaded stomachs iv his patients to bother about their empty heads.

"'I might start a rest cure,' he says, 'but I've got a betther idee thin that. Ye see,' he says, 'a rest cure is f'r what thim brain vets calls noorystheeny. It's this way. If th' wife iv th' boss, who has exhausted her fire, two-be-four mind be dancin', smokin' cigarets an' playin' mah jongg, wakes up wan mornin' at iliven with an' onconthrollable impulse to pitch th' furniture out iv th' window, it's called noorystheeny an' she's sint to a rist cure. But if th' cook does th' same thing, it's called tantrums an' she's fired. Me idee wud be to have th' lady go down stairs at six-thirty an' fry th 'eggs f'r breakfast an' let th' cook lie abed ontil iliven. At th' end iv a week they'd both be cured. But I don't want to knock anny iv me fellow practitioners,' he says. 'I know a nice young man who runs a rest cure. I ast him what his treatment was. "I make him wurruk," he says.'

"These here alienists has quare idees! There's wan iv thim over in Austhree that Hogan knows all about. His name is Frood. He's got an idee that we're all victims iv what he calls repressed desires. It means that if we don't get what we want whin we are babies, an' don't know what we want, we'll get it whin we grow older if it's bad enough. Many a child that's been slapped because he thried to take his father's watch at th' age iv four, is pinched at th' age iv forty f'r grabbin' th' clock out iv th' vest iv somewan he niver see befure. Th' moral is, if this here scientist has anny morals, is that ye mustn't stop th' little wan fr'm bein' a crook. If ye do, he'll be crooked whin he's old an' people will notice it.

"He says, too, accordin' to Hogan, that we are all victims iv our sub-conscious silf. It lives inside iv ye but ye don't know it. It niver makes a peep, mind ye. Millyons iv people have gone on f'r years without knowin' they iver had a sub conscious silf. Many a man has been hanged f'r what this highwayman, murderer, an' cow'rd has done. It doesn't confess its sins an' it can't be punished. At this minyit, Hinnissy, you, a self-raspictin', upright, marrid man, ar-re harborin' an' ar-re conthrolled by as gr-reat a villyan as iver escaped th' hands iv justice. If I was ye, Hinnissy, I'd hurry up an' ejict this immoral tinant befure he starts on a rampage an' destroys ye'er good name an' th' polis come around an' put padlocks on ye. But Dock Frood says ye can't. Th' blackguard crept into ye whin ye were young an' there he is f'r life.

"AN' this Frood finds out what is th' matther with ye be havin 'ye tell him ye'er dhreams. Me Aunt Mary Ann is fine at r-readin' dhreams. But she don't go far. All she knows is that if she dhreams iv a weddin' or annything else, there'll be a death in th' fam'ly. But Dock Frood is diff'rent. He hears ye'er dhreams an' tells ye what is th' matther with ye, an' guarantees it's something nasty. A patient goes to him. He doesn't look at her tongue, or feel her pulse, or pull a stithyscope out iv his back pocket an' join it into her back an 'ask her to cough. He simply says, 'Madam, what did ye dhream about last night?' 'I dhreamt,' says th' suff'rer, 'that I thried to open a bureau dhrawer an' cudden't.' 'It's perfickly clear,' says the Dock. 'Ye're in love with th' clerk iv th' furniture store an' he don't care two pins about ye.'

"'But I niver see th' man,' says the patient. 'That don't make anny diff'rence. Ye'er sub-conscious silf caught a glimpse iv him whin ye were two years old. Ye must go to a rest cure. I have wan where ye can fight this fatal passion,' he says. An' there ye ar-re."

"I think some iv these ducks are as crazy as their patients," said Mr. Hennessy.

"I don't know about that," said Mr. Dooley. "I asked Hogan about it an' he said, 'We're all crathers iv our environment.' I don't know what he meant but that's what he said."

RED HAIR by Princess Bibesco

A Serio-Comic Tale of Woman's Crowning Glory, and What Things May Befall When, Perchance, Folks Talk Too Much About It

OF course, she was far from being the only person to be irritated by them. Only they struck her at a peculiar angle; she couldn't escape from them. They were, so to speak, a life sentence. And bumping your wings only made the feathers come out. She had been, she reflected, so feathery once. Besides, when, as she put it to herself, she tried to keep her own end up, they would put their fingers in their ears mentally, just as if she were a noise. They always behaved as if the language of their thoughts was Russian to her (which it was), and when they talked to her they instinctively translated what they had to say into words which they would never have used with one another. So whenever she was with them she spent her time between being bewildered and being humiliated. What if they were clever? Clverness isn't everything.

One day she overhead her mother-in-law saying: "It's not so much that poor Linda isn't very intelligent—lots of unintelligent people are so understanding—but it's such a pity that she can't be a little more acquiescent. She was so much sweeter before she married."

"That is our fault," her daughter had retorted.

It was so characteristic of them, Linda thought furiously, even to see that. And why poor? Because she was not like them, or because she was not liked by them? And how dared they assume that either constituted a cause for pity?

"I don't know why she should be on the defensive," Susan had continued. "We welcomed her with open arms."

"And open minds," Lady Tarleton added, "only I suppose that our arms have never quite closed around her and that she wants a niche in our minds. We haven't given her that, either, have we?"

"Perhaps not," her daughter agreed, and then, with that resolute attempt to do her justice which Linda found most unbearable of all: "She has such lovely hair—a real burning bush."

Linda's hair was beautiful. It flamed riotously all over her head. But for it her face would have been entirely commonplace—a little mouth, too little; a nose like two nostrils in an inexperienced fullface drawing (you felt that it could not exist at all in profile); pale blue eyes with rather pale eyelashes; and a pretty white skin always on the brink of freckles. But nothing emphatic; nothing to arrest your attention except her hair.

It was her hair which might make people think her romantic if they didn't think.

It was her hair which had first made Dick's eyes wander toward her, and had subsequently made him follow them until its glowing mass became entangled in his thoughts and his dreams, and out of its glinting fabric a web was woven from which he could not escape.

At dinner at Tarleton, with a hundred ideas like colored balls in the air together, and every one (so it seemed to Linda) talking at the same time and yet managing to hear what every one else said—sometimes, she couldn't imagine why, a silence would follow one of her own remarks. Dick's eyes, lit by the intellectual battle that he loved, would soften a little as he saw the light itself nestling in the red gold softness of his wife's head, and his thoughts would wander—was it to her or to his image of her?

Linda enjoyed talking about books. Like all people who don't read much, she was always tremendously impressed by the last thing that she had read, urging it upon every one else. Each book to her was a wild thing which she had tamed, strange and remote as a desert island, discovered by her resource and courage. Not, of course, that she had not been brought up in cultivated circles. She had once known a great friend of W. L. George's. But when she brought this cat out of her bag as if it had been a beautiful purring Persian full of slow pride, Lady Tarleton, looking past her with short sighted, friendly eyes, had murmured absent mindedly: "W. L. George, dear? Who is W. L. George?"

And Linda, instead of feeling elated, proud to be able to confound such gross ignorance, had on the contrary felt small and crushed, as if, by some absurd loaded dice of providence, only the things that her mother-in-law knew about had importance.

LADY TARLETON'S effortless pre-eminence was a continual source of surprise to Linda. Haphazard in her methods, short sighted, with friendly, absent minded manners, how had she managed to be an influence, a comfort, and an inspiration to so many different and divergent people?

Susan appeared far more positive. Penetrating and clear, with a certain hard fineness, mastering with difficulty the impatience of her fastidiousness, but softening all the same under her mother's gentle chidings. "After all, darling, pretences are so consoling."

"Pretendings," Susan amended with a smile. "You are so much nicer than I am, Mama."

Lord Tarleton was gentle and remote and aloof. Linda would twine herself into his arms—half creeper, half cat—and he would say: "There, there," patting her nervously from the depths of his embarrassment.

"I never know what she is thinking about," he would explain to his wife, who would answer gently, "She is just purring at you. It is rather nice, don't you think?"

"Well, you may be right, my dear," he would agree vaguely. He found his daughter-in-law disconcerting.

"They were all very good at their books," Linda would explain to her family—and the phrase clearly conveyed a perfectly definite meaning to them.

"What can she and Dick talk about when they are alone?" Susan asked her mother desperately.

"Perhaps they don't exactly talk, dear."

"But Dick! Think of Dick!"

His mother thought of him. "There is always her hair," she murmured vaguely.

"Well, he can't stay entangled in that forever."

"Perhaps not. But we mustn't—whatever we do we mustn't try to unwind him."

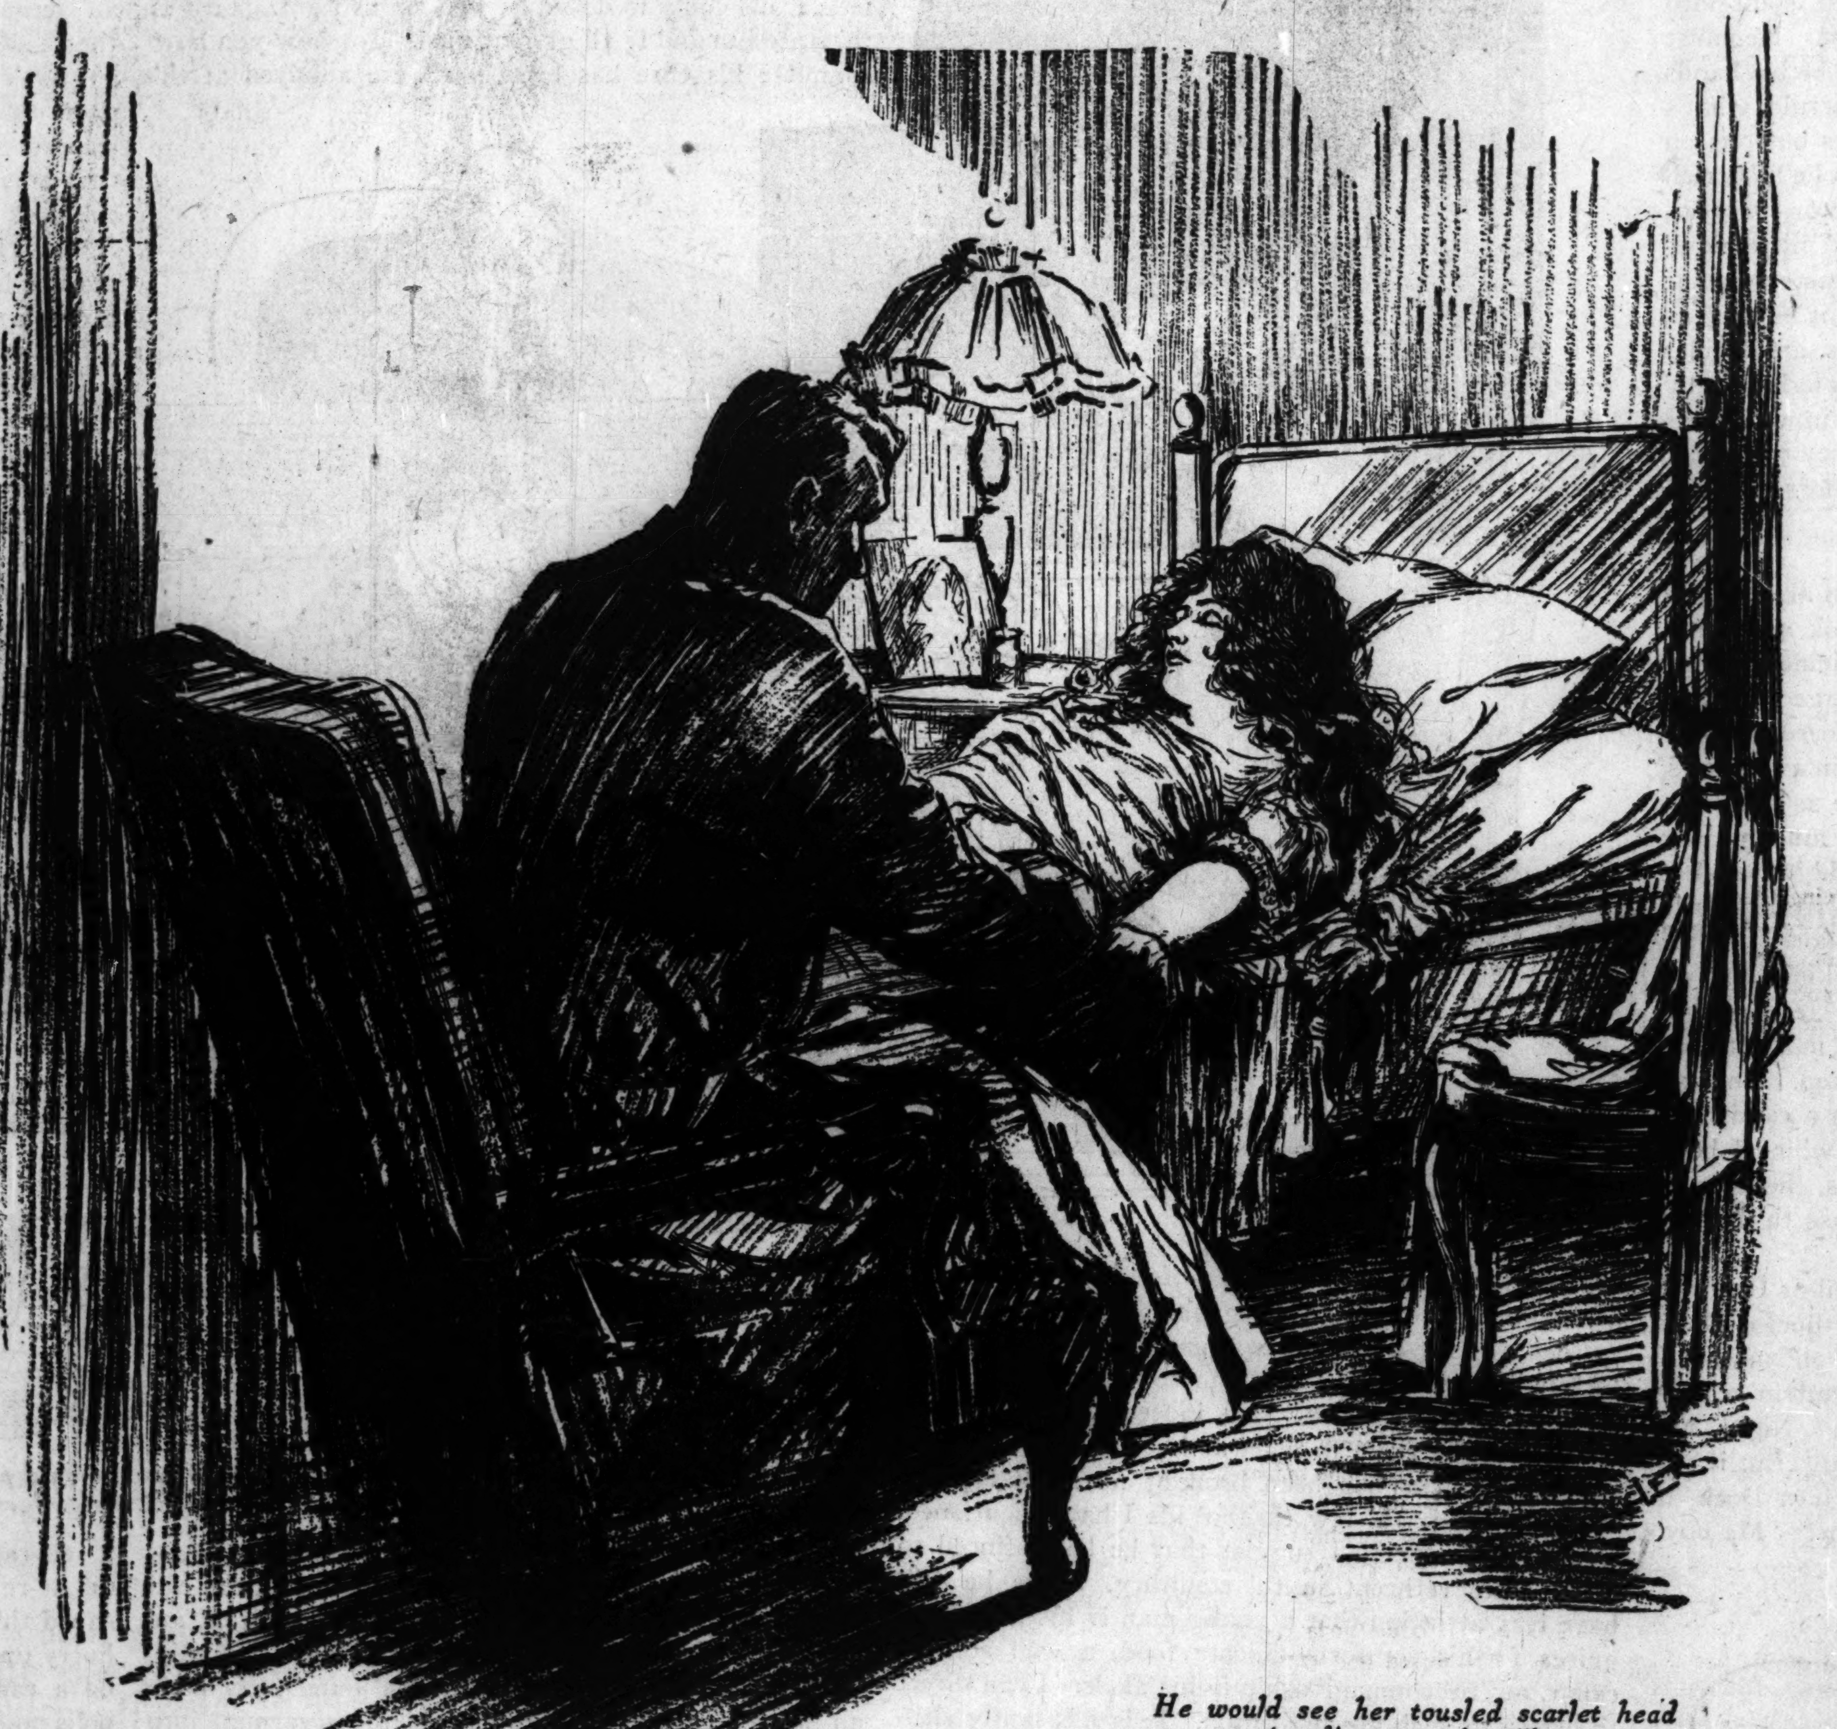
"Dick of all people"—Susan was bitter—"with his uncompromising sensitiveness."

"Don't you think," her mother protested gently, "that we are a little inclined to want everything paid in our own currency?"

"Dick's currency."

"Perhaps in a sort of unconscious way he wanted to escape from it."

Susan met this without flinching. Then they heard Linda's high tinkling laugh and her high shallow voice saying, "I find it so difficult not to see both sides of a question."



He would see her tousled scarlet head spreading over the pillow.

Her companion's answer was inaudible, but the breeze brought them a giggle from Linda.

Susan raised her eyebrows. "Paper money," she said. "Tissue paper money."

SEMI-UNCONSCIOUSLY Linda tried to keep Dick away from his family as much as possible. She didn't enjoy being at Tarleton. There were always people sitting about talking, talking, talking. "I don't see why they think themselves so clever," she would say sarcastically. "Any one can talk."

But all the same these eternal conversational orgies mystified her. One could discuss people and clothes and books and plays, but when one had explained that something was "perfectly rotten" or "perfectly lovely" there was really nothing more to be said; whereas the Tarletons and their friends went on and on and on until everything got so buried in words that one really didn't know what one was talking about.

And their standards were so queer. Dick, who never looked at another woman, talked so oddly about marriage, and when she laughed a little coyly to show that she knew that it was nonsense, no one said, as her father certainly would have done, "What does little Mrs. Home Ruler think?" And when she had commented brightly, "We women know all about you men," there had been a startled silence interrupted by a young man in spectacles asking, "What exactly do you mean by all?" To which she had not unnaturally answered: "Ask the cat."

At that moment Lord Tarleton had come in and said, "Cats? What cats are you talking about?" And there had been an awkward pause, breathlessly curtailed by Susan's saying, "I love the little short haired gray ones. They have so much more outline than Persians." And the young man had looked at her with loving eyes and murmured, "Yes, you would—you, who love trees in winter, shorn of obliterating leaves."

They were wrongheaded, Linda reflected. That was what it was. Trees were meant to have leaves. And what did they mean by obliterating? They always seemed to get their words wrong. It was so confusing. "Marriage is such a silly form of hate," Susan had said earlier in the day, and nobody had corrected her. No doubt it was talking so much that was at the bottom of all the mischief.

Linda often longed to ask Dick about his family. There were, she felt, a large number of things that he could explain to her. But he always looked so puzzled when she asked him questions.

On the night of the cat conversation Susan was sitting in her mother's bedroom.

"And marriage is called a sacrament," she said bitterly.

For a moment Lady Tarleton's short sighted eyes looked over the wall that sacrament had been to her into distant spaces of unknown, vivid realizations.

"I think perhaps it is," she dissented gently—almost apologetically.

"And one has to be strangled for life by a few red hairs?"

Lady Tarleton smiled.

"We all have our red hairs, don't we? At least I do hope we have."

"But not nothing else—absolutely nothing else."

"No one could be more positive than Linda. As she says herself, she always knows her own mind."

"Yes," Susan was still bitter, "'when once I make up my mind, I make up my mind,' as if there were the smallest hope of ever untying it."

"I think, darling"—her mother's voice was very soft—"you would be happier if you never thought of the word 'mind' in conversation with Linda. Just face the fact once and for all that she hasn't got one."

"There are so many years to come. What will Dick do?" Susan moaned.

Dick tried to be impartial, or rather, equally partial to both sides. Thinking of his wife, he would feel her curling herself into his arms like a little warm fluttering bird with a frightened beating heart subsiding gently into confidence; or he would see her touzled scarlet head spreading over the pillow and her half awake, wholly surprised eyes beginning anew each morning to get accustomed to the world. And when she murmured: "What did Mr. Dyke mean by 'obliterating leaves'?" he would laugh and kiss her and burn his fingers in her hair.

As for his family—well, they didn't need protection. Love—how much he loved them; admiration—how much he admired them; confidence, in the sense in which it meant trusting rather than confidings—all of these things he felt. But defending them would be like defending an army against a humming bird—an operation which could only be necessary if the army knew the meaning of a humming bird.

In dealing with the relations of his wife and his family, Dick instinctively sought refuge in metaphors. Insidiously they would lead him astray until he drifted away with them out of reach of reality.

Dick was rather like his father.

"AND it never gets any darker," Lady Tarleton's short sighted eyes were almost touching Linda's hair as it swirled about over her pillow.

"No; it has always been the same," Linda said.

Susan was getting a little tired of the zest with which Mr. Dyke believed in free will. It contrived to make her so responsible for herself—not on broad, generous lines of theories and achievements and personality, but in the most exasperating precision and detail. The fact that Mr. Dyke, who was in love with her, thought her habit of biting her nails and all of the other tricks with which she had for years carried on a sort of trench warfare, divine exhalations of her perfection, was not really consoling. It was more restful to assume that her great height (which she hated) had been foisted on to her by God and then when she was irritable it was because she was tired. But Mr. Dyke could admit none of these compromises between deities. Her tallness was the shooting up of her soul; her irritability, sparks from the fire of her intellect. All of which was fatiguing to Susan who was, in addition, annoyed with her Mr. Dyke for being called Demetrius—an annoyance which she admitted would have been more justified by his philosophy than it was by hers.

The topic was being discussed after dinner.

"After all," Dick said, "if you tell a woman she is beautiful, you give it and she accepts it as a compliment to herself rather than to God."

"And pray, when did you last tell a woman she was beautiful?" asked Linda roguishly.

Susan ignored her.

"I suppose one does stamp one's own looks—trade mark them, so to speak,"—she agreed. "But admitting that you pour expression into your eyes, what about their shape? Surely you can't be asked to accept responsibility for a poached egg when you want an almond?"

"Your own poached egg," Mr. Dyke spoke with gravity, "is better than any one else's almond."

"Clearly." Susan was dry. "But not better than one's own almond would have been."

"One man's almond is another man's poached egg," said Dick flippantly, but Mr. Dyke was not to be put off so easily.

"It is immaterial whether it is a poached egg or an almond," he explained almost reproachfully. "The point is that it is your own."

"There is a time for everything," Linda said. "No one wants a poached egg for dinner or an almond at breakfast."

Dick laughed. Mr. Dyke looked at Linda, opened his mouth, and then shut it again.

Susan said under her breath, "What on earth does she imagine we're talking about?" and then reproached herself for her odious habit—of which she was always guiltily conscious—of saying things under her breath hoping that they would be heard.

"I think," Lady Tarleton said gently, "that in a way people achieve their own looks. Not the outlines, perhaps, but the filling in. A way of walking, a way of moving your head, certain laughs, certain gestures, so that it is not really your height that counts but your carriage, not your mouth that matters but the way you smile."

"Clearly," approved Mr. Dyke, "clearly." And he cast a surreptitious glance at Linda with the secretly satisfied feeling that to her it would probably be everything but clear.

But Susan was out of temper. "I shan't feel responsible for the color of my hair till I dye it," she said. "Will you, Linda?"

There was a horrified pause, as every one except Dick believed that Linda's hair was the only thing for which she could conceivably feel proud of being responsible.

"I should never dye my hair," the victim explained, "any more than I would curl it if it weren't naturally curly. As mother says, nature knows her own business best."

Lady Tarleton said gently, "She certainly did in your case, my dear."

"I can't see why one shouldn't receive credit for transforming a mouse into a raven or a fox." Susan, who was cross, couldn't get her teeth out of the subject.

"I shouldn't have thought you went in much for changing yourself," Dick retorted quietly.

Susan flushed.

"In your sister change would be disloyalty," flashed Mr. Dyke.

"I always longed to have red hair," Lady Tarleton smiled at them all. "I wanted it so badly that I used to look through my whole hair colored crop for one symptom."

"Think," Susan laughed, "if you had plunged quite young and achieved your own head."

"One achieves so many failures as it is," observed her mother a little grimly.

Dick and Linda walked out on to the terrace.

"Your family are always achieving things," she said plaintively.

He was silent.

"Would you like me to achieve," she asked, curling into him.

"The important thing is to be," he said gently.

The moon caught her. Her head was lifted up to him like a thirsty flower.

"I love you," he said, kissing her passionately.

As she entered the drawing room she began smoothing her hair.

"FATHER'S made a riddle," Linda, who was reading her letters, informed an unexpectant breakfast table. "Why are two men no match for one woman?"

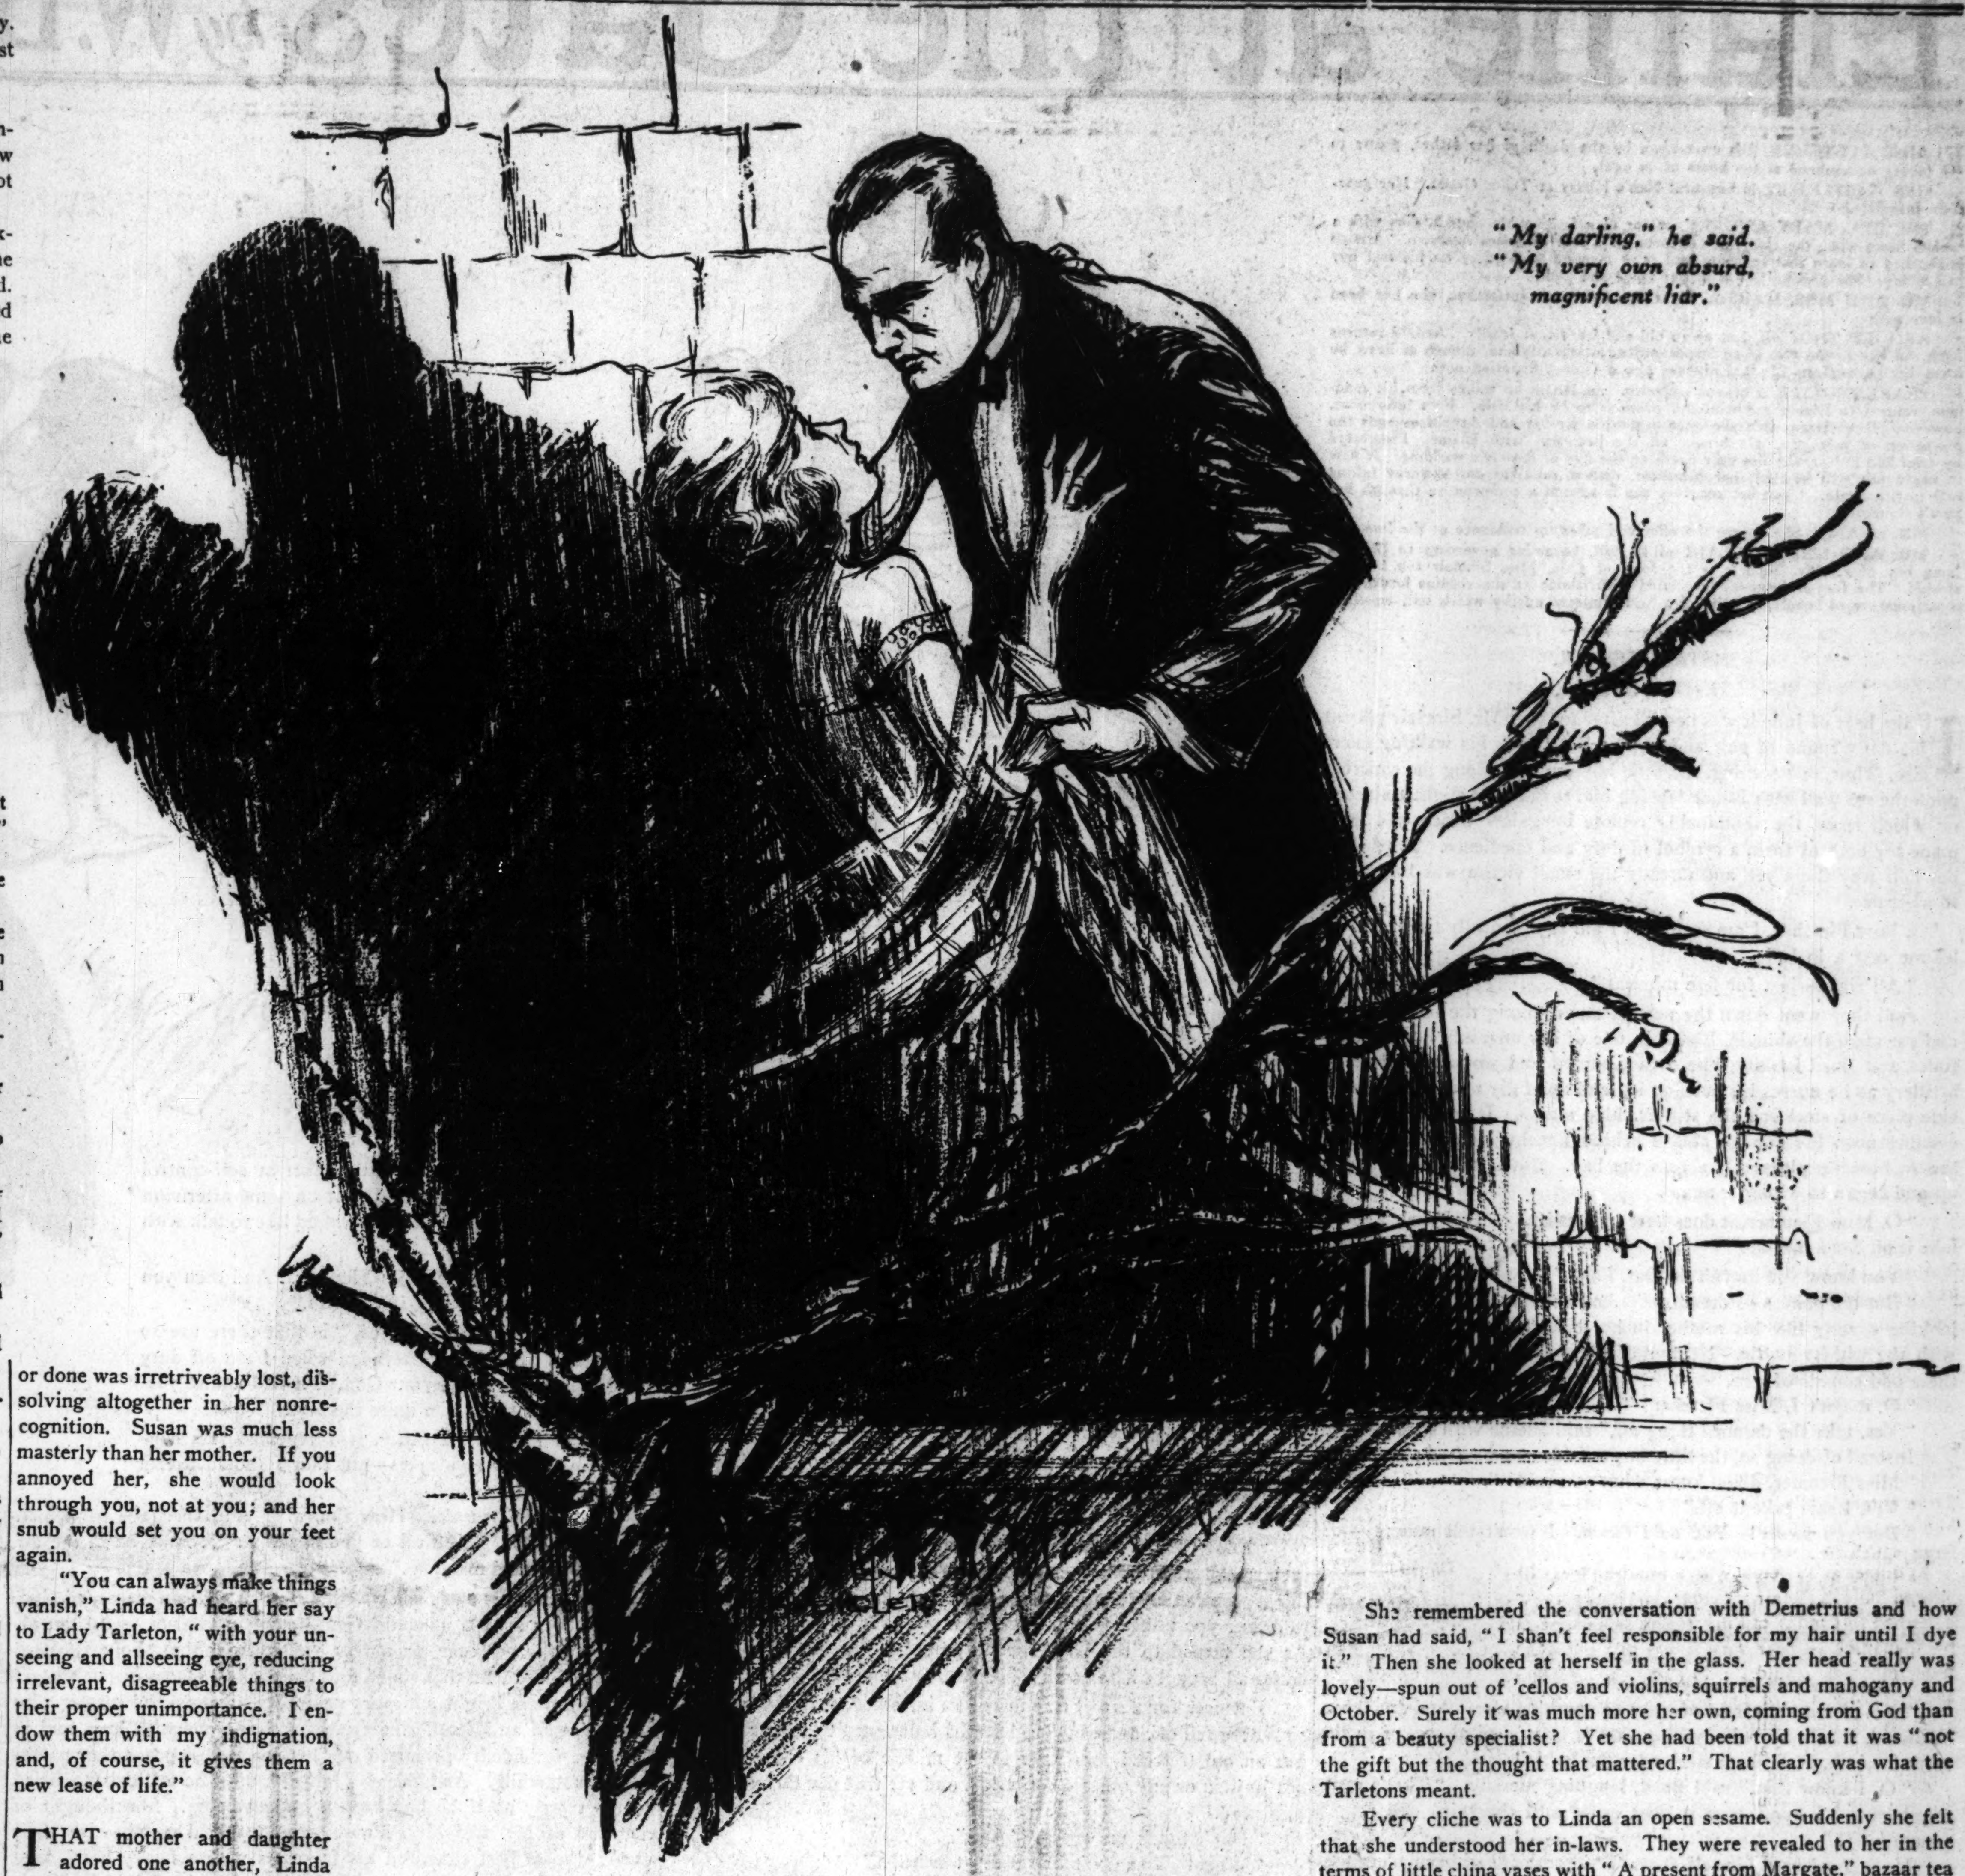
Susan, who was feeling guilty, tried to look puzzled.

"Because no woman can make a match with more than one man."

"How clever," Lady Tarleton said. "I have never guessed a riddle in my life. It would be so nice to be able to just once before I died."

RED HAIR

By Princess Bibesco



"My darling," he said. "My very own absurd, magnificent liar."

"And he wrote it himself," Linda explained triumphantly. "Father's a funny one," she added. "Why, sometimes I feel I must go home just to have a good laugh."

"How nice," murmured Lady Tarleton a little wanly.

"Not but what there's a funny side to everything," Linda continued brightly, "but father's a rare one for seeing it. I don't know what he'd do here," she added candidly, "though, of course, it's not every one likes a joke."

Demetrius felt strongly that she ought to be told—what, exactly, he didn't know. Nevertheless, when breakfast was over he asked her to show him the kitchen garden. Linda was delighted. She arched her neck at him, smiled through half shut eyes, allowed the smoke to come through her lips in slow blue coils—in fact, she treated him just as if he were one of her own "young men."

"I do like a woman to be womanly, don't you?" she asked sweetly unconscious that to Mr. Dyke a woman was invariably either a goddess or a female.

"What exactly do you mean by womanly?" Demetrius was always anxious to be sure that other people knew what they meant.

"Feminine." Linda explained. "Mother always says men should be men and women women. Of course, not every one can have a way with them, but that's no reason for behaving like a man."

Mr. Dyke was bewildered. Linda had never known him so silent.

"Susan's not like other girls," she went on.

"Your sister-in-law is not a girl," Demetrius interrupted. "She is a woman."

It sounded rather lame.

"Quite," Linda agreed, "she's never been young. That's what it is. Of course, it keeps men off, her being so like a man herself."

Mr. Dyke stared. He was speechless.

"Of course, I dare say she'd change—if Mr. All Right came along," his companion added magnanimously.

"How dare you talk about her," Mr. Dyke shouted. "How dare you, you shallow, empty headed—you—you thing! God hasn't given you eyes you could see her with." Demetrius was spluttering with hate.

Linda shrank back. Then she said in a low voice: "Shallow—empty headed. That's what they think me, isn't it?"

Then she burst into tears. "I didn't want to come here. I never asked to live among clever people."

"Mr. Dyke was horribly embarrassed. He didn't know what to do.

"Please, Mrs. Tarleton, please don't cry. I didn't mean it—really I didn't. I lost my temper. You see I—I—love Susan, and I couldn't bear the way you spoke of her. You do see, don't you?" Demetrius' pleading became suddenly human.

Linda, who dearly liked a love affair, dried her eyes and dabbed a little powder on her face.

"That's all right," she said. "I'm a bit hasty myself." And then—"All's fair in love and war."

Mr. Dyke felt abashed. She had, after all, been very generous.

THAT night Linda thought—or rather, the words "shallow, empty," went round and round in her head.

Yes, that was what they thought about her. She had always been an alien to them—somebody else's pet—a nasty little yapping dog—the sort they never would have dreamt of having themselves. Of course, they patted her. It was the easiest thing to do. And then Linda thought of herself—tenderly and a little romantically.

She had been sweet and gentle and pretty, soft and alluring and womanly. Intelligent—yes; but not intellectual. What was the point of an intellectual woman? "Intuition," reflected Linda with satisfaction; that was what she had got. Women arrived by instinct at the point which men reached—more slowly—by reason. The eternal feminine, ever since she had first heard of it, had always dominated her conception of life. The functions of the two sexes were quite distinct and different. Charming women weren't meant to bother their pretty heads. Man by plodding logic dominated the material world, while woman attracted and distracted, keeping hidden away her primeval wisdom.

Femininity. Linda knew just the blend of the sentimental, the platitudinous, and the coy out of which it was made. In her world women turned men round their little fingers; the male was managed without his knowing it. It was a matter of being dainty and pouting, of having pretty ways, and not showing how clever you were. And as an outlet there was always a giggling freemasonry of female friends.

But after her marriage somehow or other her values wouldn't fit into her new life. Dick never complained of the food, never grumbled about the money she spent, never objected to her gentleman friends—in fact, from the point of view of being managed he could hardly be said to exist. When she had told him that Bertie had kissed her in a taxi, he had said: "Poor Bertie," which had seemed to her an altogether absurd thing to say, though not quite so absurd as Susan's "Surely not as bad as that" when Linda told her that Bertie was "quite the gentleman."

The Tarletons really were as queer as they could be. "Quaint," she called them to her family, because one must be loyal. You couldn't talk anything over with Susan. She really didn't seem to know what you meant.

"I always think that we women should stick together," Linda had explained to her. "I tell my young men straight out: 'Don't you believe that women can't be friends. It may suit your book to think so, but it's not true.'"

Susan had agreed rather vaguely, while Linda continued: "I always say, 'Now, don't you play the Lords of Creation. We women can do quite well without you,'" and Susan had answered: "I have never seen a woman who could. I can't myself."

Linda had been quite horrified. Nice women didn't talk like that. What would her mother have said?

The relations between the Harrises and the Tarletons had always been a little strained. Mr. Harris had said to Lord Tarleton: "Well, the young people may regard us as old fogies, but we're not too old to remember kissing time."

And Mrs. Harris had said to Dick: "Whip her when she's naughty and kiss her when she's good. That's the language a woman understands."

But it had clearly not been a language that Dick understood.

Mrs. Harris had always been anxious to explain to Lady Tarleton what a lot of chances Linda had had, her stories ending triumphantly with phrases like "And we all know how difficult it is to make a naval man take 'no' for an answer." But Lady Tarleton had clearly not known.

They were an odd family, Linda reflected; ignorant with all their book learning. What irritated her most of all about them was their calm way of not seeing things. There was nothing they couldn't overlook if they wanted to. She herself would frequently explain to her mother, "I just ignored him." But it always meant a toss of the head, a deliberately turned back, an ostentatiously hummed tune. Lady Tarleton, on the other hand, simply didn't seem to notice. She would look at you with smiling friendly eyes, and what you had said or done was irretriveably lost, dissolving altogether in her nonrecognition. Susan was much less masterly than her mother. If you annoyed her, she would look through you, not at you; and her snub would set you on your feet again.

"You can always make things vanish," Linda had heard her say to Lady Tarleton, "with your unseeing and allseeing eye, reducing irrelevant, disagreeable things to their proper unimportance. I endow them with my indignation, and, of course, it gives them a new lease of life."

THAT mother and daughter adored one another, Linda could not deny. And yet how odd they were together—always generalizing. Lady Tarleton never seemed to take a proper mother's interest at all. She asked no questions, laid down no rules, invited no confidences. And yet, what was it that Mr. Dyke had said? That their whole relationship was irrigated by understanding. Linda remembered wondering if he meant "irritated," but of course, that wouldn't have made sense, either.

Poor Demetrius! To think that he was in love with Susan! It seemed so odd. Susan, who was so tall and erect and firm, so pitiably without what Mrs. Harris called the "je ne sais quoi."

It really was odd, Linda thought, but she brightened a little when she remembered that there was, after all, no accounting for tastes.

"Mr. Dyke wants to marry Susan," she told Dick, a little triumphant at being able to impart such exciting information.

"Poor Demetrius, she will never marry him." Dick didn't seem at all surprised by her news. "People are always wanting to marry Susan."

Linda was wide-eyed with amazement.

"Do you mean to say she's had several proposals?"

Dick laughed. "Dozens. But she's so uncompromising. She says that every marriage represents a certain lapse of fastidiousness. Of course, I see what she means."

"I don't!" snapped Linda, and she left the room.

"My precious!" Catching up with her in the passage, Dick caught her in his arms.

He still loved the things she didn't see.

Linda felt that her knowledge of Mr. Dyke's secret created a bond between them. She would sit down next to him and have a little talk.

"I do like books," she would say. "I've always said to father, 'There's a great art in writing.' He would tease me so when I was little and say: 'What sort of a stocking are we knitting today? Blue, I'll be bound.'"

Mr. Dyke never knew what to answer.

"Your father must be an exceptional man," he would murmur truthfully.

"I wish you knew him." Linda was eager. "He's so original. He says a man who's made a good joke has done a good deed. He told Mr. Norris—that's our clergyman—so. 'Healthy laughter,' he said, 'wholesome laughter, is a benefit to mankind.'"

"And what did Mr. Norris say?"

"He quite agreed. He says you please God if you play heartily and work heartily."

Demetrius was a little disappointed by Mr. Norris, who clearly didn't come up to the Harris standard.

Susan said to him, later in the day, "Do you think it is quite honorable to draw poor Linda out?"

"Mrs. Tarleton is a nice woman," he answered unexpectedly. "And without her red hair she would probably have been a happy one."

"She is happy," murmured Lady Tarleton, and then, gently rebuking Susan, "So is Dick."

"It isn't being in love; it's loving that makes you happy," Susan said passionately. "It's like the difference between beauty and charm. What is left when your beauty has gone, when the tide is out, and all the hidden boots and sardine tins are revealed? Charm is high tide forever."

"Some tides go out and leave starfish and little pink shells and the sunset reflected in wet sand."

"It's safest all covered up," Susan said harshly.

Linda became more and more conscious of the way her in-laws harped on her hair. "One would think it was my only feature," she would say resentfully, and, indeed, it did sometimes seem as if it were the only cushion on which the whole family could fall back with relief.

Susan had refused Demetrius, who had returned to London; but there had been no talk about it. Linda wanted to know from Lady Tarleton exactly what he had said.

"I don't know, dear. I didn't ask."

It was most unnatural, Linda thought, and, as she was feeling cross, she added, "Susan is getting on."

"Getting on, dear? Getting on with what?"

It was hopeless, Linda thought. One couldn't make them understand anything. They simply weren't normal.

After Mr. Dyke had left for the station she had gone to put her arms around Susan to cheer her up.

"You can confide in me, darling. I know all about it. Just treat me as if I were your own sister."

Susan had looked altogether bewildered.

"Did he try to kiss you? I know he was terribly in love."

Susan had looked at her for a moment with the most absolute contempt. Then she had given a short laugh and said: "Linda, you are impertinent without being funny."

LINDA had complained to Dick, but for once he had taken his sister's side.

"My dear child, you can surely see that that wasn't a question you could ask or she could answer."

"I don't see it at all," Linda had said. "Unnatural, that's what you all are," and she had refused to kiss him good-night.

It was not till some time after that that she discovered that Susan was writing a book.

"Did you find the plot abroad?" she asked wonderingly.

Increasingly she felt the necessity of impressing the Tarletons. But how was one to set about it?

Love affairs were no good. They never seemed surprised or shocked or even interested. Nothing that she did or was affected them at all except with slight distaste. They praised laboriously. They reproved rarely. They commented never. There was only one way in which she dazzled them—her hair. And even that, she supposed, she had not achieved.

She remembered the conversation with Demetrius and how Susan had said, "I shan't feel responsible for my hair until I dye it." Then she looked at herself in the glass. Her head really was lovely—spun out of 'cellos and violins, squirrels and mahogany and October. Surely it was much more her own, coming from God than from a beauty specialist? Yet she had been told that it was "not the gift but the thought that mattered." That clearly was what the Tarletons meant.

Every cliche was to Linda an open sesame. Suddenly she felt that she understood her in-laws. They were revealed to her in the terms of little china vases with "A present from Margate," bazaar tea cosies and shell work boxes. Isn't the concrete, too, a metaphor? Reading without tears, the picture of the cat that precedes the word, the image of a madonna which does duty for a conception, all of that process of simplification and consummation which takes refuge in or rises to symbols—had not Linda discovered it when suddenly the Tarletons were revealed to her in the phrase, "It is not the gift but the thought that matters?"

No one was staying at Tarleton. It was just a family party. It would, after all, Linda thought, have been impossible to do it in front of strangers.

Dinner had been characteristic. Lord Tarleton had said that it was surprising how few people went to Iceland. The whole family had agreed that P. G. Wodehouse was a man of genius and that if you were foolish enough not to see his profound exquisite distinction you need only put it next to Galsworthy "Ladies and Gentlemen," presumably intending to show breeding.

Linda had said, "But I thought you didn't like slang," and Dick had answered, "That is where the genius comes in."

Then Linda had protested, "But Mr. Galsworthy is very intellectual," and Dick had said that the danger of making a rule about humanity was that either your characters were exceptions or else they were not human beings, and Susan explained that profiteering in unhappiness was artistically ruinous, and that she could forgive people everything except being misunderstood.

Linda had said, "Christ was misunderstood," and Susan had retorted, "How cynical you are."

Then Lady Tarleton had come to the rescue with. "What a lovely gold dress, dear. It catches gleams from your hair."

Linda straightened herself; she tossed her head. All of the gentility which had been alike her standby and her downfall fell from her.

"You like my hair, don't you?" she said.

Because the tone of her voice was painful to them all, Lady Tarleton smiled a little vaguely. Susan curled her lip. Lord Tarleton averted his eyes and withdrew his attention, and Dick looked straight at his wife.

"Well, I don't suppose you ever guessed it, for all your cleverness. But it's dyed."

Lord Tarleton heard the last word. "Who has died?" he asked.

Susan said consolingly: "No, I never should have guessed."

Lady Tarleton murmured, "It's very pretty, all the same."

Linda looked at them. Where had her bombshell disappeared to? No one had even asked her how she had done it, by what means the miracle had been achieved.

An overwhelming feeling of discouragement came over her. Her eyes filled with tears. Uncertainly, as if she couldn't quite see where she was going, she left the room.

"It was brave of her to tell us," commented Lady Tarleton with gentle decisiveness.

Dick dashed out after his wife.

"My darling," he said, "my very own absurd, magnificent liar."

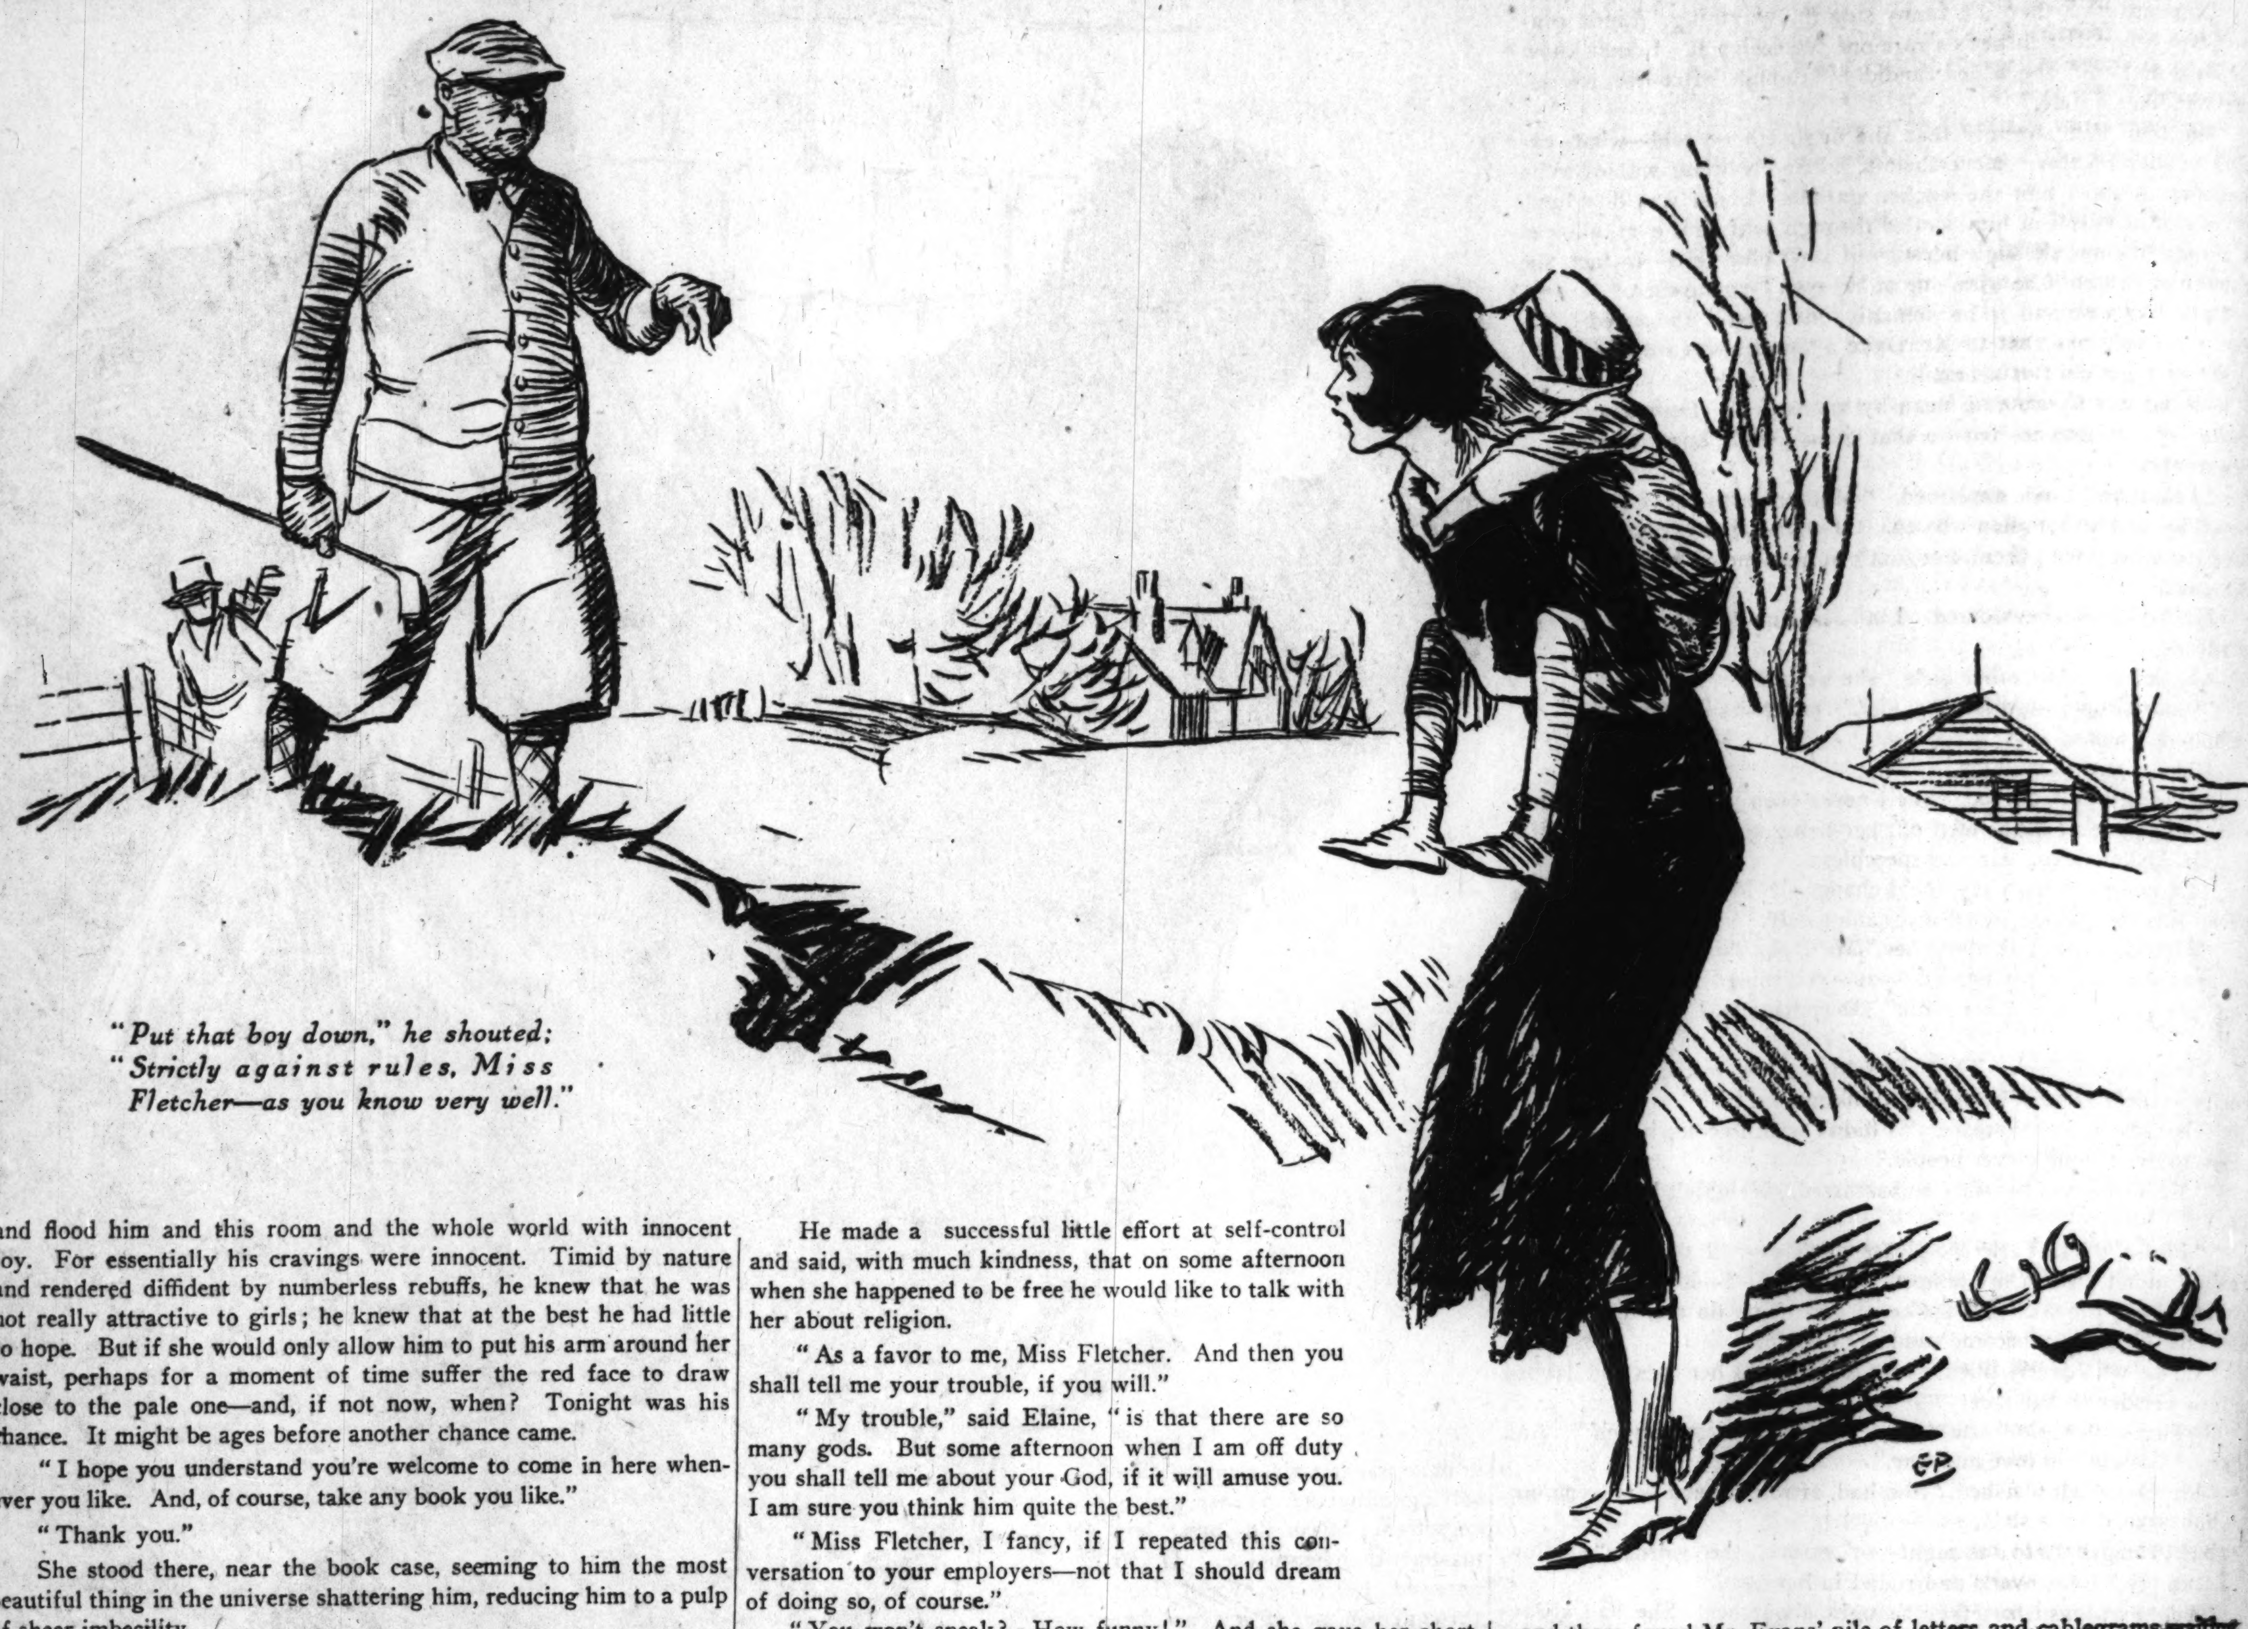
Elaine at the Gates by W. B. Maxwell



"Put that boy down," he shouted; "Strictly against rules, Miss Fletcher—as you know very well."

ELAINE FLETCHER, left an orphan by the death of her father, grows to lovely womanhood at the home of an aunt,

MRS. CASTLETON, in beautiful Nun's House at Tudor Green. Her guardian, infatuated with

THE REV. MARK AWDREY, rector of a fashionable church, dies with a broken heart when the clergyman departs for a tour of South America. Elaine is shocked to learn that her aunt had been married to Awdrey on his last day in London. She goes to live with her uncle and aunt,

MR. AND MRS. MARSH. Ever since she can remember, she has been in love with

ARNOLD THORNE, last of an old and important family. Arnold returns from the war in the grip of an inappeasable restlessness and, though at heart he loves Elaine, neglects her and plunges into a violent flirtation with

PEARL ESDAILE, a brazen coquette. At length he wakes from his madness, returns to Elaine and wins her promise to be his wife. Fate intervenes, however. Pearl learns that she is to become a mother and Arnold extends the protection of marriage. He breaks off the betrothal with Elaine. Prostrated by grief and horror, she lies near death on the day of Arnold's wedding. A flaw in her aunt's will had left her penniless, distant relatives and Awdrey falling heir to the estate. Upon her recovery she is offered a compromise through her aunt's solicitor,

MR. EVANS. She spurns the offer and takes up residence at the home of

MR. AND MRS. SINCLAIR of Bexhill, becoming governess to Basil, a lame boy of 7. Mr. Sinclair is too fond of girls, Mrs. Sinclair too fond of alcohol. The former becomes fascinated with Elaine as she regains health and some measure of beauty, in spite of a hard, reticent apathy which still envelops her.

INSTALLMENT X.

The Tall Stranger.

IN the heat of June it was not till after tea that Mr. Sinclair played his daily round of golf and Master Basil took his walking exercise. Thus, one evening, the little boy dragged along the concrete upon the sea wall with Elaine leading him toward the slight eminence on which stood the abominably remote bungalow which had been made for both of them a symbol of duty and obedience. They were not half way there yet, and already the small victim was beginning to whimper.

"O, Miss Fletcher, I am so tired. I am so dreadfully tired. O, do let me rest a little."

"All right—just for five minutes."

And they went down the nearest steps among the bathing huts and sat upon the shingle, Elaine in one of her ungainly boylike attitudes and Basil looking like a dismounted and wounded driver of artillery as he nurses his burning leg and dolefully touched the cruel side piece of steel and the stiff buckled straps. It was a beautiful evening now, the sun all ablaze behind Beachy Head, and a good breeze blowing pleasantly across the bay. But soon the boy stood up and began to whimper again.

"O, Miss Fletcher, it does hurt so dreadfully. O, I wish I could take it off for a minute."

"You know you mayn't do that, Basil."

"But the pain is so dreadful." And he whimpered more loudly, looking exactly like his mother in her brief after being discovered with the whisky bottle. Neither of them shed tears while making these odd sounds of woe.

"O, mayn't I, Miss Fletcher?"

"Yes, take the damned thing off," said Elaine with force.

Instead of doing so, the little boy sat down and stared at her.

"Miss Fletcher, d'you know what you said?"

"Yes, I said take it off."

"But you swore! You said damn. I won't tell mummy—or daddy either."

"You may if you like."

"I wont," said Basil, and he unbuckled his straps. "Miss Fletcher, you aren't afraid of mummy?"

"No."

"Nor not afraid of daddy either."

"No. I am not afraid of them or anything else. And don't you be afraid, Basil—not of anything that is in heaven above, or in the earth beneath, or in the water under the earth."

"O, I know that," said Basil, laughing merrily. "That's commandments. I know how it goes on—'until the third and fourth generation'!"

Having released himself from the instrument of benevolent torture, he threw it down, and they sat for some little while contentedly enough. Then Elaine carried him, trudging along the loose pebbles below the sea wall instead of going up the steps again. It was not likely that down here, close to the wall, they would be seen by any one.

BUT chance was against them. It happened that two golfers were on the hill near the hated bungalow in the act of driving off the tee to the sixteenth hole. This hole, as visitors to Bexhill will remember, is adjacent to the sea front; and Mr. Sinclair, unfortunately making a most monstrous "pull," saw his ball bound right out of the golf course upon the unfinished roadway and sail away towards the sea. A new ball,too.

A minute or so later, having driven another ball and hurried down the hill, he craved the indulgence of his friend and pushed himself puffing and blowing through the wire fence in a vain search for the first ball.

He did not find what he was looking for, but he found his son, with arms round Miss Fletcher's neck, riding pick-a-back. This discovery made him very angry. Indeed, parental feelings temporarily submerged all other emotion. He saw in Miss Fletcher not the entrancing central figure of his foolish dreams but a wilfully disobedient and most annoying young woman.

"Put that boy down," he shouted; and Basil, terrified, unclasped his hands and slid to his feet. "Strictly against rules, Miss Fletcher—as you know very wel."

Then he detected her bigger iniquity. The boy was without his surgical legging; it was under Miss Fletcher's right arm. He exploded; telling Miss Fletcher she ought to be ashamed of herself; vowing he would inform his wife the moment he got home, and promising that Mrs. Sinclair would be as much incensed as he was.

But then, alas, as he looked down at Miss Fletcher, sullen and defiant on the shingle, the father in him died and the idiot sprang to life, strong and overwhelming. His stormy voice grew feeble; he wiped the perspiration from his forehead, and said that on reflection he meant to refrain from telling his wife, since it could only distress her, but he would like to speak to Miss Fletcher quietly after dinner. He had remembered that Mrs. Sinclair was going to spend the evening with friends at the Carlton hotel.

AND that night, between nine and ten, a brief but unpleasant little scene occurred in the study or book room.

"What is it?" said Miss Fletcher, after he had closed the door.

"Well, about the boy, you know. We really must stick to rules—but I'm sorry I made such a fuss. Of course, I know you only did it out of kindness. I know you're fond of him."

"No, I fear I'm not. I ought to be, I suppose. I'm sorry for poor little Basil, but I can't pretend to anything more."

"Anyhow, he adores you," said Mr. Sinclair, almost pale with yearning desire.

He was pitiably conscious of her hardness, and yet insanely thinking that if one could once melt it, if one could somehow break down her reserve, then a softer, gentler, kinder person would emerge and flood him and this room and the whole world with innocent joy. For essentially his cravings were innocent. Timid by nature and rendered diffident by numberless rebuffs, he knew that he was not really attractive to girls; he knew that at the best he had little to hope. But if she would only allow him to put his arm around her waist, perhaps for a moment of time suffer the red face to draw close to the pale one—and, if not now, when? Tonight was his chance. It might be ages before another chance came.

"I hope you understand you're welcome to come in here whenever you like. And, of course, take any book you like."

"Thank you."

She stood there, near the book case, seeming to him the most beautiful thing in the universe shattering him, reducing him to a pulp of sheer imbecility.

"I don't know whether there are any you haven't read. You're such a dab at literature—Mr. Cunningham said so. Up in everything. I mean all the highbrow stuff. Last time Cunningham came to dinner you talked to him more than you ever do to me. What!" As she turned to the bookcase he passed a big hand behind her neck and brought it to rest on her further shoulder.

But only for a small fraction of an instant, for she turned again so that it fell off, and drawing back as he seemed to follow her, she put an outstretched forefinger in the middle of his chest. It was not ju-jitsu or any other clever trick, and yet that one finger stopped him dead.

"Don't touch me again, please."

"What! You don't like being touched?"

"Not by you, at any rate."

"O, I say. Can't you? Won't you?"

She saw the expression in his face, unmistakable because primeval, the prayer of the suffering male who begs for any kindness however small from the female that has enslaved him. It is an expression that sometimes moves unresponding women to pity. But Miss Fletcher had no pity for him. After taking a couple of steps backward she was advancing. She looked him straight in the eyes, and he now in turn read the expression of her whole face. Contempt. He saw the contempt, he felt it. It was blunt and brutal as a prehistoric stone implement, yet sharp and deadly as the latest pattern steel knife.

"Is that all you wanted with me?" and she was quite close to him.

He did not answer.

"Shall I send the cook to you?"

"The cook! Mrs. Flint? What d'you mean? Why?"

"I thought you might try your luck with her. Mrs. Sinclair won't be back for another hour at least."

She went out of the room, shutting the door softly, and he sat down at his writing table and buried his red face in his hands. The shame of it, the mortification, made him think that he would rather commit suicide than ever run after a girl again.

THE Mr. Cunningham that he had mentioned as having literary tastes was the clergyman at Mrs. Sinclair's favorite church. He it was who taught Basil the commandments; and for some time he, too, had been wishing to speak to Elaine quietly—but, of course, from far different motives than those which had impelled Mr. Sinclair. Meeting her, then, one morning just before luncheon, as she hurried to Vale's library to change a book, he courteously stopped her.

"Good morning, Miss Fletcher" and they stood at the corner of a road in the shade of an elm tree.

He was about fifty, but looking much younger, sandy and fresh-complexioned, and, like everybody else in the place, extremely sunburned. His manner was pleasant and easy; yet he made one understand that if he had no conceit of himself as a man, he considered his priestly office gave him a title to deference as well as respect.

"Miss Fletcher, I wonder if I dare say something to you."

"O, I should think so. There is no limit to the daring of clergymen, is there?"

Mr. Cunningham was perceptibly ruffled, and there was an accession of dignity as he went on with it

"I don't see you in church."

"No."

"Why don't you come to church?"

"Because I don't believe in God."

Mr. Cunningham said something to the effect that this was a dreadful answer.

"It's a rational one, anyhow."

He made a successful little effort at self-control and said, with much kindness, that on some afternoon when she happened to be free he would like to talk with her about religion.

"As a favor to me, Miss Fletcher. And then you shall tell me your trouble, if you will."

"My trouble," said Elaine, "is that there are so many gods. But some afternoon when I am off duty you shall tell me about your God, if it will amuse you. I am sure you think him quite the best."

"Miss Fletcher, I fancy, if I repeated this conversation to your employers—not that I should dream of doing so, of course."

"You won't sneak? How funny!" And she gave her short, mirthless laugh. "You all of you say that. It must be in the air of Bexhill. Good morning."

As she walked away she was thinking of her own discarded God. He had been such a splendid God—majestic yet not awful, an almost palpable presence, an almost visible light that shone through illimitable darkness, that shone into the darkest places of one's heart and made them bright and pure again; an all powerful master who made himself an all suffering friend, who led one with love, and in exchange for fidelity promised one his peace—his peace that passes all understanding. And she was faithful, until he failed her—failed her as utterly as if he had been a human being. She thought of the God of Mr. and Mrs. Marsh, who tortured people—for their good; who at best chastised his favorites with a heavy hand, kept them smarting because he was so fond of them, and in a lifetime's anguish prepared them for the stiffly regulated routine of a painless eternity. She thought of Mrs. Castleton's God, who was really just a nice attractive clergyman with triple attributes—say, the mature cultivation of middle age, the buoyant charm of youth, and the mystic fascination of a spiritualized, white haired, frail old gentleman. In her secret heart Aunt Edith would have liked to ask God to dinner—fuss round him, make him comfortable. Poor Aunt Edith! She thought also of Arnold Thorne's God—the commanding officer keeping his subalterns up to the mark; courtly, tolerant, able to speak without vindictiveness even of the devil; but merciless in regard to any breach of good form, ready to court martial, cashier, and ink out a name beneath the regimental group on the anteroom wall, if anybody forgot his duty as "one of us." And Mark Awdrey's God—grim and careless, looking right across the world and not seeing it; pointing far beyond its confines to disembodiment and nothingness, to an immaterialized satisfaction and an unappeasing contentment, to some vague starlit impossible bliss—impossible as bliss, because to reach it you must forget to be yourself and lose the memories of all you have ever been. Too many Gods—too many—and all of them too patently fashioned in man's image!

A FEW days after that conversation with Mr. Cunningham the early post brought her a formidable looking registered packet. It was sent upstairs by Mary, with a message that the master had signed for it, and Miss Fletcher opened it and studied its contents alone in her room before going down to breakfast.

As the various papers came out of the big square envelope, it seemed to her that she was passing from the sphere of reality into a complicated and rather ridiculous dream. These thin documents had absurdly expensive stamps upon them. They were transfers of stocks and shares from Mark Somerton Awdrey, clerk in holy orders, to Elaine Fletcher, spinster.

Then she saw the long typewritten letter from Mr. Evans, the solicitor, and began to read that.

"I am happy to inform you of a strange turn of events." So wrote Mr. Evans. "You are probably not aware that Mr. Mark Awdrey has been back in London for about a month." And Mr. Evans went on to relate how none of their messages and letters had reached Awdrey. It appeared that there was a failure in wireless communication with the ship, and he did not get the cablegrams addressed to the port of destination because he had already left the ship. A lady on board, traveling all alone, on her way to her husband and family in northern Brazil, had fallen dangerously ill; and Mr. Awdrey had judged it advisable to have her landed at Madeira, the first place at which the ship touched. There he had nursed her during many months, and after this he took the lady to the mainland, and finally restored her to the bosom of her family. But by this it was too late for his preaching pilgrimage. He stayed some time at Panama doing uninvited mission work among the colored dock laborers, and after loitering down the Pacific coast to Valparaiso made his way eventually across the continent to Buenos Aires—and there found Mr. Evans' pile of letters and cablegrams waiting for him.

As Elaine read this she thought that, of course, Mark Awdrey must always act erratically, astoundingly. The fact that his whole tour through the Argentine republic was definitely planned would make it certain that he would go somewhere else. She seemed also to know what was coming next in the solicitor's letter.

Mr. Evans told her that Awdrey had been grieved to hear of the misfortune that he had brought upon her, and he insisted on making restitution to the utmost of his power. Accordingly, he had instructed Mr. Evans to carry through the business and give to Miss Fletcher absolutely the sum of money—about fifteen thousand pounds—that had come to him by accident from Mrs. Castleton's estate.

She sat thinking about this offer with a little admiration and a great deal of pain. It had aroused so many dangerous memories. For the second time she was made to understand that men, contrary to the general belief, will sometimes do magnificently generous things in their dealings with hard cash; that they are ready to rob themselves for the benefit of others; that the sense of chivalry prevents them from disregarding even an unsubstantial claim of those who are poor and oppressed. Yes, it had seemed chivalrous, glorious, when she heard how that other man had done it. And now Mark Awdrey was doing it, on a slightly larger scale, carelessly, without parade, as though it were a matter of course—so to speak, taking the thing in his stride.

In the course of the day she obtained another large square envelope and returned all the documents to Mr. Evans with a flat refusal.

Mr. Evans wrote remonstrating and entreating. To this letter she did not reply at all. Then after a week she received a letter from a London bank enclosing a check to bearer for one hundred and seventy-five pounds, and informing her that on the instructions of the Rev. Mark Awdrey, a similar amount would be paid to her regularly every quarter. She returned the check to the bank and told them that there had evidently been a mistake; no money was due to her from the Rev. Mark Awdrey. Two days after this a visitor came to see her.

I was in the hour before dinner when she was upstairs with the boy, and Mary, the maid servant, came up looking none too well pleased.

"A gentleman for you, miss, waiting in the drawing room, and the mistress says will you please go down but not longer than half an hour. I am to stay with Master Basil till you come up—and I haven't laid the table for dinner yet."

Elaine asked no questions about her visitor. She knew very well who he was; and she paused outside the drawing room door to collect herself, considering what she would say first in the way of cold politeness, and what she would say secondly in stern negation.

He was seated near the window, reading.

"Hullo, Elaine! What a time you have kept me waiting. Look here." He had sprung up from his chair and he held a book towards her. "I have been reading this—'Second Nature'—By Adderley. Have you ever heard of him? It's rather good;" and he tossed the volume he was praising to the nearest table. "But now, if you please, to business."

It was incredible, impossible. This was their meeting—this was his greeting. He did not even offer to shake hands.

"And I want to be quick with it, too. I have no time to spare."

"I have only half an hour myself," said Elaine. "So the quicker you are the better."

As he drew nearer and looked at her, she had a sensation of his being too big for the room, too big and too stormy for such a quiet little place as Bexhill; as overwhelmingly so as would be a fierce north east gale suddenly blowing from the wrong quarter of the compass and striking the sheltered prettiness of this tame south coast. Outwardly he was just the same, rugged and untidy, his rumpled hair all loose on his forehead, his face perhaps still further darkened by sun and weather, and those deep lines about his mouth perhaps a little more strongly marked.

"I tell you I must get back to London tonight without fail. I have come here, as it is, at great inconvenience. There is an idea among my friends of getting me to work in the district of Rothersey. I am considering it. I don't know yet what I shall do. I am bothered." He said this fretfully, as though trying hard to prevent fretfulness from passing into anger. "The fact is, I don't know that I can do anything until this matter is settled between you and me."

"It is settled."

"It is not settled," he said with a raised voice. "I am here to settle it"; and he slapped his hands together, making a sudden unexpected noise.

He seemed to her the same and yet not quite the same. He was showing the old fretfulness with which he met the least opposition; he was ready to make his usual attempt to bear one down and smash all one's resistance; but something was missing of supreme arrogance, of that air of final authority that he used to assume with such freedom. He was like a person smarting under a grievance feeling justly indignant and yet desirous of employing diplomacy in order to obtain prompt redress. Firm in her own determination, she had the thought that it had been absurd to think of this man as really dangerous, to believe it was necessary to guard oneself against his influence, to treat him as one who mysteriously "took possession of people."

"As to your scruples, Elaine, well, I suppose I must swallow them—although I wasn't prepared for them." He said this with an obvious effort to conceal his irritation, as though addressing somebody who had been guilty of notorious bad conduct. "But I can have no more of them," and he made a gesture with his hand. "They must cease. I say they must cease, unles you wish me to tell you very plainly"—and he checked himself.

"What will you have to tell me?" said Elaine, in her hardest and most contemptuous tone.

"Why," he said loudly and angrily, "that you are a very foolish girl. You are behaving in a silly, idiotic way. Why do you do it? Is it sheer stupidity—or for the sole purpose of annoying me? You want the money and I don't. Then why don't you take it and be done with it?"

"Pardon me. I don't want it."

"Nonsense." And he turned away from her, fuming, and began to walk about exactly in his old style. "How can you talk so foolishly? Look here. Be sensible for a minute—if you can. Of course, I am sorry for all that dreadful trouble I brought upon you, but it wasn't my fault. I couldn't foresee the mess those lawyers were going to make of everything. I decline all blame. Do you hear? I say I'm sorry, but it wasn't any fault of mine."

"Possibly not. Anyhow, that's over and done with. I have ceased to think about it."

"I didn't want to marry Mrs. Castleton. No, I oughtn't to say that. What I mean is, I had no selfish motives—none whatever. She seemed to wish it, she seemed to think it would make her happier; and I hate to see people unhappy. I can't bear it. Well, then, I did what I thought was best for Mrs. Castleton—dear, kind soul—but I never dreamed I could possibly injure you. If you chose to consider me the cause of your disaster, you must at least admit that I was the innocent cause. Nevertheless, I am burdened with regrets and sorrowfulness." He said this in loud wrath, as if protesting against the disgraceful usage to which he was subjected. "I feel as uncomfortable as I should be if you were truly on my conscience, and I tell you I want to get you off it." Then he dropped his voice and soon was speaking quite gently. "Mrs. Castleton herself intended you to take all, Elaine. Dear Mrs. Castleton would wish you to get all that remains."

HE was impossible. Who else could have spoken of a wife thus? She was his wife, and he called her Mrs. Castleton. Yet, as Elaine noticed now, his face grew soft and his voice became tender as he kept repeating the name. The evidences of his quite unmistakable regard for the dead lady affected her, but she did not give gentleness for gentleness. She was as hard to him almost as she would have been to Mr. Sinclair.

"Why are we standing?" he said quietly. "Why don't you sit down? Sit down."

And they both seated themselves.

"Now, why won't you do what I ask, Elaine?"

"Because I couldn't if I wanted to, and I don't want to. Surely you must see for yourself that in no circumstances could I take money from you. You are nothing whatever to me."

"Nothing to you! How can you say that when I married your great aunt?"

"She was not my great aunt. She was a distant cousin. There is no relationship of any sort between you and me."

"Sufficient for the purpose in view. No one would think otherwise. Supposing dear Mrs. Castleton had died after a few years—and then supposing I had died, too, leaving this money to you by will. It would have been just as much a gift, and yet you would have accepted it then."

"I don't know. Anyhow, you are alive and not dead."

"Elaine, you said that unthinkingly"; and he stared at her. "You said it almost as if you wished I was dead."

"I didn't mean it. But, frankly, it cannot make any difference to my future, either way. I mean, that after this meeting——"

"We are not likely to meet again? There, Elaine, you have hit the right nail on the head—you always did. But that's just why I can't leave the question open, why I must and will have the business completed, so as to leave my mind at liberty for more important things. Suppose that, as you said, we never meet face to face again after tonight. That is quite possible."

"And probable," said Elaine.

"Yes, but unless I am able to put you and your affairs right behind me I shall be worried, preoccupied."

"O, I beg you not to give me another thought."

"Elaine, please don't make me lose my temper."

"I suppose you mean lose it again. You have already lost it once, haven't you?"

"Will you understand I am serious? Have you no imagination? Have you no faculty of putting yourself in the position of others? I say to you in all seriousness that your obstinate refusal has upset me. If persisted in, it might even come between me and my work. Therefore, for my sake, if not for your own, you must agree to what I wish."

He argued earnestly, but in vain. Her resolution could not be shaken.

"And now," she said, rising from her chair, "my time is over. You know, I am not my own mistress, Mr. Awdrey. I feel grateful in a way for your impossible offer, but nothing on earth would ever make me accept it. Good-night."

"Is that really final?" And he followed her through the doorway into the hall.

"Yes."

"Then you ought to be ashamed of yourself. You are heartless and selfish—and more annoying than any one I have ever met." And as she went up the stairs he called after her. "Foolish, headstrong girl. But I wash my hands of you. Do you hear? I refuse to be bothered."

"O, what is it?" said Mrs. Sinclair, in nervous alarm, as she came hurrying out of the study. "What is all this noise, Miss Fletcher?"

But Miss Fletcher disappeared, and the turbulent visitor had already gone through the hall and out of the house.

SHE did not sleep much that night. Next morning she felt heavy and tired. It was a warm, oppressive sort of day, with such wind as there was blowing off the land and not coming refreshingly to one across the water. After breakfast, she took Basil down to the sands and they sat there idly. The time passed slowly and Basil found her an unresponsive companion.

"See, Miss Fletcher, I'm making another railway cutting, and I'll have a bridge over it—just a small bridge—what foot passengers can go over. See, Miss Fletcher!"

But Miss Fletcher sat with hands clasped round her knees, staring at the remote outline of Beachy Head, lost in thought.

"Miss Fletcher, what are you thinking about?"

"What's that, Basil?"

"Miss Fletcher, tell me what you are thinking about."

"Well, if you want to know, I'm thinking about a man that I never want to see again."

And almost the next moment she saw him. She had heard his voice first. He called to her. He came down upon the sands followed by Mary, the maid servant.

"Ah! Here you are. This good girl—what's her name—Mary, said we should find you here."

He was smiling and cheerful; astounding one almost as much by his unexpected manner as by his unexpected presence.

"Mary is going to look after your charge. Yes, it is arranged. I have arranged it. Mary, take him away."

Basil, rendered timid by the tall, loud voiced stranger, went close to Mary's skirts and moved off with her.

Awdrey shouted after them.

"Mary! Hullo. Tell Mrs. Sinclair that Miss Fletcher will not be back to luncheon."

Elaine shouted, too.

"No, Mary, don't say that. Of course I shall be back. I'm coming directly."

"No. Go on, Mary. Do as I told you."

Mary went, ill pleased. She did not care for being taken off her ordinary work to look after the boy, and she resented—or at least believed that she resented—being ordered about and called What's-her-name by a person she had never seen till yesterday. On the other hand, there was a something about the gentleman. If he had troubled to be sure of her name, if he had been a little more conversational on their way from the house—glancing back from a distance, and thinking that all said and done he was a fine figure of a man, she saw him fling himself down on the sands beside that Miss Fletcher. She tossed her head and dragged Basil along faster.

"I thought you were going back to London last night."

"So I thought myself."

"Why didn't you?"

"Well, I went as far as the station, and then came back again." He said this gayly, laughingly. "I slept at the Sackville hotel. They are kind and obliging there. The head waiter lent me a brush and comb—and I had a dip in the sea this morning."

While he talked she observed him closely. The strong bronze that he had acquired during his travels still almost hid the natural sallowness of his complexion, and evidently a local barber must have shaved him, for there was none of that ugly stubble about his chin. Moreover, when he took off his straw hat he showed that he had also had his hair cut. Never had she seen him look so tidy, and, if the hateful memory must be faced, so clean.

"No, I found I couldn't go last night. I felt——" instead of finishing the sentence he turned his body and looked at her. Often as she had stared indignantly at his eyes, it yet seemed to her now that she had never really seen them before. They were quite light, not dark in color as she had thought, a kind of mixed gray and brown—no color, one might almost say, but with specks or dots upon them that gave an illusion of darkness. Their expressiveness came really from the eyebrows, the ridge of his forehead, and the lines between them. "You see, you and I have not finished, Elaine."

"O, don't, please, trouble about me. All I ask is to be left alone."

"But I can't leave you alone," he said gravely. "If truly—as you said in such a foolish way—you were nothing to me, I couldn't do it even then. I never leave unhappiness alone—much less misery and despair."

"What do you mean?"

"You! I see now, of course, that I am not the cause. It has nothing to do with money. There are deeper reasons. Stop. I don't want you to confide in me."

"I wasn't going to. If you flatter yourself by——"

"Rubbish." He said the word so loudly and sternly that it startled her. "Be yourself. You are not yourself, of course. You are acting a part. You are acting a part. You are like a person who has put on a cumbrous suit of armor because afraid of pin pricks—or gnat bites. It's ridiculous, Elaine."

PARIS the gay, the magnificent, offers such a whirl of excitement that enforced reading is exceedingly difficult. One is beset on all sides with temptations of pleasant idleness, of sitting in green parks watching the amazing parade, of driving leisurely through the Bois in a fiacre drawn by a philosophic horse, with a fat cocher in a lacquered hat drooping upon the box, of sauntering along the colorful quays upon the Left Bank, of sitting at great ease among the sidewalk tables of Fouquets in the Champs Elysees or outside the Cafe de la Paix, where all the world passes by if one waits long enough.

We have had rather a lot of talk with Americans here, in an effort to find out what books they are reading—if any. And as we sit around Paris, drinking vichy (forsooth we quaff so much vichy that we have been accused of forming a vichy circle in Paris!), we learn that the one book found everywhere is "So You're Going to Paris!" by Miss Clara Laughlin of Chicago. But Miss Laughlin, like the Chevalier Murry Nelson, is as well known in Paris as in Chicago, and was recently awarded the Legion of Honor.

"Tony," a new novel by Stephen Hudson, is the confessions of a minor Casanova, supposedly dwelling in London and about the continent in the late '90s and up to the war. He is a bad boy, Tony, and like all bad boys, extremely attractive—from his own account. Throughout his brightly colored career he acquires more ladies than ever King Solomon did, only Tony, unlike King Solomon, does not take them seriously. It is a chronicle of the fashionable world, told with fine cynicism.

For two days of rest and reading we repaired last week to Versailles, and to the Trianon palace, one of Europe's most charming hotels. It was there that President Wilson stayed, during the signing of the treaty in 1919 at Versailles, and appropriately, from our great bag of American books, we plucked first the new biography. "The True Story of Woodrow Wilson," by David Lawrence. Mr. Lawrence, who knew Wilson at Princeton, and later as a representative of the Associated Press, followed closely Wilson's career as governor of New Jersey, and as President of the United States, writes from the inside, frankly and fairly, and from extensive knowledge. We found the book as square a piece of biography as we ever read, and containing much intimate revelation.

The Punishment of Greed

AN AFRICAN ANIMAL TALE
By GUY H. B. DENT

Under Cover of the Night, Choyo, the Hyena, Stalks the Wild with Murder in His Coward's Heart

CHOYO stood upon the edge of a low cliff. The dying sun behind him gave to his outline a fictitious nobility. Grim and black he looked against the red west which shone through the leafless thorn trees on the brink.

Grim and black he appeared, as I have said, but the blackest thing about him was his craven heart, for he was Choyo, the hyena, surnamed "The Insatiable." A blot upon the night.

For a long while he stayed peering over the network of ravines and valleys at his feet. Abruptly the velvet darkness hid him from sight, and as abruptly Choyo slithered down to the plains.

As he went he wailed eerily. Now the cry of a hyena is an unpleasant thing to listen to at night in the bush. Far and afar went the noise of his lamenting, and presently from a greater distance a thin, high call answered to his obscene greeting, and Choyo ran his slobbering tongue round his jaws as he thought of the hunting now to take place.

Let there be no mistake. The hunting of Choyo, and such as he, is no record of chances boldly taken and odds unflinchingly faced. Not at all!

If the game which Choyo desired be alive, it must be small and weak before he will dare to face it.

Better, his prey should be both tiny and asleep.

Or, best of all, it should be dead—and long, long dead at that.

So Choyo dived into a runway beaten through the barbed Kitr bush and shambled along at top speed. By the note of his mate's answering cry he knew she also was anhungered, and he craved company and an ally against the terrors of the night.

Great and powerful were Choyo's head and forequarters, but weak and shrunken his hinder parts. Yet not so weak as his will, not so shrunken as his courage.

Immediately on leaving the shelter of the bush he struck oil, so to speak. A few yards ahead he made out the form of a small buck, which flicked his tail nervously from side to side as it stood.

That it was very young, Choyo perceived at a glance. He looked apprehensively at its head, and noted the absence of the least sign of horns. This was as it should be, to Choyo's thinking.

He paused in the denser gloom and screwed up his courage by a series of extraordinary jerkings and twistings of his devil's headpiece.

Then he ran in.

A hyena when stirred by emotion can cover the ground at a surprising speed.

Like the snap of a lock, therefore, Choyo sprang; sprang, swerved, and halted irresolute for one fatal second.

For the oil was, as you might say, watered. By some gross oversight Choyo had failed to see the mother.

NOW she was a roan antelope; of all her kind the most truculent and the least prone to panic flight.

Quick as had been that murderous rush in the darkness, her instant upspring and defense were quicker far. As the body snatcher halted she drove at him, and her short, curved horns tore him from ankle to shoulder.

Bawling his protestations of innocence to the calm stars, Choyo circled about the furious defender. Expostulating, explaining, and denying, he swung in a ten foot circle, ever seeking a chance to snatch at that tender morsel.

But the roan whirled as he, and ever kept her head towards his gaping mouth.

A second, nay, a tenth of a second, was all Choyo wanted. But he was not allowed the hundredth part of a moment's grace.

At last he grew furious, shouting scurrilous remarks about his adversary's morals and her infant's parentage.

For answer the roan stamped with her hooves and pressed him so furiously that he was fain to draw off.

Finally, with a low cunning, Choyo hinted of a deadly danger which even then threatened her from the rear, but she refused to be deluded, even though he swore that it was to warn her of this that he had paused on his way.

So Choyo turned and went, a craven with the aspect of a fiend.

For some time he lobbed on across the uneven ground, now stopping to follow up some wind born hint of carrion, now drifting along in the shadow of some ravine; the incarnation of malevolent hate.

But he was unlucky. Twice following his nose he ran indeed upon goodly provision, but each time the claim had been pre-emted by a greater than he. He was no fighter, so always he turned away, hoping for better things to come.

Ever and anon his bestial crying made the cruel night vibrate to its savage warning, and coming round an ant hill suddenly his mate, Tekonda, caused his voice to soar to the extreme note of horrified amaze. But recognizing her, Choyo ceased his clamor, and in silence they ran on together across the countryside.

Once Libarahki about his royal business passed them close, and they pondered the advisability of joining him that they might eat the unearned fruits of another's industry. But perceiving the king's entourage to be already numerous and by no means friendly, they changed their minds.

IT was on the side of a fairly steep hill that Choyo, who was traveling rather ahead of his mate, next came upon distinct evidence of what he sought.

He halted on the instant and Tekonda, some paces in the rear, copied his movement.

First Choyo blew the air in his lungs out through his nostrils, thus cleansing them from all impurities, then he sniffed and sniffed and sniffed, drawing in the scent in great bellowsful.

There was no doubt about the matter. His nose told him that food, rich, ripe, and forgotten, was close at hand. More, he could not detect any alien smell.

The kill was deserted.

Then a newly risen crescent moon showered silver upon the desolate landscape, and the white ribs of a wart hog shone palely from almost above his head.

Actually Choyo licked his chops at the sight, but he was no philanthropist.

He saw that but little meat remained upon the carcass, a couple of crammed mouthfuls, perhaps—no more. But then a hyena's mouth is not like yours. No! It is distinctly larger.

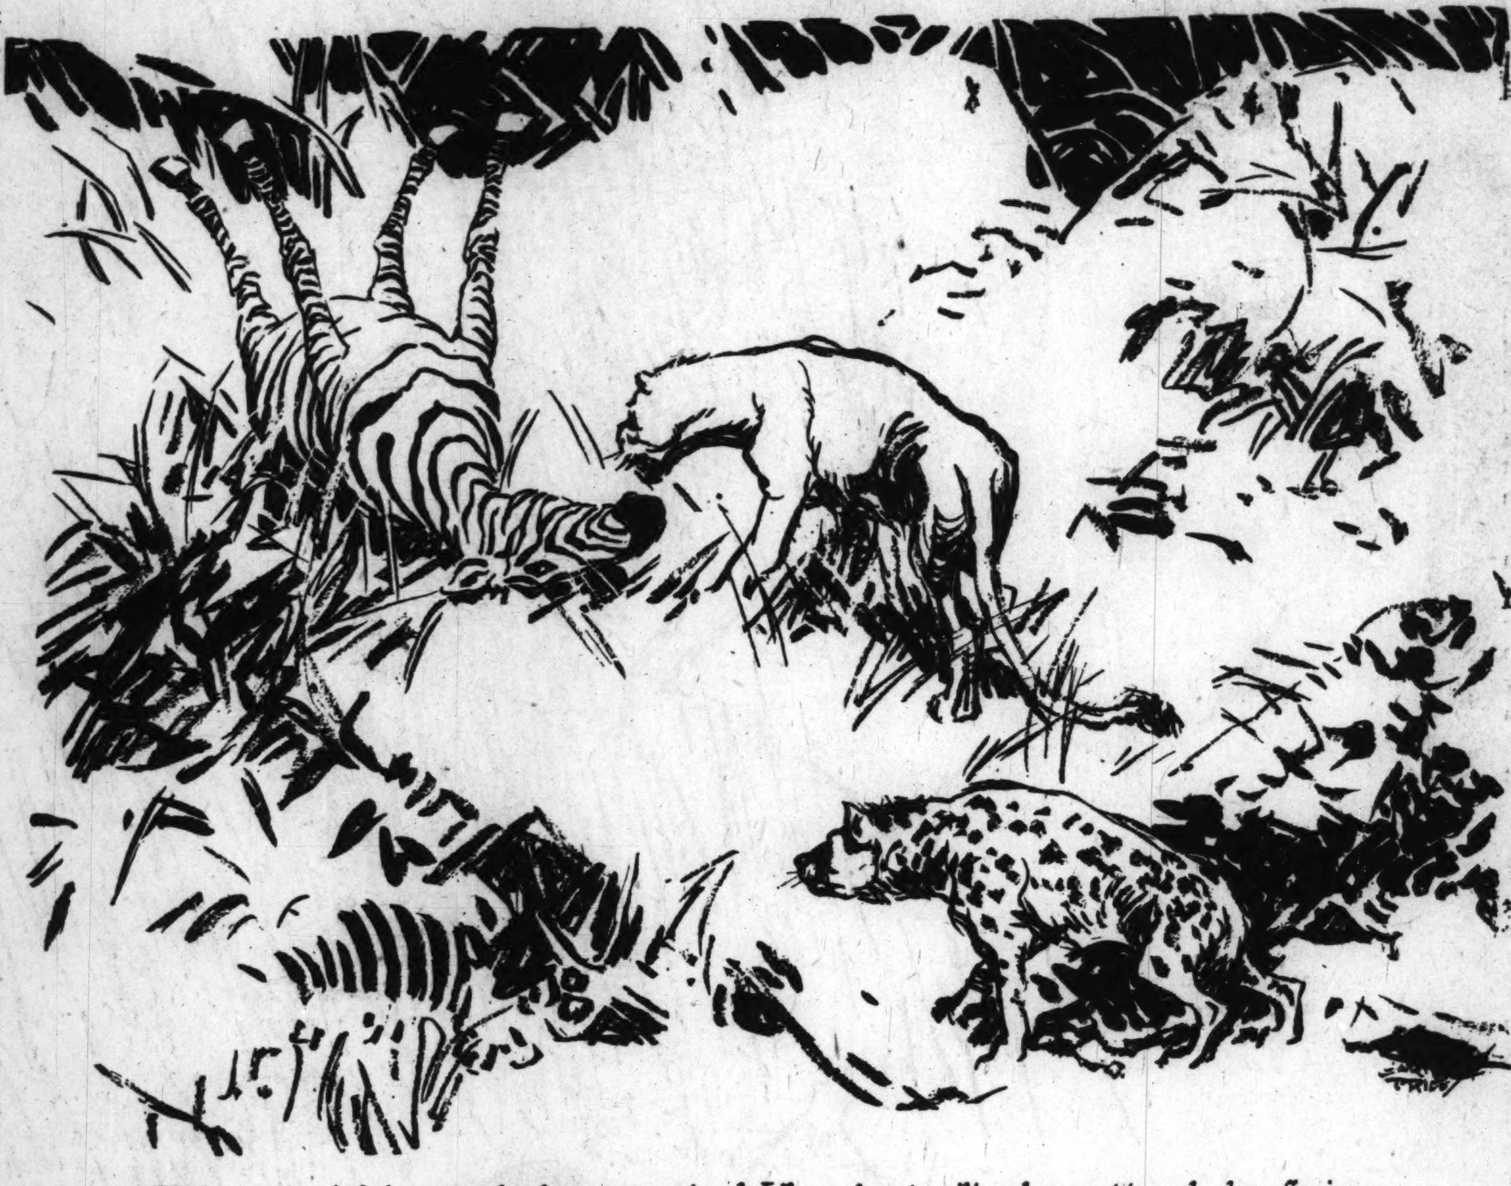
Seeing then the paucity of material, Choyo cast about in his mind whether he could not by some stratagem secure the whole of it for himself.

As for Tekonda, who was well named "The Lean," possibly she might be allowed to crack the rib bones afterwards.

Therefore, the leader swung his misshapen head slowly to one side, then started violently, shot round and ran back, hoping thus to terrify his spouse into a flight which might allow of sufficient eating space.

To Cho[illegible]mplete astonishment he wheeled about to face an utter void. [illegible] nothing there, at least the barren rocks and stunted scru[illegible]place—but no mate—no Tekonda!

Perplexed for the fraction of a moment, he stared aghast. Had some frightful enemy deprived him of his wife's complaisant services? Was he himself now menaced?



With an air of deference the hyena permitted Libargol superciliously to approach the offering.

Choyo wheeled in his tracks and learned the horrid truth. Saw Tekonda even as she lowered her head to the feed. Heard the sucking breath as she engulfed the remnants of the prize.

At this callous behaviour was Choyo deeply shocked. Appalled, indeed, was he by this baseness. He reached her side as her throat swelled and shrank to the last succulent tit-bit.

Sadly Choyo nosed amongst the rifled ruins; mournfully he cracked a discarded rib bone. And this, he reflected bitterly, was wifehood!

A sudden spasm of rage gripped him and he made at Tekonda, snarling and snorting his fury. For a space the two cavorted and grimaced around each other, looking like grotesque demons about some uncanny ritual. The fearsome sound of their steel trap jaws as they snapped at the air rang for fathoms round.

Then by accident Choyo charged home too realistically, his teeth actually grazed the throat of his ill smelling partner. He was unnerved. Not by a sudden rush of sympathy. O, dear no! But by fear of retaliation.

He drew back timidly, while Tekonda, coming to the conclusion that this was carrying things too far, seized the moment to back off the affair with dignity.

Choyo watched her ungainly form as it loped off down the slope, then he turned with a sigh of relief, climbed up to the brow, and disappeared from sight.

BRIEFLY let us chronicle the life of Tekonda after her divorce with damages, nominal, from her surly husband.

At the foot of a hill she came upon the trail of a fair sized wart hog, and made haste to investigate.

It was just possible, she knew, that there might be piglings amongst the party, and anyway she was not paid by the hour.

It was no long journey. As she rose the crest of a gully, Tekonda almost stumbled upon a stock, bristly wart hog, which ambled to and fro aimlessly from side to side.

His slender tufted tail was stiff as a poker above his head, so Tekonda took a cautious survey of the locality in order to discover the reason of this hoisting of the storm signal. There was nothing untoward to be discerned.

Reassured, the hyena cast a loop round Mr. Nguruwe searching for his presumed family. No good. Somewhat annoyed, she halted to observe the creature's erratic behavior. It was unlike anything in her extensive experience.

Sharply a splendid thought was born in her brain. The animal must be blind. A further scrutiny of the hog's track almost decided her. He had not covered 100 yards in a straight line, though the maze of his footprints in the sandy soil showed he had been at his game for hours.

Tekonda reckoned up her chances. The beast carried a nasty pair of tusks. Moreover, she knew his kind were redoubtable and implacable fighters. But of what avail courage and a stout heart against the woeful handicap of eternal night?

The hyena lowered head to ground, and appeared to be looking anywhere but in the right direction. It was all of a piece with her general untrustworthiness. Nguruwe at that moment happened to halt, appearing to be discouraged by his helplessness.

It was Tekonda's chance—his back was towards her. One snap of those spine crunching jaws!

Never had she done such a thing before. Never would she do such a thing again. For as she slid in sideways, a figure of cringing determination, the wart hog whipped about and charged.

I cannot explain to you his previous behavior. Perchance it was some form of moon madness, or, again, it might have been a species of love dance. I do not know.

Only I know that his sturdy figure lifted to the impulse of his short legs, and the crash of his impact toppled Tekonda fifteen feet away among the rocks.

Did she return to the engagement? She did not. The cynical moon hid a smile behind a hurrying cloud, and when she looked again Tekonda was hull down on the horizon and still going.

After an aching trek over the inhospitable wild Tekonda slowed to a halt; her nose gave warning of nearby refreshment. From the aroma it seemed unlikely that there would be any retaliation from this quarter! Yes! there it was. A Kongoni by the size, and well matured by the smell. She drew closer, and at her approach a lithe, sinister shape grew from out the shadow.

The intruder recognized Libargol of the imperial family, and crouched subserviently. No doubt when her majesty had eaten her fill there would be pickings a-plenty. Tekonda took station with half a dozen other toadies, and waited.

It happened that shortly after this fresh addition to her courtiers a sudden alarm jerked the lioness twenty feet from her repast at a bound.

There she hung, undecided a moment. Splendid in her furious vigilance, she stared across the plain. Her ears lay back against her rounded skull. One mighty fore-paw was raised from off the ground. She was compact of leashed lightning and appalling destruction.

Then madness took hold of Tekonda. The hyena remembered her success with Choyo. Here in her estimation was a somewhat similar situation. She was unbelievably hungry and unbelievably tormented by the proximity of food. She slid forward.

Often before she had shared her meal with overcomplacent royalty. Her mouth closed over a juicy portion of Kongoni's back.

Between the time of seizing the portion and the swallowing thereof she was dead.

It is not wise in the wild to presume upon hereditary dignity. Especially it is not wise when the position is upheld by royal strength allied to feminine irritability. So Tekonda died, and in due course her erstwhile companions ate her.

AS for Choyo, we came upon him smelling over the bones which Tekonda had previously depleted of their store.

The scene of his betrayal had exercised a potent fascination for him after a long and fruitless search on the far side of the ridge.

Anon he followed Tekonda in her flight. He was aweary of single blessedness. He would join forces again.

As was bound to happen since he followed in his wife's footsteps, Choyo came upon the place of Tekonda's demise.

By this time there was but little of the Kongoni left, and that little was disappearing amidst a volley of pistol-like reports from the riven bones down the capacious maws of a score of lesser flesheaters.

As a fact Choyo recognized some of the bones for those of his ill favored spouse. I will not definitely say he added cannibalism to his numerous vices, but I would not "put it past him."

Seeing quickly that here were no gleanings to be had, Choyo passed by after a momentary inspection, with barely a turn of his head. But had that bit of shinbone not been snapped up by one of the diners, he would have been on it like a flash, in spite of his seeming indifference to such sordid details.

Then luck smiled upon him. Further, she laughed upon him, and Choyo rejoiced, within discreet limits. The thing was so mightily impossible—a zebra incredibly alone, lying on its broad back with feet upreared to the star clotted heavens. Choyo knew that zebra do not lie like that for choice. Whether it had been wounded by some native and subsequently lost, or whether it had succumbed to one of the many diseases to which zebra are subject, it is not easy to say.

It must suffice that it was there, so far as a cautious investigation showed, intact. A gargantuan repast. Choyo was beside himself with glee. Alone under the watching moon, he danced fantastically in narrowing circles. Then he paused to reflect.

Some half an hour was passed in making sure. Then ten minutes in just making quite certain. Finally, in spite of his fear that others might happen along, a quite justifiable fear, Choyo decided it was too good to be true.

He felt the need of an independent auditor. He departed in search. By chance he came across Libargol. By appalling lies about the object he had discovered, he cajoled her into following his lead.

With a great show of bravery Choyo ran on ahead and bullied a jackal who was hanging about too near.

Only the presence of majesty, so Choyo hinted, prevented him from slaying the jackal where he was—an unlikely thing, to say the least.

With an air of bravado and mingled deference the hyena stepped aside and permitted Libargol superciliously to approach the offering. He made as much of a gesture as if he had slain the animal himself. Personally, I think he had come to believe he had done so.

That really does not matter. What matters was that the lioness, after a brief examination of the surroundings, stepped up to the zebra, made sure it was dead, and unfortunately recently dead, gave it a contemptuous buffet, and bounded off. She was after something to capture for herself.

She was not too fond of haphazard corpses of other people's providing. She had been misled. But she was unable at the moment to see Choyo—of that he took good care.

ALONE at last, the hyena fairly threw himself at his dinner. It was a gift such as the gods did not vouchsafe once in a lifetime. He had the field to himself. He rent and tore at the unresisting body. He was translated by his unholy joy.

No doubts of treachery remained in him. Had there been a trap, or any similar nastiness, surely the lioness would have discovered the fact or, failing to do so, would have been caught herself.

Therefore, he rejoiced and feasted, long, loudly, and revoltingly.

There comes an end even to a hyena's capacity. At last Choyo crawled out.

Yes, he crawled out, and with a last lingering look abandoned the meal to the jackals and vultures which daylight would undoubtedly bring.

Heavily he turned him towards home—a burrow he had stolen from a porcupine and had enlarged to suit himself.

As a matter of fact, the defense of that burrow was almost an epic, as it showed what a hyena could do when cornered; but it does not come in here.

Content at last, Choyo made for bed. He was very full. His tummy sagged pleasantly earthwards. This was undoubtedly the life!

When half the distance had been covered fate smiled at him once more. He decided this was his lucky night. He thought maybe he was a trifle peckish after his walk, so Choyo wolfed, or rather hyenad, up what was left of a Grant's gazelle upon which he had nearly trodden.

He resumed his march. Now he was a trifle overburdened; but he bore up marvelously!

Nearing his dwelling Choyo's path led across the calcined rocks of an extinct volcano, in the cooled blast holes and power shattered sides of which a colony of rock hyena, or rabbits, had taken up their abode.

Usually the noise of their disputations filled the night for a mile round, but on this occasion they seemed unusually quiet.

Indeed, the returning scavenger noted the uncanny silence. Indigestion bred in his cowering body a swift cowardice. Fearful for his own hide, he stopped and looked keenly about. Not a rabbit in sight. Queer, he thought. Very odd!

The lash of his imagined terrors turned to petulant rage. What business had these unprotected and unarmed mammals so to disturb him?

On he went, seeking something sufficiently weak on which to work off his ill humor.

For the third time he was dealt what appeared to be a winning hand. A rock rabbit, furry, and apparently fearless, dozed not a half spring distant.

Slightly above Choyo, it was perched on a ledge at almost the middle of a great V-shaped cavity in the face of the rock. Now this gap was some six foot from inverted apex to fire blackened base. It was rather more across the widest part.

Choyo looked at the rabbit sluggishly. He was in no mood or condition to cope with the lightning tactics of these little beasts.

But this individual did not move, not even when it saw the dull eyes so near below flame to a horrible resolution. Beyond a doubt it was unwell.

THE great leprous figure which was Choyo drew close. Greed and greed alone now impelled him forward. Still the other stirred not a muscle; only the attacker could not fail to discern a sudden glaze of fear over the bright, all seeing eyes.

The lurking shadow sprang. It was a miserably short bound. Even Choyo should have made it, stuffed to the gullet as he was.

He did make it. His droven nose flung the smaller animal to the ground inside the cave.

But the aggressor, heavy with the result of his night's toil, had badly miscalculated.

He snapped air, and his head and forequarters straining at the last second to catch the falling body, passed half way through the gap, and there Choyo stuck fast and firm.

A moment or two passed before he realized his predicament. With many a heave and struggle he strove after his prey, which even now did not move from where it had landed.

Unfortunately space was all his flailing forepaws met, and space was all his twitching hind feet found for support.

As for the rabbit, I may say here and now that he eventually crawled off and, escaping by another exit, lived to see four hundred and sixty-two descendants enjoy their brief hour: one of whom was that famous albino, which came to be called Okoa (the deliverer) by a grateful community.

But Choyo! Ah! Choyo, he was most horribly positioned. The more he fought the lower he slipped, and the lower he slipped the more cruel was the grip of that cold constriction.

At last what nerve he had completely deserted him, and he yelled abominably, the last thing he should have done. His dolorous outcry thundered down the tunnel magnified a thousandfold. The hyrax, now thoroughly upset, joined in by their myriads, and the night was swiftly a hell of sound.

The clamor of that district brought many an evil visitant, craftily seeking the luckless one they were prepared to find.

Let it be shortly understood that the scum of the wildfolk are merciless to a brother in distress.

It is enough! So perished Choyo "The Insatiable," miserably.

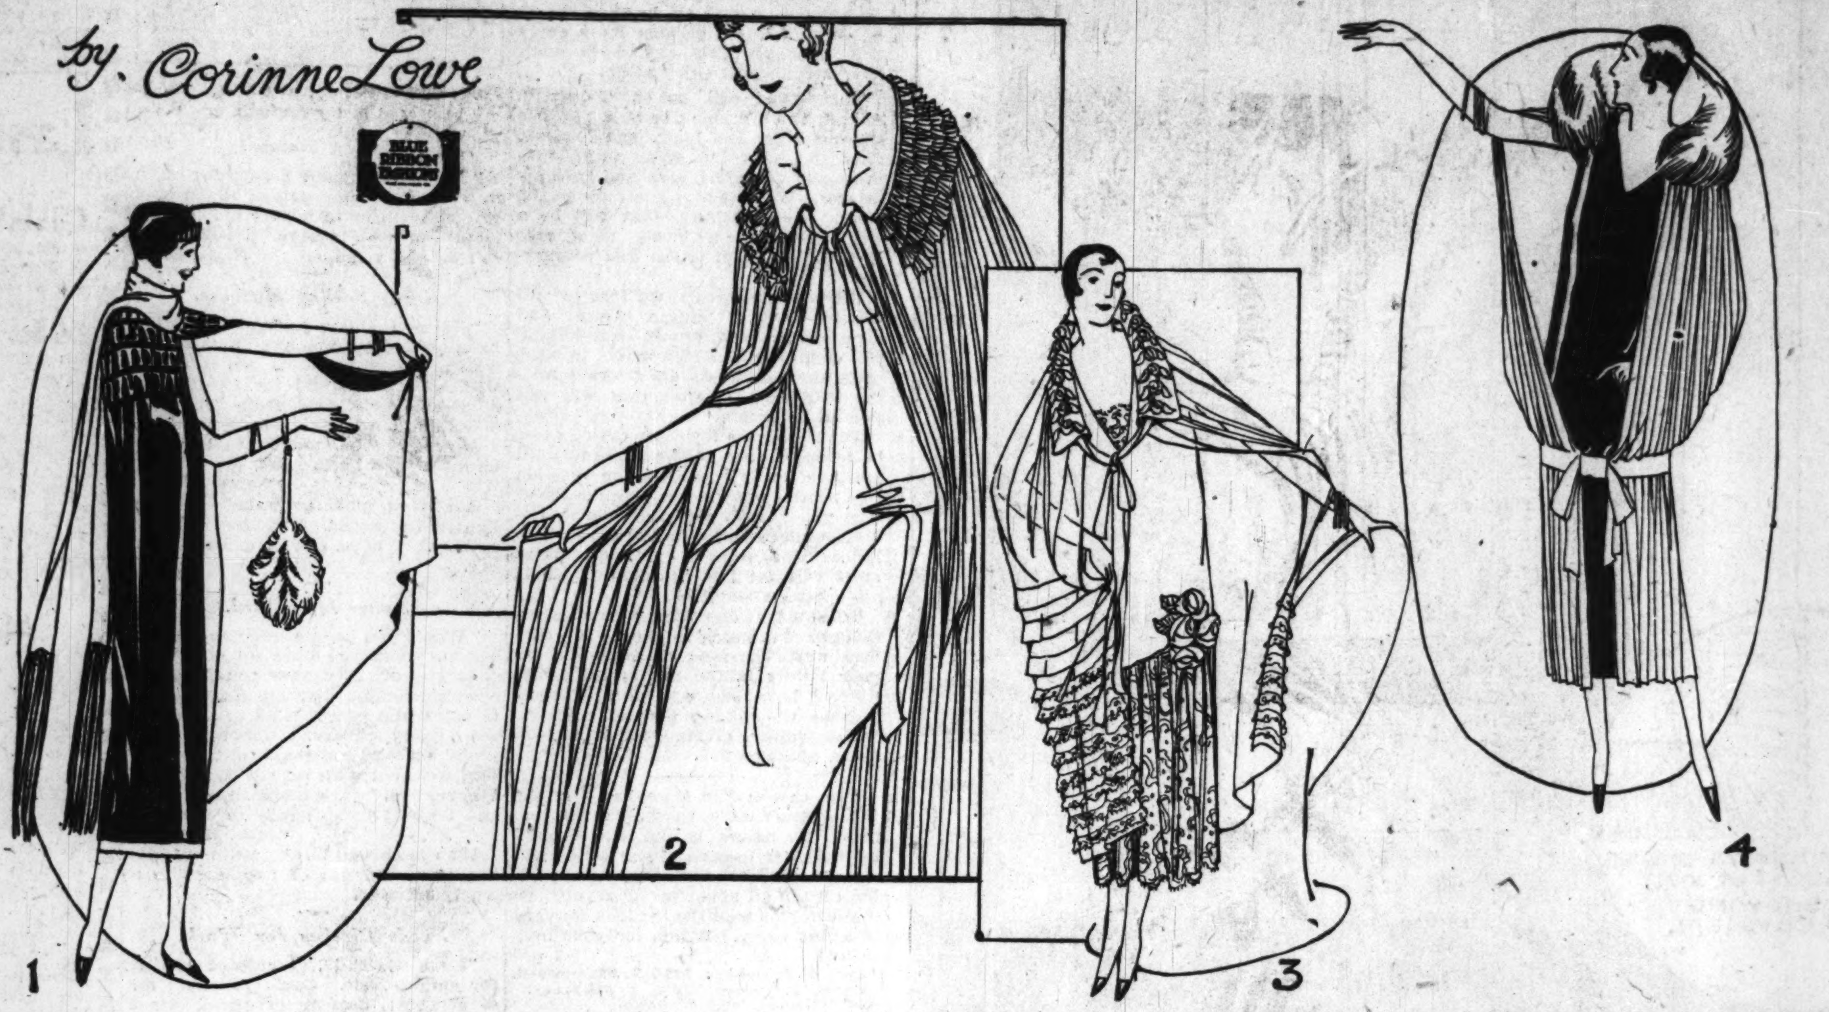
FRINGE, OSTRICH AND LACE SOUND THROUGH OUR SUMMER WRAP-SODY

by Corinne Lowe



NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"You're sitting in a draught. Mayn't I get you your shawl?"

This extract from a ballroom conversation is more than a memory. It is a prophecy. Although it has been extinct as long as the basque and the mustache in scrollwork design, the honored formula of the seventies is on the eve once more of obtaining popular recognition. Shawls have been revived.

To be sure, they are not the same which flourished at the era of profuse mustaches, at that remote period when all literary heroes were equipped with well chiseled noses and when all young ladies attended seminaries. Indeed, they are not even the highly decorative Spanish models that have been exploited so constantly during the last seasons.

These latter, to be sure, are still worn. Although the peak of their popularity was long since reached, they may be assumed today without any fear of bringing peace to your enemy's soul. However, the latest in shawls is a large square of satin or crepe de chine edged with lace almost a foot in width. This border is in either metallic effect or is dyed to match the wrap.

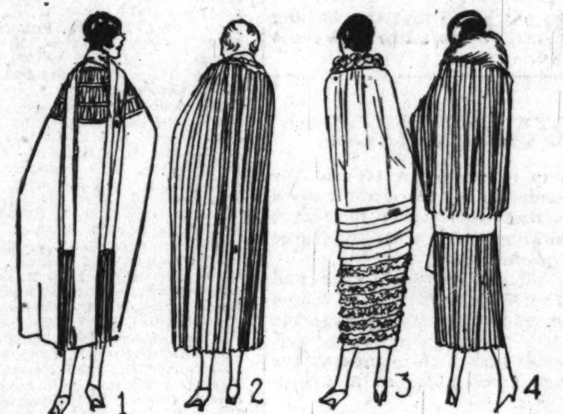
Evening wraps such as this have been brought back from Paris by fashionable women returning for the Newport or Bar Harbor or Southampton "seasons." They are also encountered in some of our smartest shops. And, although they represent merely a novelty, they are much in line with certain tendencies of the mode which I shall dwell upon later. Then, too, there is always this to be said of a shawl. As opposed to the more rigid cape or coat, it encourages individuality. It may be worn in so many ways and each wearer can express something of herself in the drapery of those pliant folds.

But, of course, shawls sound only a minor note in the summer wrap-sody. This is a summer when the evening wrap has engrossed much of the designer's attention. Indeed, so queenly are some of the French creations that the gowns which they accompany shrink into utter nothingness. The latter may be a simple mousseline de soie or chiffon or crepe, but the coat or cloak is likely to be so magnificent that it will recall one of the choruses in "Boris Godunuff." Achieved of cloth of gold or of silver or else of some gorgeous brocade incrusted with lace and collared in sable or chinchilla, these wraps remind one that the Age of Machinery has not completely dimmed our aspirations toward such fabrics as Velasquez and Titian loved to paint.

Every season presents one or two dominating models and this summer a Worth cloak of cloth of silver trimmed with silver gray ostrich has achieved such outstanding position. This model has no collar. Instead, there is a scarf or stole, the ends of which are usually thrown over the shoulders. Such collarless wraps have not, to be sure, reserved their triumphs for the evening. They are a feature of many summer sports and street coats. And they are sponsored in evening wraps of far less pretentious character than the silver cloth model from Worth to which I have just now referred.

For example, take the crepe cape pictured at the left. This, witnessing again our insatiable appetite for black and white, is of black crepe lined with white. The characteristic long stole repeats the snowy lining and it borders the ends with long white silk fringe.

This wrap, together with others on the page, does not represent the more regal mood in this season's evening wraps. Although we have attempted to embody some of the leading style features, these are interpreted in the crepes which our average woman is likely to select for resort wear. Such choice is not always founded on economy. For, in spite of the richness of the metal cloth garment, there can be no doubt that it fails to provide as becoming a frame for the face as does some cloud of crepe or chiffon.



ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

That fringe is one of the factors of the summer's wraps is denied nowadays by not even the most skeptical. Fringe, fringe, and again fringe! Some of the models go so far as to divide their surface equally between fabric and fringe. The other evening I saw one of these new capes—a flame colored chiffon which dropped from the waistline long swishing lines of self-colored silk—and I thought the wearer looked a trifle as if she had been caught in a rainstorm. Nevertheless, the downpour, although a cloudburst, was not without charm. As the wearer walked each flame colored strand was set into motion over a frock of white crepe. Very, very effective!

But, even so, this form of trimming is not so constant as the ostrich mode. We find ostrich curled and uncurled and we find it on both the sumptuous wraps of lame and brocade, as well as on the simpler ones of crepe and chiffon. If there is a defective flue in the world, the designers have not recognized it. Their tolerant and broadminded spirit has induced them to use all ostrich, good or bad.

The plaited model of gray chiffon second from the left is quite susceptible to any additions of ostrich or marabou which you may wish to make. In the drawing it is collared simply in self-fabric finished with four plaited ruffles and, as it stands, its simplicity recommends it to youth—also to the woman who must consider economy. However, this gray chiffon would form an exquisite background for a collar and border of feathery fronds, either in self-color or in contrasting tone. Rose or flame tinted ostrich, for example, would be lovely.

Numerous capes are made with various tiers and these, naturally, lend themselves readily to the dominant thought. Indeed, there are entire evening wraps constructed of the prevailing plumage. Of this latter fact, a creation by Callot comes to my mind as the most impressive instance. It was a flame colored cape of ostrich destined to accompany a frock of the same color and, although striking, it proved once more that too much beauty applied in one spot is likely to become a mere caricature of beauty. As the model moved off in this wrap she looked as if she had been thatched. She resembled Robinson Crusoe's hut suddenly become animated.

Lace is another favored trimming detail of the season. On the resplendent coats of cloth of silver or silver brocade one sees silver lace, and this is frequently employed in godet form for the purpose of giving the approved flare at the hem line. On less formal models the employment of lace is exemplified in the third wrap illustrated. Here we have an orange tinted crepe—or chiffon—encircled by three horizontal tucks and subsequently adorned by rows of narrow lace dyed to match. The collar, however, does not subscribe to this lace sentiment. By appliqued roses and leaves of silk ribbon it announces a definite policy of its own.

Among the furs that deck our present day creations chinchilla is one of the favorites. And certainly, if ever any pelt rose through its own merit, chinchilla is the one most deserving of a biographer. I have always thought, indeed, that if George Sand had ever had her attention called to the combination of chinchilla and violets she would have told her valet to whisk away forever the celebrated pantaloons which were her dearest attire. She would have gone in for dress.

With silver cloth wraps this fur is, of course, especially lovely, and one of Patou's most regal models of the season chooses chinchilla for the collar of a coat that is set off further by insertions of silver lace. It is also lovely on the chiffon evening wraps—on gray and violet especially—and if one chooses to do so one may substitute for the gray fox finishing the right hand model a collar of this exquisite fur.

Aside from the collar, this allover plaited model of violet tinted crepe or chiffon strikes a new note by the girdle defining a long waistline. This girdle, as well as the buckle which holds it, is of self-fabric and self-color.

In dealing with the more sumptuous wraps, one may add that the sentiment between capes and coats is rather evenly divided. Coats, especially those with the flaring hemline, are an outstanding feature of summer dressing. Yet, on the other hand, capes are represented by circular affairs of the most gorgeous materials which are collared in sable, chinchilla and other furs.

SIDE CURTAINS FOR A BEDROOM.

CHANGEABLE taffeta makes beautiful side curtains for a bedroom; and one can easily make them at home. No valance, gathered or shaped, is needed, although either can be used if one wishes.

Measure the length from the rod to the floor—allowing enough for a narrow hem at the bottom and about four or five extra inches at the top so the edge can be finished with a narrow hem and the top turned down several inches so it can be pinned or tacked to the curtain rings, as the picture shows.

One width for each length unless the window is narrow—in which event half a width of the 40 inch width will do. To finish the edges a two inch wide ruching of a contrasting colored taffeta is used—this ruching being put down the front and across the bottom of each curtain. At the back the selvedge makes the finish. For light blue, pink or delicate green will be lovely, and for gray, lavender, green or blue will be all right.

The taffeta for the ruchings should be cut in strips three inches wide and twice the length of the edges on which it is to be used. Draw a thread to cut the strips by, and after seaming the lengths together, turn each edge in one-half inch, making the strip two inches wide. The length of the curtain should be divided into quarters or eighths, and the ruching the same, and then after both edges are gathered, pin it on the eighths, pull up and fasten the thread, and lay the gathers evenly, pinning and basting carefully. At the bottom where the turning comes, the fullness will have to be regulated so that the gathers run properly. After the ruching is entirely basted on one curtain, stitch it on both edges. If a double thread machine is used, it will be wise to try a piece of gathered and plain silk first, to be sure the stitch and tension are right.

With these side curtains figured or plain silk gauze or casement cloth will look well—made to hang over the windows.

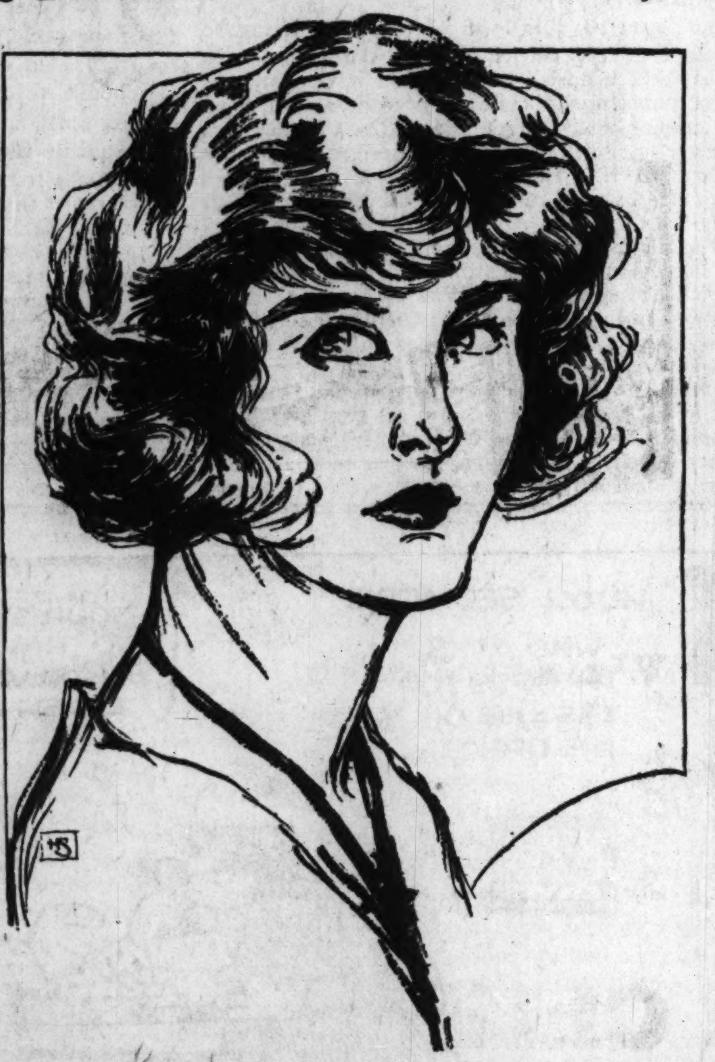
Matching taffeta covers for the beds should be made for this room; and silk ruching can be sewed on to outline the width of the bed—sewing this on in a straight line down each side, or putting it on in a waved line like the one in the picture.

The deep ruffles on the pillow slips should be put on so that the ruching on the slip will be on a line with those on the bed.

WHAT HAIR AND EYES TELL

By DORIS BLAKE

The More Definite The Coloring, the More Power to the Passions And Emotions, Assert Some Authorities



DO you believe that the more definite the coloring of an individual the more ardent in love he is? And that he has more strength in hate than those of fairer colored complexions and hair?

M. O. Stanton, physiognomist, confirms the theory that color gives power to the passions and emotions. He offers the scientific reasoning in explanation that color is a product of the glands and the arterial circulation and is a primitive or organic quality.

"Now, the glands," says he, "are directly concerned in the production of emotions, and some of the glands are the basis of amativeness, friendship, mirthfulness, love of young, benevolence, and other traits.

The muscular system in well colored persons, he further explains, possesses more general vigor than the muscles of the pallid person, whose muscles exhibit the same degree of muscular development. Hence, force and resistance are greater not only in dark races but in dark individuals of the Caucasian race, where the grade of development is similar in other respects. Among the dark eyed and dark complexioned there will be found persons of refinement and purity of life as among the light colored, yet grade for grade these refined persons with dark color will exhibit more vigor of emotion, more intense love for the marital companion and for children. They will also manifest stronger dislikes than fair people of the same grade of quality.

Guide to Interpretation.

That nature attaches meanings to color by which we may be guided in our interpretations of her signals Stanton asserts quite patent to all who have given the subject any considerable degree of observation or reflection.

Black eyed, dark skinned persons, with red cheeks and lips are fervid and intense in all their acts, are capable of great endurance, are tough, of strong and decided feelings, and give vent to them and their opinions in most positive and unmistakable terms. Persons with black eyes, black hair and sallow complexion are more guarded and reticent, yet feel almost as strongly as the former, and possess nearly as violent passions and emotions.

Both these classes, Stanton tells us, are good lovers and good haters, with strong and high tempers. The first class is usually dramatic in tastes and possessed of suitable brain system.

Emotional, If Dark.

For further reflection on the amorous and other propensities of the one in the world who interests you most, our authority offers these helpful hints:

Black hair and black eyes, with a fair complexion, indicate great intensity of passions and emotions. Hair which presents a bluish black color, together with a sallow or livid complexion, is associated with passions almost abnormal in their intensity of desire, and this class of characters when under strong excitement of the passions, is apt to prove dangerous. Love, hate, and jealousy are strongly developed, and the unrestrained indulgence in these emotions leads to crime.

Black hair, accompanied by eyes which change in color from black to metallic red, which glitter and appear of great depth, are indicative of a diabolical and perfectly unscrupulous character. This combination is said, fortunately, to be rare.

Beauty from Art Standpoint.

A combination of dark blue eyes and black hair, found among the Irish, Portuguese, Welsh, Spanish and Italians, for example, produces a rare kind of beauty from an art standpoint. The disposition associated with it is characterized by an "artless artfulness" by great capacity for intrigue in love, politics, and business, and with great apparent candor and sincerity, while the real thought and design are entirely and most skillfully hidden in the innermost recesses.

In women this combination of hair and eyes is often associated with great cunning in love affairs and a large amount of plot and counterplot of small intrigues and petty trickery of a perfectly useless sort, while the countenance and expressions and voice and manners resemble those of a confiding, artless child. This class of people, it is said, are usually charming and engaging in social intercourse, always deep in love affairs of which they contrive to carry on several at once. They have the most taking ways—but as friends are not the most reliable.

These Are Amiable.

Blue eyes with dark brown hair and clear, red and white complexion, fine hair and skin, belong to amiable, pure minded characters, with capacity for improvement and progress, usually intelligent and refined, with a moderate development of amativeness and temper. They are more calm than the black eyed and evince less jealousy, revenge, enthusiasm.

Light gray eyes [blue and white with more white than blue] with light brown or fair hair, belong to persons whose emotions and passions are neither so intense or enduring as in those who exhibit darker colored eyes and hair. A certain degree of suspicion accompanies the light gray eye, and greediness, too; jealousy and envy are easily aroused, and often with occasion. A planning, calculative spirit and no great warmth of affection are attributed to the type. A lack of the color element in the blood and tissues prevents that integrity or soundness of organization which a normal degree of color produces.

Light, almost colorless, eyes and hair and colorless or pallid skin denote weakness and mentality of none too high order. They are generally surface people, with little sympathy for others and much absorbed in adornment of self.

Without Great Endurance.

Flaxen hair and blue eyes indicate impulse, affection, quickness of apprehension, sensitiveness, taste, purity. The manners will be gentle and refined and tastes delicate. As a rule this class does not exhibit great endurance or ardor.

Sandy hair, if coarse, denotes grossness, and ordinary abilities. If fine, delicacy of feeling, and impulsive action will be exhibited.

The dark gray eye [more blue than white] in combination with black or dark brown hair and lashes is usually accompanied by talent of some sort, and denotes coolness, with considerable intensity of feeling and devotion of purpose. With a clear, fair skin and fine quality, the character will be refined and energetic.

Red hair and dark chestnut eyes reveal great intensity of feeling, secretiveness, and capacity for plotting; if the hair be coarse, strong animal passions and insincerity.

Red Haired Impulsive.

Red hair and blue eyes denote ardor, impulse, sincerity, purity, quick temper, ambition. If the hair be coarse, sensuality, lack of refinement, and strong passions will be exhibited.

Auburn hair and blue eyes denote tenacity of purpose, ardor, warmth of affection, and strong emotions.

Dark red hair [if fine] indicates strength, vigor, and virtuous inclinations, with strong, stable emotions, and deep affections. If accompanied by blue eyes, frankness, purity, and noble aspirations are indicated. If brown eyes, there is more secretiveness and scheming.

Yellow eyed persons with brown, yellow, or fair hair are deceptive, suspicious, cruel, and jealous; with dark hair, revengeful and low. Yellow and greenish eyes are found in the most sly, treacherous, tricky, cruel and deceitful animals, like the panther, hyena, the leopard, puma, fox, and cat.

Win an Invitation to Sally's Next Party at Ravinia

By Sally Joy Brown.

Would you enjoy an afternoon at Ravinia, and why?

ATTENTION, girls and boys, to the next party I've arranged for you! You'll all be wanting to go, I know, because it's a party that Chicago girls and boys don't have a chance to enjoy often.

This party will be on Thursday, Aug. 7, and it's going to be a glorious afternoon for the lucky one hundred girls and boys I'm going to take to the famous Ravinia park and open air theater. We'll have special cars on the North Shore railway—that will be a treat in itself—a lovely train ride through beautiful towns and countryside.

When we get there we'll be in real country—lots of flowers, trees, and open spaces—and there'll be a delightful children's entertainment in the open air theater—so don't lose a minute starting the letter that will win you an invitation.

You'll find the letter as easy as can be to write, once you've started it. All you have to do is answer the question I've printed above—the question about how you'd enjoy an afternoon at Ravinia—and the 100 girls and boys whose letters show they'd enjoy the party most will get the invitations! Could anything be simpler?

There's just one thing to remember, though. I'm going to choose the winners next Thursday morning—so get your letters in the mail right away. Several have lost out on invitations because they didn't give an address. Write plainly, giving your name, address, and age.

I've chosen the winners for the White Sox-Yankee baseball game, and print the names below; also I shall mail a letter to each of you which will arrive by Monday morning. In the letter I'll tell all about meeting you. So if your name is in the list look forward to a fine party. Watch for your invitation!

A FRIEND IN NEED

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant, and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Saving Stamps.

"I wonder if some reader having a number of foreign stamps would care to donate them to me. I am putting them in a book to save. I will gladly call or pay postage. N. R. B."

Needs Sewing Machine.

"Do you think some one might have a sewing machine not in use which I may have? I am a widow with a child, and if I could get a machine in pretty good shape would be able to do our sewing. It would mean a great deal to me and the favor would be more than appreciated. "MRS. J. B."

A sewing machine would help to lighten the expenses of this widowed mother. I hope one is available for her.

Longs for a Bird.

"Would you be so kind as to remember me when you have an offer of a canary bird? Last year you got me a sewing machine, but I became too ill to use it and passed it on to a woman with many children. After a three years' illness I am thankful to be getting well, but with all my doctor bills I never can spare money for a bird, and I would be so happy to own one. "MRS. W. W."

Who is able to be the means of giving an abundance of happiness to a lonely sufferer?

Needs Clothes for Work.

"I am a girl 17, at present looking for employment. Could you help me to get hats, dresses, or shoes, size 3 or 3½? My baby brother, 10 months old, needs shoes badly. My mother would appreciate it if any readers could spare her a dress, size 42 or 44, and shoes, 4½ or 5. Perhaps it seems I am asking too much, but my stepfather deserted my mother a few months ago, and it is hard for us to live, as my mother cannot work on account of the baby. Please let me know if any of your readers can help. "A. H."

The salary this young girl could bring home would be put to use to good advantage in this household. Can you help her out with the clothing she needs to start to work? Clothing given the rest of the family will enable her earnings to cover other necessities.

Mother in Hospital.

"I am a girl, 13, and have to mind the house while my mother is in the hospital. I take care of my sister 2 years old who is always sick, and as we have no buggy, I cannot take her out. She is too heavy to carry and always falls asleep in my arms. Please ask your readers if they have a bed or bassinette so she can sleep in the open air.

"My father is sick and cannot work. My brother, 15, supports us.

"Any clothes for us would be appreciated. I have three brothers, 15, 8, and 5 years old, and sisters, 10 and 2 years. We also have a new baby two weeks old. M. C."

An Urgent Case.

"A family of six, in which there is a baby of two months, is badly in need of an icebox. The husband is ill, and has not worked during the last year. The mother is having a hard struggle and at present has no way of keeping the children's milk fresh and cool. She will greatly appreciate an icebox or chest. F. N."

What request could be more urgent? You must realize the necessity of this need, and I know you will not fail to notify us if it is within your power to fill it.

Her Burden Heavy.

"I read that you give help to friends in need and would like to ask you to give my name to some one who has discarded clothing that could be made over for small children or myself. I am a widow with four little ones to care for, and find it takes all I can make to feed them. Clothing would surely be appreciated. I wear size 36. The children's ages are 18 months and 7, 10, and 13 years. MRS. B. B."

Quite a burden this little widowed mother has to bear, don't you think? Have you any discards to pass on?

This Make the Curl Stay in Your Hair

The Silmerine method is unusually popular just now, according to the druggists. This is largely due to the weather and because women are now spending so much time out of doors. This simple method not only produces the loveliest, natural looking curls and waves, but keeps the hair in curl no matter how hot or how moist the day, nor how hard the wind blows. All one need do is to wet a clean tooth brush with liquid Silmerine, draw this through the hair before doing it up, and the hair will dry in just the sweetest waves and crinkles. This also keeps the hair beautifully soft, silky, lustrous. Liquid Silmerine costs about 20 cents an ounce.

How to Use the Patterns

THE long waisted dress, closing in front — Pattern No. 2157—is a pretty design for a dressy gown, or for one of the lovely wash materials suitable for ordinary afternoon wear.

The waist is cut with short kimono sleeves, seamed on the shoulders, and these may be lengthened with one piece sections — making them full length. The skirt is in two pieces, straight, and gathered across the top and attached to the long waisted waist. The width at the bottom, for size 36, is about 1⅝ yards.

Rose colored crepe de chine, trimmed with valenciennes or filet lace, would make a lovely frock for any afternoon affair; and linen, cotton voile, or gingham would make up equally well for ordinary afternoon wear. Taffeta would be pretty made by this design, and comes in many colors and shades.

The waist is slashed in at the under arm seams, and the upper edges gathered and attached to the lower slashed edges. Sash ends of the dress material are attached at the side seams, tying in the middle of the back. A piping may be used to put waist and skirt together, and is used in the same way in the shoulder seams. This will look well with a contrasting color or the same color as the dress.

The lace edging should be put on by hand, and just held easily. If it is too full, the effect is not as good. Finish the dress at the bottom with a deep hem—say seven or nine inches.

Pattern No. 1919 is a pretty design for a young girl, and is suitable for many different materials. It is also suitable to be made of one or two materials—just as one fancies. It is a long waisted dress, the fronts of the waist crossing and closing at the left side. The skirt and waist are cut separately and joined. There is a collar that joins the faced fronts, and these roll back, forming revers—the right front crossing over the left, and closing at the bottom of the waist. The skirt is in one piece, and straight, being gathered at the top and set on to the lower edge of the waist.

A plain and checked flannel would be pretty for this design—using the check for the skirt and trimming, and the plain for the waist. One of the tub silks or a plain and checked gingham would be appropriate. It is the occasions for which the dress is to be worn that will decide the sort of material to be used.

In setting the skirt on to the waist, it should be carefully pinned in place before basting. Find the middle back and front of the waist and skirt, and pin these together respectively. Perforations on the pattern will show the points of the skirt that are to be pinned to the underarm seam. After this has been done, the gathering threads should be pulled up and fastened. Then it is ready for the basting and finishing.

Pattern No. 2134 is for a one piece, slip-on dress. The front is slashed for an opening, and the edges are bound. The sleeve pattern comes in the full length, but there are perforations on it, showing where to cut if short sleeves are desired. There are slashes on each side of the front, and the sash is slipped through these—allowing an unbroken line from neck to hem in the front.

There are two inset pockets on the front, and the dress is cut in a V in the front, and finished with a prettily shaped collar. The width at the bottom for size 36 is about 1⅝ yards.

If the slashes for the pockets and sash are well fixed, they will always be satisfactory; if not, it won't be long before the seams will give way. Run basting threads in the material, showing the position of all the slashes, and then cut pieces of the material a couple or more inches larger all around than the slashes measure.

Lay one of these pieces in place so that there is an even distance shown on all sides. Then baste to the dress, basting exactly on the bastings marking the slash. Then stitch on the machine all the way around, close to the stitching, keeping the seam perhaps a good ⅛ inch wide, except at the ends, where it must be made as narrow as possible.

Before turning this piece to the wrong side, clip at the corner, and once each side of the corner—clipping nearly to the stitching. Then the strip is pushed through the slip to the wrong side, and the clipping that was done will prevent the ends from being puckered. Sometimes these strips are brought through to the wrong side so they simply make a facing, and sometimes so they form a binding. This last is probably the easier and better way.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

by Doris Blake

Mother Hard to Please.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 23. I keep steady company with a fellow who loves me very much and I love him, but my mother does not want me to go with him for a foolish reason. We thought we would marry at the end of this year, but my mother will not give her consent. She told him she does not want him to come to my house. I gave up two other fellows on account of my mother, although it hurt me. But I did it to please her. I know I would be happy if I married this fellow and got away from troubles I have at home. My mother is good to me and I would like to please her, but I would like to please myself. I. E. S."

It looks as though your mother does not wish you to marry and leave her, dear. This is a selfish attitude to assume, but occasionally we find it in parents. They seem to forget the days when they were young. Now, as you are old enough to know your own mind and if you cannot reason with your mother on the subject, you undoubtedly will have to take the reins in your hands, making your own decision. I know you do not wish to hurt her feelings, but if she has disliked three of your beaus, without any apparent reason, she will undoubtedly dislike any young man who may come to see you.

He Is Jealous.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl, 21, and have been keeping company two years with a boy one year my junior. We are not engaged, but he makes it unpleasant for me when we go out anywhere because if I associate with other boys he gets jealous and stays away for nearly two weeks. Please tell me whether he would make a good husband. RENEE."

I'd hate to take a chance, Renee, for if you happened to meet some one you knew and you were pleasant to him he probably wouldn't speak to you for a month or two and so wouldn't be a pleasant companion to have around the house while the mood lasted. Try to reason with him, showing he not only makes life miserable for himself, but unpleasant for you and embarrassing before your friends.

THE CASE AGAINST COSMETICS

Claims Boil Down to an Almost Clear Verdict for Face Powders and Creams of Good Quality

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At the meeting of the American Medical association held in Chicago in June there arose the question of cosmetic applications as disseminators of skin troubles.

It was brought out that in 1921 American women spent some three hundred million dollars for cosmetics.

"In many cases they spent their money for poisons as deadly as mercury, arsenic, lead, and paraphenylendiamin, the last a poisonous substance used largely in fur and hair dyes," said Dr. H. N. Cole of the Northwestern Reserve university.

In spite of this alarming statement, it strikes me that if creams and powders, freckle lotions and depilatories are so loaded with poisonous influence, few of us women would have escaped some form of unpleasant skin branding. Yet the majority of us have gone on for years applying the powder puff with a dozen daily applications, this with once or twice a day good face swabbing with cleansing cream, and apparently we are none the worse for it.

Credit to Cream.

In years of interviewing famous beauties, stage, screen and nonprofessional, the one forcible impression of the professional women carried off by me in almost every instance was the clean, clear skin texture which they attributed to the daily, semi-daily and thrice daily use of cream for makeup purposes.

After some investigation I find the "damage" claims against cosmetics boil down to an almost clear verdict for face powders of good quality; cold creams beneficial to certain skin structure and bad for others; with the dyes in hair colorings and furs contributing the most alarming features. Of these latter I shall speak in a later article.

A Specialist's Opinion.

I approached Dr. William Allen Pusey, president of the American Medical association, noted skin specialist, on the subject.

"There is something to be said in favor of cosmetic powders," says Dr. Pusey. "Powders distinctively protect the skin against exposure to light, and light directly affects the complexion. They also furnish some mechanical protection, and they are in themselves soothing. There are some cosmetic powders on the market that contain lead and bismuth. These are dangerous because the substances are poisonous. Outside of these, there is no harm to the skin in the free use of cosmetic powders."

"But only with the use of a clean powder puff," the doctor warns. "Greasy, dirty puffs or even slightly soiled puffs are bad for the skin."

Rouges do little if any damage, except as they are made up in grease sticks and grease puffs and are a means of rubbing grease into the skin, according to Dr. Pusey.

Of creams and the use of fats on the skin, Dr. Pusey says: "A certain amount of fat in the skin is required to maintain it in health. The normal skin furnishes this of itself. This normal skin is not overgreasy, but sufficiently so to be soft and resistant. Lacking this softness and pliability, the person with a dry skin should grease the skin sufficiently to maintain the normal texture. But this does not provide an excuse for smothering the skin with grease, as is commonly done.

When to Avoid Creams.

I asked Dr. Pusey how he explained the good quality of the thratrical person's skin. His explanation was like the reason for the Scotchman's well known hardiness—not due to oatmeal, but in spite of it. Woman's skin remains good not because of excessive use of cold cream but in spite of it.

If there is any tendency to pimples or acne, toilet creams, skin foods, and similar fatty applications should not be used at all, in Dr. Pusey's opinion. They still farther fill up the already distended fat glands, spread pus organisms and thus, in general, tend to make acne worse. Their harmfulness is increased when they are used in conjunction with massage, which forces them into the pores of the skin.

Substituting a grease bath for a water bath for the skin is, in Dr. Pusey's opinion, instead of being beneficial actually courting trouble. For those persons who must grease the skin lightly to maintain its normal softness the skin specialist says it does not matter particularly what form of fat is used, provided it is not rancid. A good cream made up by a reliable pharmacist serves. However, he disapproves of claims for skin rejuvenation attributed by makers of various cosmetics.

Recommends Vaseline or Glycerin.

Ordinary vaseline, which is not a fat at all, but has the physical and mechanical properties of fat, he recommends as an excellent application because it does not become rancid. Liquid vaseline is preferable because it spreads more lightly. A little glycerin, well diluted with water, serves the same purpose. These are recommended for the dry skin only.

For those who fear that vaseline tends to grow hair, we have Dr. Pusey's word and his wide experience that it does nothing of the sort.

To keep the skin youthful, giving it one good washing with soap and water a day, reasonable protection from weather influences and undue exposure to sunlight are recommended by the noted dermatologist. The cleansing bath should be taken with warm water, followed by a rinse with cold water. The excessive use of soap and water is bad, for it removes fat from the skin.

Skins vary in texture, however, so that the amount of washing that skins will tolerate varies with the individual. The thin, dry, pink skin, is sensitive and will stand little washing without irritation. The greasy, thick skin will stand all the punishment in the way of soap and water you can give it. Then there is the average skin—neither thin nor coarse—which can stand all necessary washing without fear of consequences.

Get Good Soap.

Dr. Pusey generously grants indulgence in taste of one's favorite perfume and coloring in soaps—provided they are made by a reputable manufacturer, who is known to put forth a good quality of toilet soaps. A toilet soap should lather well, be made of clean fats with excessive alkali removed. Cheap adulterations are often colored, dyed, and perfumed to cover up defects.

In the treatment of acne, Dr. Pusey emphasized again, no creams should be used. X-ray treatments which are being administered with amazing results on acne patients should be given only under the guidance of a skilled scientific man. Much damage may accrue from the use of the X-ray in unskilled hands.

Dr. Pussey believes that over exposure to sunlight has a deleterious effect on the skin. It may produce no immediate bad effects but it almost certainly hastens the changes that accompany age. However, this does not mean, in his opinion, that one must sit on the awninged club porch and forego exercise in the open air. But it does suggest the use of the broad brimmed hat, of a sunshade on occasions of long exposure, and the avoidance of habitual exposure to sunlight.

MISS X.: THE GREAT OBJECTION to drinking water with meals is that many use it to wash down food that has not been properly masticated, in this way causing indigestion. If not employed to wash down food, it is not harmful but beneficial, as water aids in the formation of digestive juices.

SHEILA: THE WHITE SPOTS on the nails are generally caused from lack of care in manicuring. In pushing back the cuticle on the nails, be careful to use an orange wood stick and not a file. If the nails are brittle, soak them in olive oil for about ten minutes at night. An easy way to do so is by putting the oil in a cup—just enough to cover the finger tips.

THE WORLD SHUT OUT.

MON HOMME: I have been thinking of our last night together—that gorgeous moonlight night last September. I wonder if you are thinking of it, too as you pace the deck on your midnight watch.

Do you ever think that the moon you are gazing at so many miles away is the same one that is shining down on me now—the same moon which lighted our path on that joyful, never to be forgotten walk. You'll never know, Jerry, what that precious walk along the lake shore has meant to me, all these long months since. It seemed as though the whole world were shut out and just you and I were there. O, the sweetness of it all!

And then, when we lost our way and had to go through that dense black strip of woods, you said, "We're like two babes in the woods, Bobbie, trusting in God and each other."

My cup of joy was overflowing, then. I pray every day that our life together will be like that—just you and I with the world shut out, taking the journey together, hand in hand, and trusting in God and each other.

Good night, sweetheart. BOBBIE.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

SUMMER STYLES ARE SET DOWN IN BLACK AND WHITE

By Bettina Bedwell

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—The summer mode is made and Paris is putting it down in black and white. When you arrive at your favorite restaurant in the bois you think you are intruding on some graveyard ceremony, with the white tables and their mounds of napkins, surrounded by figures in black. The head waiter ushers you solemnly in and you feel the weight of the occasion as you walk soberly between the tables.

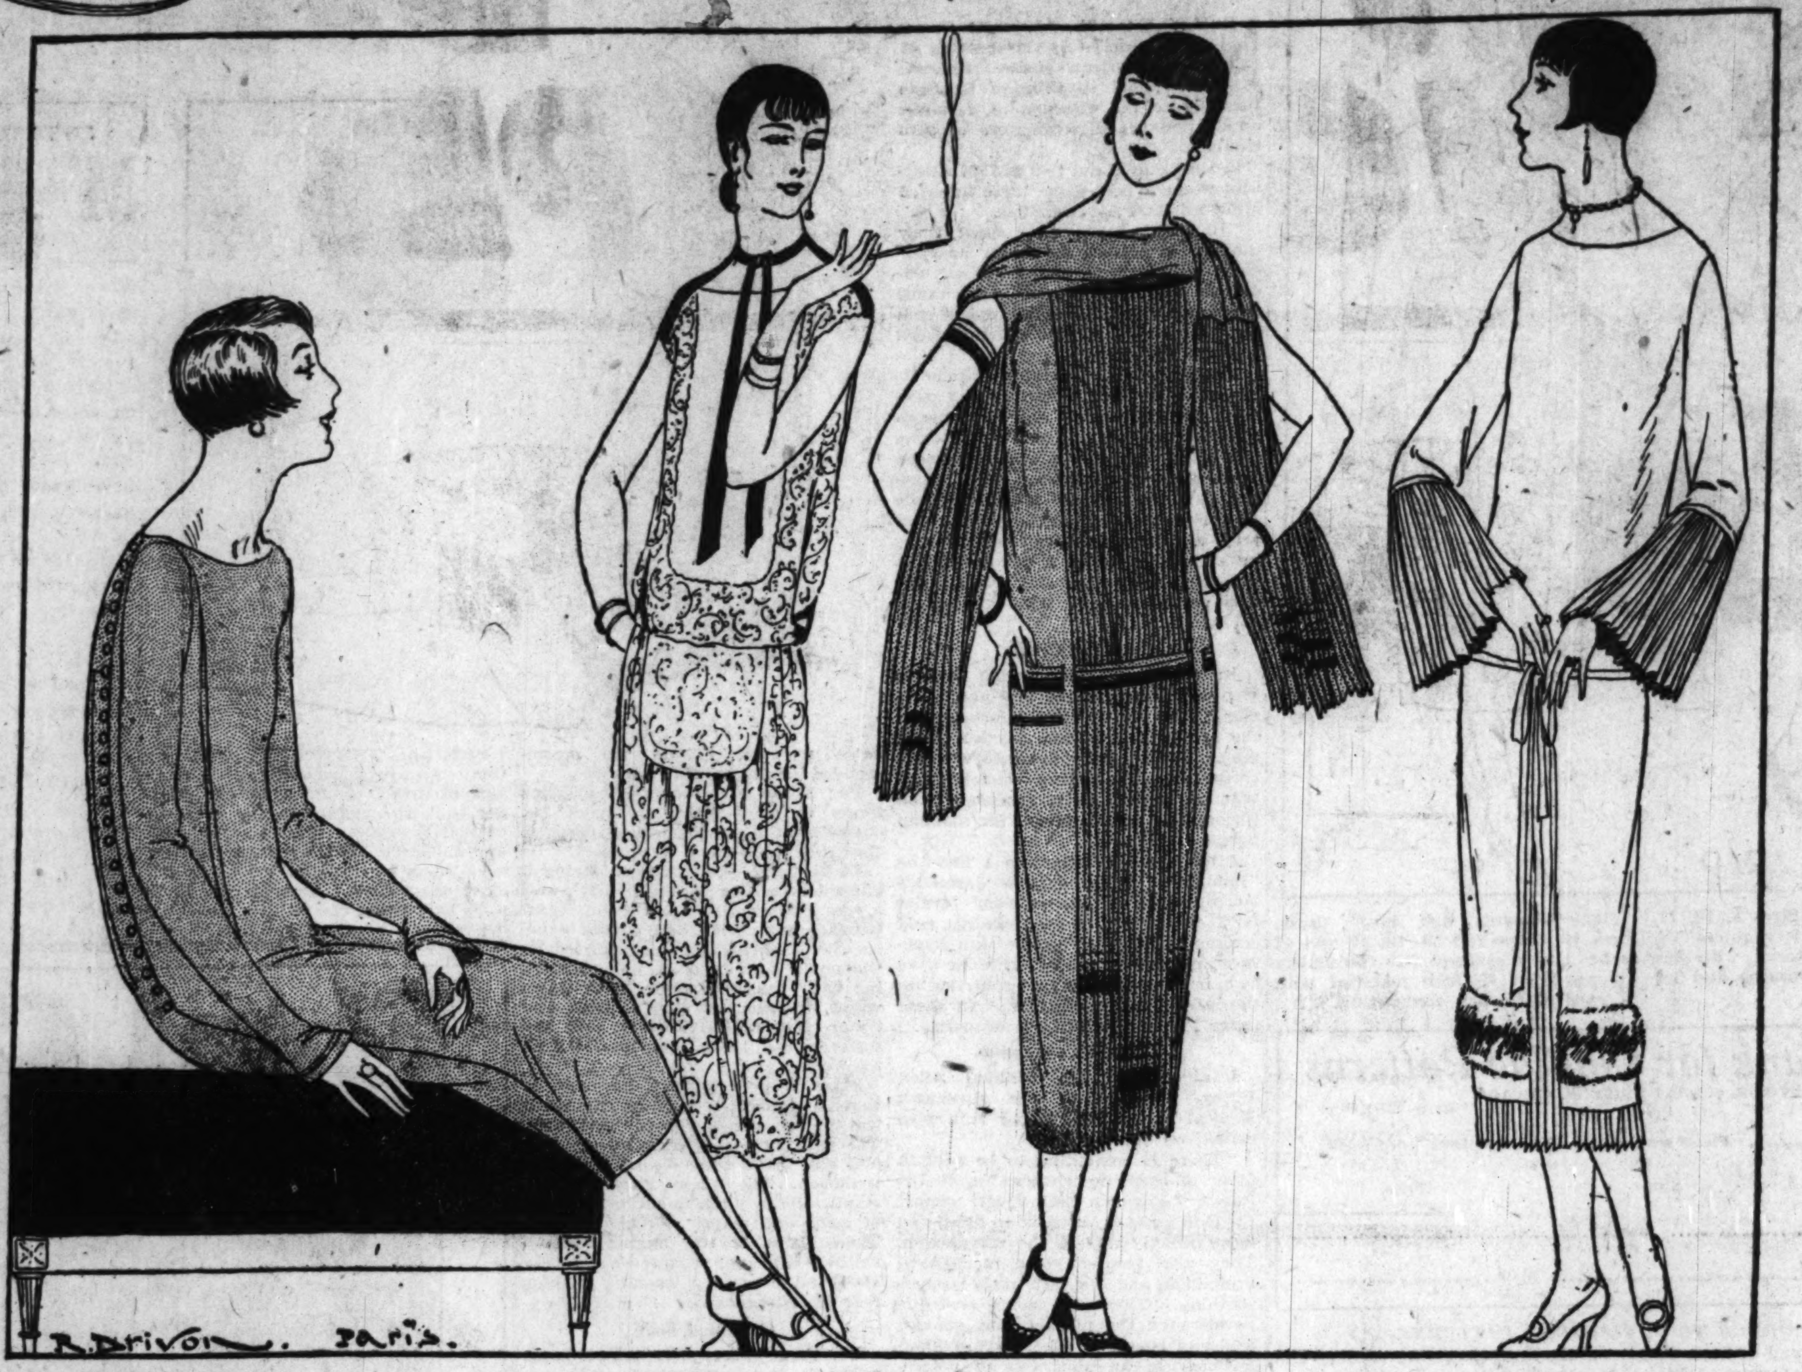
But if you are lucky enough to get your dinner started before the rain begins, when the American jazz orchestra begins to play, you see these black clad ladies leave their places and dance, and the aspect of the affair changes. First of all, there is evident a lot of white on these black costumes. In fact, there's a little bit of white on every black little gown this summer.

You think, when your eye lights on some particular woman, that black and white is the thing for the siren, so sophisticated and mysterious is the line and effect of her dress. Then you decide, as your gaze travels to the little girl who is doing fancy steps with the American Olympian that, on the contrary, black and white is made for the age of sweet simplicity. Just then you catch a glimpse of a slender silhouette, with white hair, and you see a woman who, if you were mean, you would say was mature, stepping along with the grace of 20, and looking as if she were made for her black and white dress.

That's probably the reason for the ever recurring vogue of this combination. It is as adaptable as the chameleon. Every one looks right in something achieved by a balanced welding of these two striking tones, and the wearer feels right, too, which is more important.

There is something about black and white which is essentially appropriate for any place or time—for a wedding or a funeral or any other major event. It's becoming, too, where dead black or all white may be trying. The best dressed woman at Royal Ascot Cup race recently is said to have worn black and white, one of those slim, long tunic tube dresses in black crepe satin with a double scarf of black and white, having long fringed ends, and a wide crowned hat with a single ostrich fantasie of white on the side.

Paris is mad about black and white, and the boulevards and bois have become posterish in effect. Lanvin is making organdy dresses in black with deep bands of white and bead or button embroidery of white also, covering most of the dress. Favorite, however, is the black dress with pipings, splashes, or buttons of white—made of crepe de chine or crepe satin, usually. Paris is just as wild about these two fabrics as she is about those colors. The description of a recent race at Longchamps, where all of society appeared, read like an ad for crepe, with S. A. R. La Princesse Sixte de Bourbon-Parme in crepe satin, Duchesse de Brissac in crepe Tchina, black and white, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mme. de Lauriston, and some thirty others in crepe de chine, Comptesse de la Rouchefoucauld in crepe liserie noir, etc., etc.



R. Drivon. Paris.

Black crepe de chine going the way of the straight and narrow. Black and white lace makes a charming frock for the dance. Red crepe de chine with bands of yellow, brown, and orange. Showing the forecasted tendency toward wide sleeves.

So the formula for summer is black crepe de chine, crepe satin, or a fantaisie crepe, with dashes and decorations of white. If you want color, which most of them don't, there are scarfs, artificial jewelry, hats, and bags with which to achieve it.

The woman sitting on the fauteuil, resting after the last strenuous dance, is wearing one of these black and white concoctions, from Cyber. It is straight and narrow, with no fullness whatever in the dress itself. An illusory amplitude is achieved by panels of the black crepe de chine, over insets of white. One of these panels begins at the shoulder on the right side front and hangs loose to the low waist line, where it is attached again, giving only glimpses of the white beneath. Another panel, arranged in the same way, is placed under the right arm to the waist line. The third panel is placed from waist line to hem on the left side front. All

The long sleeves flare into points over the hands, and have a half-inch band placed close to the edge. The back has a row of black buttons, with centers of white down a plait that extends from shoulder to hem on the right side. This plait is attached to the skirt only on the inside, so that the outside hangs loose. The bobbed hair is Antoine's most are placed loose over bands of white and attached at the ends.

popular cut, to the charm of which hundreds of heads of long American hair are daily succumbing.

The second woman is got up with the special view to present a vision of floating enchantment in the dance. The gown is black and white lace, and also comes from Cyber. There is an apron tunic on the skirt, which falls in floating undulations down the sides and around the lower edge. The waist has a similar effect, which occurs at the side front, the bottom of the lace being attached to a line at the waist.

An interesting color note is secured in this costume by green velvet ribbons, which are attached to the shoulders at the sides, where the sleeves would begin if there were any. This ribbon passes along the top of the shoulders, around the neck from the back, and ties in a bow tight around the neck in front, with long ends hanging almost to the waist.

The third figure shows an example of the typical costume of the femme de monde when she chooses something else besides the magpie color scheme. It is also from Cyber, and the color is a new red—not the kind that knocks your eye out with its brilliancy, but a dull recherche red with a lot of brown in it. Back and front are so finely plaited that they resemble the waving of a wheat field in the breeze more than plaiting. The sides are unattached to the front except at the shoulders and by the belt, and they have little hip pockets set just below the waist line, which is the new near-hip line. The trimming of this dress takes its cue from the spectrum, being narrow bands of the orange red end, set in groups of three in the plaited portion of the skirt, and forming the round yoke. There are no sleeves, but the cuffs of varied color strips are pretenders, set around the arm just below the cap of the shoulder, and leaving it bare. The scarf with its plaited ends is attached to the dress on the shoulders, and is trimmed with these small inset strips of bright colors.

Rumor has it that we are to return to wide, decorated sleeves for autumn, and our fourth offering shows you whither the width is drifting. You see, at present it is toward the bottom, although the size of the armhole is by no means inconsiderable. Plaited lowers add a great deal to the amplitude of the sleeves. The width of the dress itself is apparently negligible, but its straight tube tunic is deceiving, for it is split to the waist in front and has a plaited under skirt that shows only for six inches at the bottom. The material of the dress is black crepe Tchina, and the only color relief is the band of gray and white chinchilla which is placed above the edge of the tunic.

The woman's hair shows an irregular conception of the ubiquitous bob, with undulations concealing the exact nature of the cut. They shape the hair so cleverly in cutting it that any head becomes charming in outline when the hair has been shorn and waved as it is here. The idea is to keep your hair sleeked down so that the outline in back is quite distinct, and then to let it fall carelessly in front, this way and that. It must be short enough to show the lower portion of the ears, and often it is arranged so that the ears peep out between folds of hair. You can do as you like about your forehead, either allowing it to show fully, or letting the hair fall forward over it in irregular curls or a fringe.

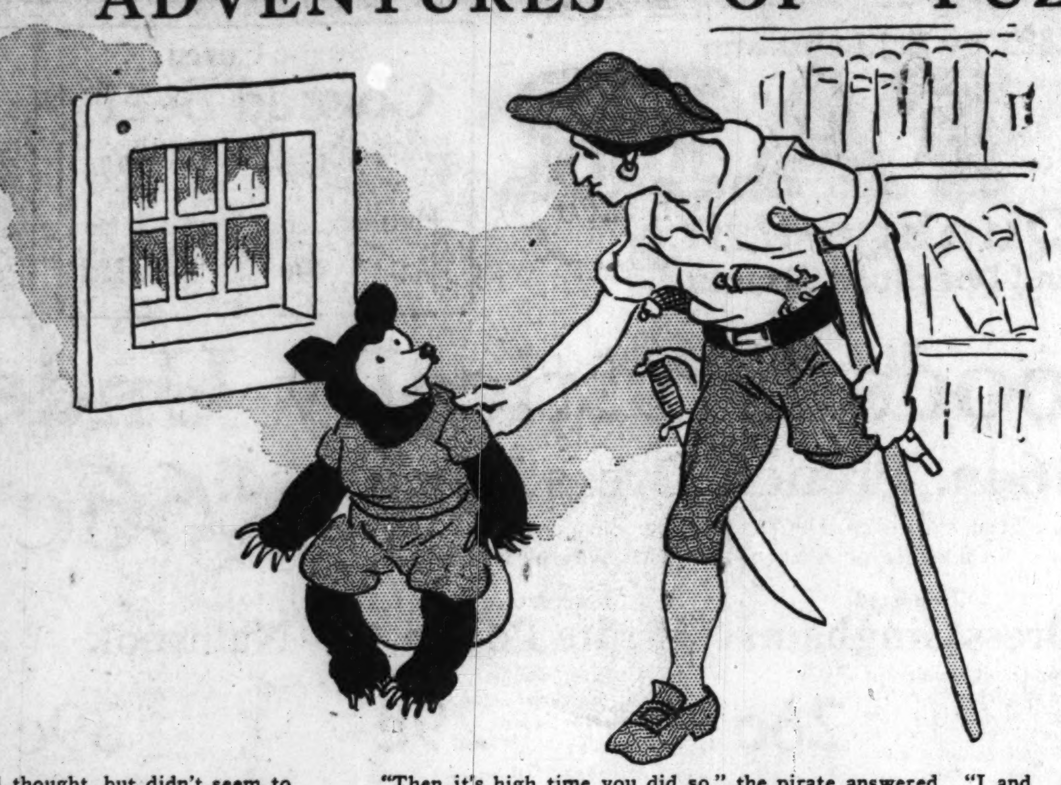
THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

A RAINY MORNING'S ENTERTAINMENT

By Raymond Kelly



MY, how it did rain that morning! It seemed as though the whole mountain side must wash away, so fast was the water falling. The creek was over its banks, and went shouting and complaining on its way towards the valley. The wind blew so hard, too, that it splashed some of the water under the door of the den, in spite of the mat that Mother Bear had rolled up and placed there to stop it.

Fuzzy Wuzzy didn't like the rain, for it made him feel even lonelier than he was. He had planned to play in the woods with Hawk Feather that morning, and now he couldn't go out of doors at all. Besides Father Bear was away from home a-hunting and, as it was Saturday, Mother Bear was too busy to play with her little cub. You see, she had cake in the oven, blackberry jam cooking on top of the stove, and cream in the church, which is enough to keep almost any mother too busy to play.

So Fuzzy Wuzzy was left to himself, and was thinking hard to find some amusement. He thought and thought, but didn't seem to be getting anywhere at all; so finally he went into Father Bear's own particular den corner, and sat down on a hassock with his head between his paws.

That didn't seem to be any better, and Fuzzy Wuzzy was about to give up, when right at his shoulder a voice said: "Well, shiver my timbers, if it isn't little Fuzzy Wuzzy," and Fuzzy turned around on the hassock to see standing there a one legged man in knee breeches, and wearing a three-cornered hat. Into his belt were thrust a sword and three old fashioned pistols.

"How do you do, Mr. Pirate," said Fuzzy Wuzzy politely. "I don't think I've ever met you before."

"Then it's high time you did so," the pirate answered. "I and my friends and foemen are the best of rainy day company for little bears and boys. In fact, I've known even little girls to have a good time in our company. You'll find us between the green covers of the second book from the left end of the third shelf from the bottom of the bookcase, and any time you come around for us you'll find us all ready to take you on the most wonderful of ocean voyages. There'll be plenty of adventures, and you are perfectly welcome to share in them, taking whichever side you choose in the fighting, and helping yourself to all you wish of the treasure we find. Some people have gone with us at least fifty times, and plan to go again." And with a jerky little bow, the pirate lost himself among the book shelves only pausing long enough to leave a card with the name "Long John," and the address, "Treasure Island."

Fuzzy Wuzzy was half minded to start right then, but a hand was laid on his shoulder to stop him. This time it was a kindly faced, middle aged man, wearing a long beard. He was dressed in goat skins.

"Speaking of islands," said this queerly dressed fellow, leaning on the handle of his straw umbrella, "you'll find mine well worth a visit. I've lived there alone for twenty years, and yet I have been a companion to millions of people for the last three hundred years. You may look through my telescope and see some of these people, if you wish."

"I should love to do so," Fuzzy Wuzzy answered, taking the telescope between his paws. But all that he could see was a faint gray blur, until a brown skinned young man, dressed like his master, took the telescope, gave it a turn here and a little twist there, and handed it back.

Then Fuzzy Wuzzy looked again, and this time he could see in the glass a great company of people, some dressed in the clothes of three hundred years ago, some dressed like great grandfather when he was a boy, and some—who looked like the boys and girls of today, which is exactly what they were. But each and every one of them was reading from a book that had on it the name of the man in the goat skin clothes, while piled around them were other books with the same titles as those in Father Bear's book case. So Fuzzy Wuzzy knew then that he need never be lonesome again.

And you don't need to, either.

MEN'S FASHIONS

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"The first thing we will do," said Mr. Smith to his young cousin Jim, "is unpack our bathing suits and get into that surf as fast as we can." You will recall Mr. Smith and his cousin Jim Brown from the last two Sundays. Mr. Smith is teaching Jim the great art of dressing by practical shopping tours in New York and trips out of town. We find them spending the week-end at the seashore.

Having arrived on a Friday afternoon, they are about to act upon the happy suggestion of the older man that they find relief from the heat they endured on the train by a dip in the ocean. The purchasing of Jim's bathing suit had taken place the day before. Naturally Mr. Smith had had a great deal to do in picking it out. He had used his own at Palm Beach last winter, and so it was the last word in swimming attire. He saw to it that Jim was as well outfitted.

Jim's suit consisted of a striped top in two shades of blue, dark blue and smoke blue, while the trunks were dark blue with a knit in smoke blue stripe down each seam. He wore a blue and white striped belt. Mr. Smith's suit was also a two piece suit, with gray and black striped top and solid color black trunks.

"When you go to the seashore, you know," Mr. Smith had told his cousin, "your swimming suit is as important as your evening clothes. Not only the bathing suit itself, but the beach robe to wear over it to and from the beach. We'll save some room in our baggage by using the same robe for beach robe and bathrobe. There is not a particle of difference, anyway. Many types of bathrobes are as suitable for the beach as for the hallway between your bedroom and the bath. It merely changes its name when it gets near the water."

They both had striped robes, but Jim's was a terry cloth, while that of Mr. Smith was a striped flannel. Jim's was blue and white, and Mr. Smith's gray and white.

"We could just as well have worn brighter colors," said Mr. Smith when he selected the robes, "without upsetting the equilibrium of the rest of the bathers and the fish, but these are pleasant colors. We'll let the rest of the population furnish the brilliance. You'll see orange, and reds, and bright greens, and all possible combinations."

After the swim the two men dressed for the evening. They had brought their dinner clothes, as Mr. Smith knew from experience they would feel more at ease in them in as large a hotel as they were staying in. There was dancing during the evening, and more men were in evening dress than were not. Mr. Smith wore a white waistcoat with his dinner coat, while for Jim he had selected one of those bands, a black silk sash effect which was cool and yet lived up to the well dressed man's idea of a proper summer accompaniment to a dinner coat.

Jim had put in a request for a low turnover collar, but his cousin had persuaded him that the wing was better. "It's more favored by the smart dresser," he argues, "and you needn't think the wing is any less cool. In fact, it is cooler, because there is more opening at the neck, especially since the bold wing is the best style."

Saturday morning found the pair donning white flannel trousers. Jim's were blue striped. He wore with them a blue gray jacket, a yellow shirt, and a blue and yellow foulard tie. His shoes were tan and white sport shoes. Mr. Smith looked at him approvingly when he was dressed, and had added a straw hat with blue and yellow band to the outfit.

"You're all ready for the morning promenade," he said. "I couldn't do better myself."

Which was almost not true, for in his black and white striped flannel trousers and gray jacket, black and white striped shirt, pearl gray linen waistcoat, black and white polka dot tie, and black and white shoes, with a gray and black hat band on his straw sennit to top off the effect, Mr. Smith presented a smart appearance that was hard to rival.

"I'll be a neutral background for your yellow and blue," he announced, "but I warn you, this afternoon I'm going to burst into brilliance, and so you'd better begin thinking of some quiet costume, so that they won't put us off the beach."

Mr. Smith kept his word. After a morning swim the two of them changed their clothes, to keep up with the constant flow of fashion at the resort. Mr. Smith wore gray and blue striped flannel trousers, a dark blue coat with brass buttons, a blue and white striped shirt, and a foulard tie of red background and blue figure.

Jim didn't subdue his costume so one could notice. He wore plain white flannels, the same coat as in the morning ("one of us has got double up on coats or we'll have to take a trunk," Mr. Smith had said when they packed), but his shirt was pink and white striped, and his tie a solid green. He wore the same straw hat, but this time he changed the band to a green and white. This was one of the sartorial tricks his New York cousin had taught him.

The rest of the day from the clothes point of view consisted of bathing attire and dinner coats in the evening. The following morning Mr. Smith changed the sartorial program with a white linen suit, a white broadcloth shirt, plaid colored linen tie, white buck shoes, and a Panama hat. Jim stuck to flannels and wore brown and white striped trousers with a light brown jacket, a brown and white striped shirt, and a brown crêpe silk tie, with no figure. He wore his straw hat this time with a brown band.

They returned to town that afternoon, Mr. Smith in his light gray cheviot suit, soild gray madras shirt, with pinned collar, striped tie of navy blue, silver, and pastel green; Jim in his smoke blue suit, lavender and white striped shirt, and plum colored four in hand tie.

"Well," commented Jim, "we used about all the clothes we took along. I didn't think we would when I saw the array you laid out to pack. It's lucky we didn't fall into the water when we were boating, or we wouldn't have been able to change our outfit three times a day."

"Worse things can happen," answered his cousin.

Your Most Embarrassing Moment!

To Have Your Neighbor Recognize Her Discarded Furniture in Your Home During the Course of a Friendly Visit

And to make matters worse—you bought the furniture for absolutely new! The dealer had another store where he claimed all his exchanged merchandise was for sale; and you avoided that store as though it were a plague. You bought at the store where he sold only new goods??? Well, it is very hard to explain how such a thing ever could happen; but then, sometimes a piece of old furniture is just too good to sacrifice—a little fixing will make it as good as new and no one will ever know the difference (and think of the extra profit!). If you buy at any of the General Furniture Co.'s 11 big stores you will never experience the humiliation of having a friend recognize her old furniture in your home. Every piece of merchandise on our floors is direct from the factory and backed by our own personal guarantee as to its quality and newness.

ITALIAN STYLE SEMI-BUNGALOW.

THE charming little semi-bungalow here illustrated, with its interesting adaptation of the Italian style, is so unique in many respects, both as to exterior and interior, as to establish at once a reputation for individuality and originality on the part of its owner. It is neither a bungalow nor a two story house, but has the advantages of both, with many distinctive features of its own.

It is a small house, having been planned for a fifty foot lot in a suburban or semi-suburban locality, but would be equally charming on a larger lot with wider surrounding lawns, or in any other locality. Its exterior walls are of Indiana limestone, a mixture of rustic buff and variegated stone being used with rough-sawed finish. The blocks are of varying lengths, but are laid up in courses of even height. By the use of this stone with its lovely soft coloring, a tile roof of dull red or reddish brown, shutters blue-green, and the remainder of the wood-trim, such as window and door frames and sashes and the entrance feature, of deep ivory to harmonize with the stone, this house would have a decidedly unusual appearance.

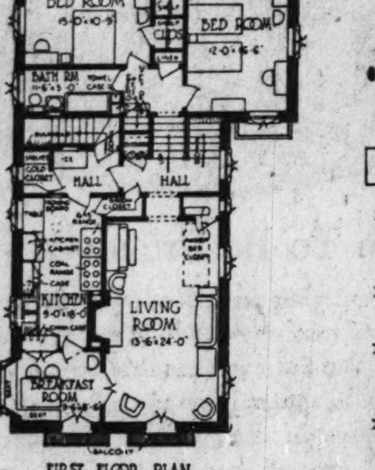
The quaint iron balconies at the front windows and the railing over the entrance feature should be of a dark bluish green or black. These, together with the iron lantern over the door, are effective details in exterior ornamentation.

The interior is found to be arranged in a most novel manner on three floor levels. There are two stories in the rear, and one story midway between these floor levels in the front part of the house with a basement underneath that has half its height above grade. This minimizes the usual amount of excavation and foundation work.

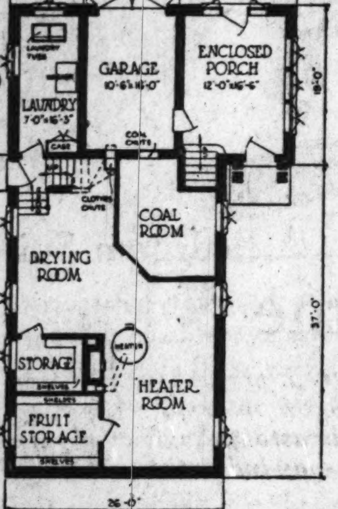
The house is entered from the side through the enclosed porch, which is on the lower level in the rear, or entrance can be gained from the garage, which is next to the sun porch, and has a door opening into it. A short flight of nine steps leads to a hall off of which the living room opens. This hall contains a small broom closet and a coat closet, and has a door leading into a rear hall, in which are located stairs to the cellar and laundry. The laundry is on the grade level next to the garage, with stairs and service entrance from the driveway on the side of the house opposite to the front entrance.

The living room is unusually large for a house of this size, its dimensions being 13½x24 feet. It has windows on two sides, and has a large fireplace sunk flush in the middle of the long inside wall. This is, of course, the center of interest, in the comfortable and attractive grouping of furniture, and is intended to have a simple Italian type mantel of light Buff Indiana limestone and a hearth of stone slabs. At the end of the living room is a closet for a single in-a-dor bed which would be found most convenient for the accommodation of occasional guests.

There is no formal dining room in this house. Instead there is a large alcove or breakfast room opening from the front part of the living room. This is a feature that will be appreciated by the housewife who does her own work. With built-in seats on two sides, it is large enough to seat eight people.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN



BASEMENT FLOOR PLAN

The kitchen is unusually complete and well arranged. Though not large, it provides ample space for all the modern housekeeping conveniences—a gas range, a coal range, kitchen cabinet, sink with double drain boards, cupboards, ironing board in wall cabinet, and table. The refrigerator is placed in the rear hall where it can be iced from the stairs, and there is a cold closet next to the kitchen.

The rooms in the rear of the house on the upper level consist of two bedrooms and a bath opening off a square hall—all of which are good sized—one bedroom being large enough for twin beds. They are light and airy and have ample closet space. These rooms are reached by a short flight of seven steps up from the main floor. From this upper hall, a stairway leads to the attic space over the front portion of the house, which is large enough so that a part of it could be finished off as a maid's room or a children's playroom and still leave space for storing trunks and baggage.

The commendable features of a house such as this are easily seen. It is surprisingly compact, and the informality of the arrangement of its rooms provides great possibilities for individuality in furnishing. The sleeping portion is separated from the rest of the house and yet is only seven steps up. The laundry, garage, and porch are only nine steps down, both of which are most convenient for the housewife doing her own work.

The enclosed porch is at the back away from the street, and opens on to a small garden which has a pergola in the midst of shrubbery in the rear and a limestone bird bath in the center. Thus placed the porch does not obstruct any of the windows of the house, and all rooms have direct sunlight.

Access may be had to the garage without going outside. The living room and dining room, being placed sufficiently high above grade permits the house to be built close to the sidewalk line and affords privacy and seclusion from pedestrians. The house is unusual both on the exterior and interior, and should at once commend itself to builders who desire that touch of individuality in their homes that gives them a distinctive charm unobtainable in the more formal and stereotyped style of house.

Answers to Inquiries.

F. P.: Tête de negre is a good color for floor covering. Use two toned ecru wall paper, in an all over design, in both rooms. Have ecru silk marquisette glass curtains at all of the windows and at the French doors. In the living room the draperies could be of jade green and gold sunfast, with mauve and gold, or mauve and green, for the dining room. Have the overstuffed furniture in the living room upholstered in taupe, and let the additional pieces, such as end tables, cabinet desk, bench, and console, be finished in dark walnut. The dining room furniture could be of the same wood. Have cushions in the living room of jade green, mauve, gold color, and old blue, with one of black. Have gold colored lamp shades, trimmed with jade green edging—not fringe.

E. S.: Gray walls usually produce a rather chilly effect unless the room faces south and has a great deal of sunlight. Sand or ecru is better. This would look well with the blue suite. Use old gold sunfast draperies.

* *

H. P. B.: Use ecru silk gauze glass curtains at the windows, in both living rooms, with casement silk draperies in stripes of old gold, dull rose, green, and amethyst. You forgot to tell me what furniture you have.

* *

P. K.: Have ecru casement gauze curtains, edged with narrow jade green braid at your sun room windows. Do not use overdraperies. Reed or fiber furniture, enameled jade green with bright flowered cushions, would be attractive. In one bedroom have brown mahogany colonial furniture, with rose colored draperies, over old ivory glass curtains. In the other have a French gray set, trimmed with mauve, and have draperies to match the trimming.

Jams and Jellies Cost Less and Taste Better When Made by the New Certo Method

Old Method

2 qts. Fruit	50c
2 lbs. Sugar	20c

Makes 3 lbs. Jam for 70c or more than 23c a pound.

Every housewife knows that the old "pound for pound" mixture of fruit and sugar must be boiled down to make it "jell." They realize too that this long boiling evaporates a lot of the delicious fruit juice. For instance, as shown above, with 2 lbs. (or quarts) of fruit and 2 lbs. of sugar the result will only be 3 lbs. of jam. The other pound is lost or evaporated by long boiling.

With the Certo method of jam and jelly making all this is changed, because the mixture is boiled only one minute. Certo supplies the necessary fruit pectin—that natural jelly-making substance found in some fruits, in varying amounts and without which no one could ever make jam or jelly—now separated from fruit, refined and bottled. Boiling only one minute with Certo eliminates evaporation so that with 2 lbs. of fruit and 3 lbs. of sugar, you now make 5 lbs. of jam—over a half more than is made by the old method with the same amount of fruit. More sugar is used in the Certo method only because it makes so much more jam than the old method. The amount of sugar in each glass of jam is the same in both methods. The extra sugar is simply used to make jam or jelly from the juice and flavor that used to be boiled away.

Certo's one minute boiling period also prevents the flavor and color of your fruit from boiling away. That's why Certo jams and jellies are called: "The World's New Standard of Quality."

Besides, with Certo hours of your time over a hot stove are eliminated and you never have a failure. And Certo is a pure fruit product—no gelatine or preservative in it.

Just try one batch of fruit with Certo and you'll never return to the old method of jam and jelly making with all its hard work, worry and extra expense. Get some plums and a bottle of Certo with recipe book from your grocer and make some plum jam. No home ever has too much of it. Note how simple this recipe for delicious plum jam really is:

New Method

2 qts. Fruit	50c
3 lbs. Sugar	30c
½ bottle CERTO	18c

Makes 5 lbs. Jam for 98c or less than 20c a pound.

Slice, pit and crush well about 2½ lbs. plums. Measure 4 level cups (2 lbs.) crushed fruit into large kettle, add ¼ cup water, stir until boiling, cover kettle and simmer ¼ hour. Add 7½ level cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar and mix well. Use hottest fire and stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard for 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in ½ bottle (scant ½ cup) Certo. Skim and pour quickly.

Use same recipe for Currant or Gooseberry Jam by crushing well about 2 lbs. of either fruit.

Above recipe and nearly 100 other Jams, Jellies and Marmalades are in the Certo Book of Recipes attached to every bottle of Certo.

TAMALE PIE AND OTHERS.

THE one piece dinner dish is usu ly quite portable, it is someth that will keep hot for half hour or more, or up to seve hours with proper management, there are many reasons why it particularly adapted to summer ners, especially if you believe tha least one hot dish should be serv at dinner even though the tempe ture hugs ninety in the shade. there were no other reason for t hot dish there would be the one t it makes the cool salad and des and cool beverage seem all the m cool.

For the home cook the one pi dinner dish is a life saver. Supp her salad or dessert all ready, and ch ing, or the dessert more than mer chill. The cook can then perpare t central dish, get it into the oven—m of these can be cooked in the ove and while it is baking have time straighten up the kitchen, bathe heated countenance, change her dre and be almost like a guest herself the time dinner is ready.

When it is cooked if she and t others are not quite ready, the ov burners may be turned off, the ov door opened, and the tamale pie [hi ly seasoned beef and cooked c meal], the Scotch pie [mutton lamb and cooked barley], the pot thistle [lamb stew or lamb leftov and mashed potato], or the rice c serole, or what you will, is sure to hot enough for a considerably dela meal.

Six years ago a great number persons, most of them from the thr greatest farming states, sent in on prize contest endless duplicates of recipe for a tamale pie for six p sons, which could be extended to se eight. While a great number sent one and the same recipe, probab taken from one and the same source, great many others varied it slightl but almost no one emphasized qu enough that this pie must be fai peppery, or it could not legitimat be called tamale pie.

Standard Tamale Pie Recipe.

This is called the standard rec with certain additions to the origin because so many persons had it. F mula for outer part of pie: Two cu of yellow corn meal, six cups of wat one or two teaspoons of salt, cook together forty-five minutes as a mu Filling: One pound hamburger stea one onion, one tablespoon of fat, t cups of tomato, other seasonings, p ticularly peppers both sweet and hot.

Make mush, put layer in butter baking dish or casserole, put in p pared meat, cover with the rest the mush, and bake one-half hour. O eater may perfer thin layers of mus another thick. The thin are lost in t meat.

To prepare the meat cook till sligh ly brown the onion chopped fine the fat, and with this also cook green pepper chopped fine, if you wa a superior mixture, add meat and t and sear it well, then add tomato a cook the two until well blended. get a tamale effect it is almost nec sary to add about one-fourth teasp of cayenne but some curry powd with a good proportion of cayenne p per may be used instead. But do n add all at one time. Add part, co a little, taste, and decide whether add more or not.

Variations of Tamale Pie Recipe.

Since chicken is the favorite m for the hot tamale, there is no rea why chicken should not be used tamale pie. First make a highly s soned chicken hash, with either a gr or tomato for wetness, and fill it i the corn meal lined baking dish. Co this with a layer of the corn meal, a bake.

Cold soup meat can be used, and is almost equal to the mixture of r meat, but not quite, since it has l its own flavoring extracts and does take the seasoning so well. cooked soup meat, and some of same meat exactly, but raw, through the meat grinder were used an experiment to see how werth wh this dish could be made of the cheap meat, some after it had been cook with the bone for a broth, and the r not cooked until it was to be used the pie.

A piece out of the middle of shank was chosen—three pounds o with the marrow bone. That meat through the chopper made a palata pie, but of course a piece of ch meat or round steak would have b superior. It is a rather good tes one's cooking ability, with ability season, to try out such cheap c then you are sure about what can done with the better.

Scotch Pie.

Well cooked barley used for the tom and the top of a lamb or mut pie yields a highly palatable dish. for that, when a corn meal mush seasoned with a highly seasoned it is enhanced in agreeableness or edibility many times over. Cook ley for at least three hours. W any given quantity, add to it times its measure of water, and c Use the more solid part for the lining a pie dish or a deep earth ware dish, after buttering it, add over or freshly made lamb stew, hash, cover with cooked barley bake until the top puffs somewhat about one-half hour.

As little as one cup of meaty ton stew may be used with two c of boiled barley for this pie. For an amount use one-eighth teaspoo cayenne pepper. This pie will hot for about three-fourths of an h The better the stew, the better the Rice Casserole.

Pat boiled rice firmly into a ba dish, making it as much like a c an inch thick as possible, fill lamb stew, cover with rice, and from one-half to three-fourths o hour. The rice cover may be pa out to firmness on a plate of the r size and then pushed over the A little of the liquid of the ste some melted butter may be put to keep the rice from drying up it is baking.

Potato Thistle.

TAMALE PIE AND OTHERS.

THE one piece dinner dish is usually quite portable, it is something that will keep hot for half an hour or more, or up to several hours with proper management, and there are many reasons why it is particularly adapted to summer dinners, especially if you believe that at least one hot dish should be served at dinner even though the temperature hugs ninety in the shade. If there were no other reason for this hot dish there would be the one that it makes the cool salad and dessert and cool beverage seem all the more cool.

For the home cook the one piece dinner dish is a life saver. Suppose her salad or dessert all ready, and chilling, or the dessert more than merely chill. The cook can then perpare this central dish, get it into the oven—most of these can be cooked in the oven—and while it is baking have time to straighten up the kitchen, bathe her heated countenance, change her dress, and be almost like a guest herself by the time dinner is ready.

When it is cooked if she and the others are not quite ready, the oven burners may be turned off, the oven door opened, and the tamale pie [highly seasoned beef and cooked corn meal], the Scotch pie [mutton or lamb and cooked barley], the potato thistle [lamb stew or lamb leftover and mashed potato], or the rice casserole, or what you will, is sure to be hot enough for a considerably delayed meal.

Six years ago a great number of persons, most of them from the three greatest farming states, sent in on a prize contest endless duplicates of a recipe for a tamale pie for six persons, which could be extended to serve eight. While a great number sent in one and the same recipe, probably taken from one and the same source, a great many others varied it slightly, but almost no one emphasized quite enough that this pie must be fairly peppery, or it could not legitimately be called tamale pie.

Standard Tamale Pie Recipe.

This is called the standard recipe with certain additions to the original, because so many persons had it. Formula for outer part of pie: Two cups of yellow corn meal, six cups of water, one or two teaspoons of salt, cooked together forty-five minutes as a mush. Filling: One pound hamburger steak, one onion, one tablespoon of fat, two cups of tomato, other seasonings, particularly peppers both sweet and hot.

Make mush, put layer in buttered baking dish or casserole, put in prepared meat, cover with the rest of the mush, and bake one-half hour. One eater may perfer thin layers of mush, another thick. The thin are lost in the meat.

To prepare the meat cook till slightly brown the onion chopped fine in the fat, and with this also cook a green pepper chopped fine, if you want a superior mixture, add meat and turn and sear it well, then add tomato and cook the two until well blended. To get a tamale effect it is almost necessary to add about one-fourth teaspoon of cayenne but some curry powder with a good proportion of cayenne pepper may be used instead. But do not add all at one time. Add part, cook a little, taste, and decide whether to add more or not.

Variations of Tamale Pie Recipe.

Since chicken is the favorite meat for the hot tamale, there is no reason why chicken should not be used in tamale pie. First make a highly seasoned chicken hash, with either a gravy or tomato for wetness, and fill it into the corn meal lined baking dish. Cover this with a layer of the corn meal, and bake.

Cold soup meat can be used, and it is almost equal to the mixture of raw meat, but not quite, since it has lost its own flavoring extracts and does not take the seasoning so well. The cooked soup meat, and some of the same meat exactly, but raw, put through the meat grinder were used in an experiment to see how werth while this dish could be made of the cheapest meat, some after it had been cooked with the bone for a broth, and the rest not cooked until it was to be used for the pie.

A piece out of the middle of the shank was chosen—three pounds of it with the marrow bone. That meat put through the chopper made a palatable pie, but of course a piece of chuck meat or round steak would have been superior. It is a rather good test of one's cooking ability, with ability to reason, to try out such cheap cuts, then you are sure about what can be done with the better.

Scotch Pie.

Well cooked barley used for the bottom and the top of a lamb or mutton pie yields a highly palatable dish. As for that, when a corn meal mush gets seasoned with a highly seasoned beef it is enhanced in agreeableness or in edibility many times over. Cook barley for at least three hours. Wash any given quantity, add to it eight times its measure of water, and cook. Use the more solid part for the pie, lining a pie dish or a deep earthenware dish, after buttering it, add left over or freshly made lamb stew, or hash, cover with cooked barley and bake until the top puffs somewhat, or about one-half hour.

As little as one cup of meaty mutton stew may be used with two cups of boiled barley for this pie. For such an amount use one-eighth teaspoon of cayenne pepper. This pie will keep hot for about three-fourths of an hour. The better the stew, the better the pie.

Rice Casserole.

Pat boiled rice firmly into a baking dish, making it as much like a crust an inch thick as possible, fill with lamb stew, cover with rice, and bake from one-half to three-fourths of an hour. The rice cover may be patted out to firmness on a plate of the right size and then pushed over the stew. A little of the liquid of the stew or some melted butter may be put over to keep the rice from drying up while it is baking.

Potato Thistle.

Prepare a baking dish by lining it with a well seasoned and fluffy mashed potato, fill the space with minced lamb heated up in a thickened liquid, cover with potato, criss-cross top with a knife, forming inch sided diamond shapes, put in oven, and brown. If just the meat in a lamb stew is minced and heated up in a little of the liquid of the stew, it makes an excellent filling for this dish.

Negri's Art Shines Through Sordid Plot

"LILY OF THE DUST"

Produced by Paramount. Directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki. Presented at McVicker's theater (tomorrow).

THE CAST.

Lily	Pola Negri
Lieut. Prell	Ben Lyon
Col. Hertzbach	Noah Beery
Richard Dehnecke	Raymond Griffith
The uncle	William J. Kelly
Julia	Jeanette Daudet

By Maurine Watkins.

SOME day they're going to find a play just MEANT for Pola!

But until that time she's worth watching in whatever scenario they happen to pick up. For she has the spark.

If you liked her in "Men," you'll like her in this second Dimitri Buchowetzki; for again she flits—no, "is dragged by the fatality of her beauty," they would have us believe—from one man to another. And on. (They're trying to recapture the old time flashing abandon of "Passion," they say, and the censor is cramping their style.)

POLA NEGRI
plays the title rôle of "Lily of the Dust."

"The heart of a girl who's wretched and lonely absorbs love like a sponge"—that's the text.

Lily, an innocent schoolgirl, terrified by her mother's sudden madness, is left alone to work her way in a little library close to an army camp. A young soldier woos her with a gay and careless love, but his superior officer also discovers the girl's beauty and sends for her one night. Shy, awkward, fainting in fear, she goes—and he proposes marriage. (That was—we admit it frankly—the surprise of the film.)

Again to illustrate the text: Lily, divorced and cast off by her husband for a trivial indiscretion with her young sweetheart, is alone and disgraced, penniless and hungry. (She forgets the "Help Wanted" column; besides, that's not her type.) And a wealthy dabbler in arts gives her the luxurious setting and clothes that her beauty requires.

The youthful sweetheart returns. Scene. She pleads and tells him he's the only one she's really loved, and he promises to marry her if she can only please the uncle who is to endow them.

A dinner is planned for their meeting. Lily is prim, she is cold, she is chaste, she is demure. A little wine. Then she is innocently gay, playful, daring, mischievous. The uncle is enchanted and deceived. The door bursts open: a bacchanalian party of her artist friends, led by the current lover.

The uncle realizes what she is. The dream is over for the boy. And Lily, clutching his glove to her heart, knows that the "song of songs" shall never be hers to hear!

Rather a sordid story. For they've followed closely "Das

CUPID SLINGS ARROWS WIDELY IN HOLLYWOOD

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Romance took a regular hop, skip, and jump this week in Hollywood. Some of these romances are warmed over affairs, but mostly Cupid is calling a new shuffle and deal.

Athletes seem to be the face cards, so far as the favor of the picture actresses is concerned.

Shirley Mason and Harlan Fengler are going to be married, and don't care who knows it. They met out at the race track when Fengler was here a few months ago and won a race at the old Beverly Hills auto track. Shirley impulsively promised before the race to kiss him if he won, and he did. He fell quite madly in love from the first minute, they say.

Everybody is glad and a little relieved, I think, about Shirley. She is such a little thing that she somehow seems in need of being taken care of. She used to say that Bernard Durning, her former husband—whom she married when she was 16, and who died more than a year ago—was brother, father, and husband to her. But now she seems deeply devoted to Fengler, and when he was hurt recently in Indianapolis in an auto race she rushed to his side. At present Fengler is in Los Angeles, and it isn't likely he will race again until September. While the wedding date is not set, both admit it will happen soon. Shirley isn't going to give up her screen work.

Frankie Grandetta, the split pint sheik of Hollywood, who was formerly a bantamweight contender in the ring, has been laying siege to Viola Dana's heart, and the two were a cunning little pony team dancing at Montmartre, but they do say Viola never for a moment took Frankie seriously, and now he merely wipes away a tear as he watches Viola and Maurice Flynn whirling in a fox trot.

A Bit Hard on a Little Rival.

Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor continue madly devoted to each other. They had a tiff last week, but it is all made up now. Something funny happened in connection with it. Estelle went with Ray Griffith to lunch one day at the Montmartre, and Jack Dempsey came in and sat down right at the next table.

Ray is small, and a friend of his came along and kidded him, saying: "I'd hate to be in your shoes. Dempsey is going to wait for you outside!"

Ray never blanched, but he did get mad a few minutes afterward when insult was added to injury by Jack's coming by and whispering in a stage voice to Estelle: "For God's sake, why don't you get somebody my size so I can lick him?"

Jack Dempsey tells me that when he marries he is going to give up fighting.

And Estelle tells me that when she marries Jack she is going to have to give up pictures.

Gaylord Lloyd, Harold Lloyd's brother, also had a swift romance. He has known Barbara Starr only two weeks, but is engaged to her.

"The minute I saw her I knew I wanted her for my wife and to be a mother to my little boy," he said. They are to go either to France or up through Canada on their wedding tour.

It looks as though Monte Blue will soon announce his engagement, too. He is going about with a Miss Dana, a beautiful blonde girl who, I believe, did a little extra work in pictures in New York.

They go about alone together a great deal, hardly ever

Mr. Eckstein Sheds Light Upon Mystery

By Edward Moore.

AMONG other good deeds in the maintenance of that romantic adventure in music which goes under the name of Ravinia, Mr. Eckstein has solved an operatic mystery of long duration. He is prepared to tell the plot of "Il Trovatore."

This will undoubtedly be a matter of grief to Mr. Donaghey, who has been heard to claim that since the death of Verdi he is the one person in the world who knew the plot. But it is good news for the rest of us, those who have been obliged to treat the fine, crusted old work much as though it were a song recital in costume.

FLORENCE EASTON
Singing in "Mme Butterfly" and "Trovatore" this week at Ravinia.
[Bernie Photo.]

Since "Il Trovatore" is one of four works due to receive their first performance of the summer this week, and since Mr. Eckstein believes operas in general will be more enjoyed if their stories are better understood, he has consented to release the plot of this one with the others. Here is his summary:

"Il Trovatore" tells, he says, a thrillingly melodramatic tale of love and misunderstanding and vengeance. Its central figure is Manrico, a troubador and soldier, who believes himself to be the son of Azucena, a gypsy. Manrico is in love with the beautiful Countess Leonora, who returns his affection. The Count Di Luna, a cruel tyrant, is also in love with Leonora, and hates Manrico. He particularly hates gypsies, because there is a story that his little brother has been made the victim of gypsy magic and has died as a result, and the old gypsy woman believed guilty has been burned alive as a witch by order of Di Luna's father.

Azucena is the daughter of this gypsy woman, who, dying, has commanded Azucena to avenge her. Manrico and the Count Di Luna meet in Leonora's garden and when they are about to fight a duel Leonora intervenes, fearing that Manrico may be killed. The scene changes to the gypsy camp and Azucena confesses to Manrico that he is not her son, but the brother of Count Di Luna, who has been stolen by her in vengeance for her mother's death. She has reared him as her own child. A messenger then arrives with word that Leonora, who has been told that Manrico is dead, is about to enter a convent. Manrico hastens away to prevent this action on her part, and before the convent he again meets Di Luna and his followers, who have come to abduct Leonora. Manrico rescues Leonora.

And So Nearly Everybody Dies.

Di Luna makes war on the gypsies, and Azucena is captured and sentenced to be burned at the stake. Manrico besieges Di Luna's castle, but is captured and thrown into prison. Leonora attempts to rescue him, offering herself to Di Luna if he will free her lover. He assents, and Leonora carries the tidings to Manrico. However, he believes she is a traitress until he learns she has taken poison that she may evade Di Luna. Manrico is dragged away to death, and as he dies Azucena tells Di Luna he has killed his own brother.

STEPPING HARSHLY ON THE GAS IN CANADA

By Burns Mantle.

MONTREAL, Canada.—[Special Correspondence.]—It appeared to be the accepted belief of the family that when we reached the Canadian line here we would suddenly burst upon a sort of international Coney Island crowded with Americans singing "Hic, Hic, Hooray!"

I tried to explain that such a picture was all wrong. We would naturally find some drink and numerous taverns bearing those once familiar legends, "First and Last Chance Saloon," "Wines, Liquors and Seegars—Americans Welcome!" and so forth. But as for any wild rushing across the line or wilder reelings back—that was a little too much to expect. Americans on tour are both prideful and cautious—and pride and caution are often an impressive substitute for dignity.

As I finished the lecture we crossed the line. It runs, or appears to run, through a wheat field, between two of those rubber company book signs that are doing so much to spread historical knowledge and astigmatism among our touring motorists. In another generation reading road signs at from thirty to forty miles an hour will have become an Olympic sport, taking place of the old fashioned tilting.

Can't you just hear the crowds of those days shouting at our goggled eyed representatives as they dash by the painted announcement that in this town the Holland Dutch first fractured and later wrecked the English grammar in 1674—can't you hear them shout:

"Read 'em, tourist. Read 'em?"

The only roystering sight that met our shining eyes the next few miles was a carload of young bucks from the States. Their gaze was alert and eager and fixed on a "beer and ale" sign decorating the side of a tavern up the road. They piled out there and shouted an invitation to us to join them. Curiously we were not at all thirsty. And as the liquor signs multiplied the less interested we became. Strange thing, human appetites. Liquor, liquor, everywhere, and no one cared to drink!

They Discuss the Situation.

A mile or two farther on the Canadian customs and immigration officials stopped us. And then we did have something to think about.

"All American born?" the official inquired, looking over the family.

"All but Tuschia," I answered, innocently, Tuschia being 4 year old Peg's best friend and constant companion. Tuschia was born in Galicia."

"Naturalized?" he demanded.

"Yes."

"Got her papers?"

"Never thought of that," I explained. "Didn't really know we were coming."

"Come with me!" said he. Something had happened to relieve the monotony of his day, and he fairly beamed.

We went into the roadside office and explained to the chief. He looked important and a little serious. He talked the situation over with the examining officer in bad French. Then the examining officer talked it over with him.

"Does she speak English?" the chief asked.

"Yes," we said, "and four other languages—German, Russian, Polish, and Peg's."

He seemed to think we were a little impudent, but let it pass. More bad French.

"Well," he announced, "she is admissible to the Domin-

Telling the Critics Where They Detrain

By Frederick Donaghey.

SOLICITOUS readers appreciatively direct me to an article in Liberty of July 12 wherein Walter A. Davenport makes a gift of the air to the drama-critics. I had read, laughed with and at, and liked the article fifteen minutes after that issue of Liberty, No. 10, was ready. . . . It was called "The Real Pickers of a Wow," "wow" being show-business patois for a hit that sells out nightly; and it was good reading. Mr. Davenport explained that the men who are in, and of, and about the business for profit know what the result is to be before the big-city critics see a play, and prepare accordingly. They learn what they know from Patrick Francis McGeehan, stage-carpenter of the small-town theater wherein the play is tried out. It doesn't matter what town is used for the experiment: McGeehan, employed by the local management to perform such chores as his union permits, is there, in the wings, watching the goings-on and listening in on the audience. When satisfied that the play is what he decides a play ought to be, he notifies the ticket-brokers in New-York or Chicago; and they, knowing that he knows, buy millions of dollars' worth of tickets in advance, certain that the popular mind is in unison with Patrick Francis McGeehan's when it comes to plays and acting and cognate commodities.

RALPH KELLARD
He gets his share of the laughs in "Easy Street"

The play is exhibited in New-York or Chicago, it is a riotous success, and the critics, Mr. Davenport is sure, don't know what it's all about. . . . "The chances are that they will be almost unanimous in their personal opinions. The critical mind—or, better, the mind employed to criticize—seldom leaves the beaten track. There is a psychological handicap in the word 'critic.' Much may be written and spoken about constructive criticism and destructive criticism; but the fact is that the critic's tendency is downward." . . . And McGeehan, the stage-carpenter in Asbury Park or South Bend, "does not read what they write. He has neither the time nor the inclination. Mr. McGeehan knows what he knows. He owns a two thousand-five-hundred-dollar motor-car. He paid for it with the checks he received from-time-to-time from admiring ticket-agencies in Chicago and New-York."

"You Know Who Critics Are? . . ."—Disraeli.

Like much else which is topical, interesting, and amusing, Mr. Davenport's article classifies as apple-sauce. . . . I know McGeehan: he is pretty much as described above, save that he resides in Zion City, where there isn't any theater. Otherwise, he would own not fewer than sixty-four motor-cars, the least of them worth ten times $2,500; and he wouldn't be a stage-carpenter; and they'd lay down a roll of bright red carpet on the pavement for him when he called at the bank. The least he could modestly ask for from the producers would be one hundred percent of the profits, and no liability when he

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD...... XXXII.—ENERGY: HOW ALL LIFE DEPENDS ON IT

AS we have seen in an earlier chapter, one of the fundamental entities of the universe is matter. A second, not less important, is called energy. Energy is indispensable if the world is to continue to exist, since all phenomena, including life, depend on it. Just as it is humanly impossible to create or to destroy a particle of matter, so it is impossible to create or to destroy energy. This statement will be more readily understood when we have considered what energy is.

Energy, like matter, is indestructible, and just as matter exists in various forms so does energy. And we may add, just as we are ignorant of what the negative and positive particles of electricity which constitute matter really are, so we are ignorant of the true nature of energy. At the same time, energy is not so completely mysterious as it once was. It is another of nature's mysteries which the advance of modern science has in some measure unveiled. It was only during the nineteenth century that energy came to be known as something as distinct and permanent as matter itself.

Forms of Energy

THE existence of various forms of energy had been known, of course, for ages; there was the energy of a falling stone, the energy produced by burning wood or coal or any other substance, but the essential identity of all these forms of energy had not been suspected. The conception of energy as something which, like matter, was constant in amount, which could not be created nor destroyed, was one of the great scientific acquisitions of the past century.

It is not possible to enter deeply into this subject here. It is sufficient if we briefly outline its salient aspects. Energy is recognized in two forms, kinetic and potential. The form of energy which is most apparent to us is the energy of motion; for example, a rolling stone, running water, a falling body, and so on. We call the energy of motion kinetic energy. Potential energy is the energy a body has in virtue of its position—it is its capacity, in other words, to acquire kinetic energy, as in the case of a stone resting on the edge of a cliff.

Energy may assume different forms; one kind of energy may be converted directly or indirectly into some other form. The energy of burning coal, for example, is converted into heat, and from heat energy we have mechanical energy, such as that manifested by the steam engine. In this way we can transfer energy from one body to another. There is the energy of the great waterfalls of Niagara, for instance, which are used to supply the energy of huge electric power stations.

What Heat Is

AN important fact about energy is that all energy tends to take the form of heat energy. The impact of a falling stone generates heat; a waterfall is hotter at the bottom than at the top—the falling particles of water, on striking the ground, generate heat; and most chemical changes are attended by heat changes. Energy may remain latent indefinitely in a lump of wood, but in combustion it is liberated, and we have heat as a result. The atom of radium or of any other radio-active substance, as it disintegrates, generates heat. "Every hour radium generates sufficient heat to raise the temperature of its own weight of water from the freezing point to the boiling point." And what is heat? Heat is molecular motion. The molecules of every substance, as we have seen in a previous paragraph, are in a state of continual motion, and the more vigorous the motion the hotter the body. As wood or coal burns, the invisible molecules of these substances are violently agitated, and give rise to ether waves which our senses interpret as light and heat. In this constant movement of the molecules, then, we have a manifestation of the energy of motion and of heat.

That energy which disappears in one form reappears in another has been found to be universally true. It was Joule who, by churning water, first showed that a measurable quantity of mechanical energy could be transformed into a measurable quantity of heat energy. By causing an apparatus to stir water vigorously, that apparatus being driven by falling weights or a rotating flywheel or by any other mechanical means, the water became heated. A certain amount of mechanical energy had been used up and a certain amount of heat had appeared. The relation between these two things was found to be invariable. Every physical change in nature involves a transformation of energy, but the total quantity of energy in the universe remains unaltered. This is the great doctrine of the conservation of energy.

Substitutes for Coal

CONSIDER the source of nearly all the energy which is used in modern civilization—coal. The great forests of the carboniferous epoch now exist as beds of coal. By the burning of coal—a chemical transformation—the heat energy is produced on which at present our whole civilization depends. Whence is the energy locked up in the coal derived? From the sun. For millions of years the energy of the sun's rays had gone to form the vast vegetation of the carboniferous era and had been transformed, by various subtle processes, into the potential energy that slumbers in those immense fossilized forests.

The exhaustion of our coal deposits would mean, so far as our knowledge extends at present, the end of the world's civilization. There are other known sources of energy, it is true. There is the energy of falling water; the great falls of Niagara are used to supply the energy of huge electric power stations. Perhaps, also, something could be done to utilize the energy of the tides—another instance of the energy of moving water. And attempts have been made to utilize directly the energy of the sun's rays. But all these sources of energy are small compared with the energy of coal. A suggestion was made at a recent British association meeting that deep borings might be sunk in order to utilize the internal heat of the earth, but this is not, perhaps, a practical proposal. By far the most effective substitutes for coal would be found in the interior energy of the atom, a source of energy which, as we have seen, is practically illimitable. If the immense electrical energy in the interior of the atom can ever be liberated and controlled, then our steadily decreasing coal supply will no longer be the bugbear it now is to all thoughtful men.

The stored-up energy of the great coal fields can be used up, but we cannot replace it or create fresh supplies. As we have seen, energy cannot be destroyed, but it can become unavailable. Let us consider what this important fact means.

Dissipation of Energy

ENERGY may become dissipated. Where does it go since if it is indestructible it must still exist. It is easier to ask the question than to give a final answer, and it is not possible in this Outline, where an advanced knowledge of physics is not assumed on the part of the reader, to go fully into the somewhat difficult theories put forward by physicists and chemists. We may raise the temperature, say, of iron, until it is white hot. If we stop the process the temperature of the iron will gradually settle down to the temperature of surrounding bodies. As it does so, where does its previous energy go? In some measure it may pass to other bodies in contact with the piece of iron, but ultimately the heat becomes radiated away in space where we cannot follow it. It has been added to the vast reservoir of unavailable heat energy of uniform temperature. It is sufficient here to say that if all bodies had a uniform temperature we should experience no such thing as heat, because heat only travels from one body to another, having the effect of cooling the one and warming the other. In time the two bodies acquire the same temperature. The sum total of the heat in any body is measured in terms of the kinetic energy of its moving molecules.

There must come a time, so far as we can see at present, when, even if all the heat energy of the universe is not radiated away into empty infinite space, yet a uniform temperature will prevail. If one body is hotter than another it radiates heat to that body until both are at the same temperature. Each body may still possess a considerable quantity of heat energy which it has absorbed, but that energy, so far as reactions between those two bodies are concerned, is now unavailable. The same principle applies whatever number of bodies we consider. Before heat energy can be utilized we must have bodies with different temperature. If the whole universe were at some uniform temperature, then, although it might possess an enormous amount of heat energy, this energy would be unavailable.

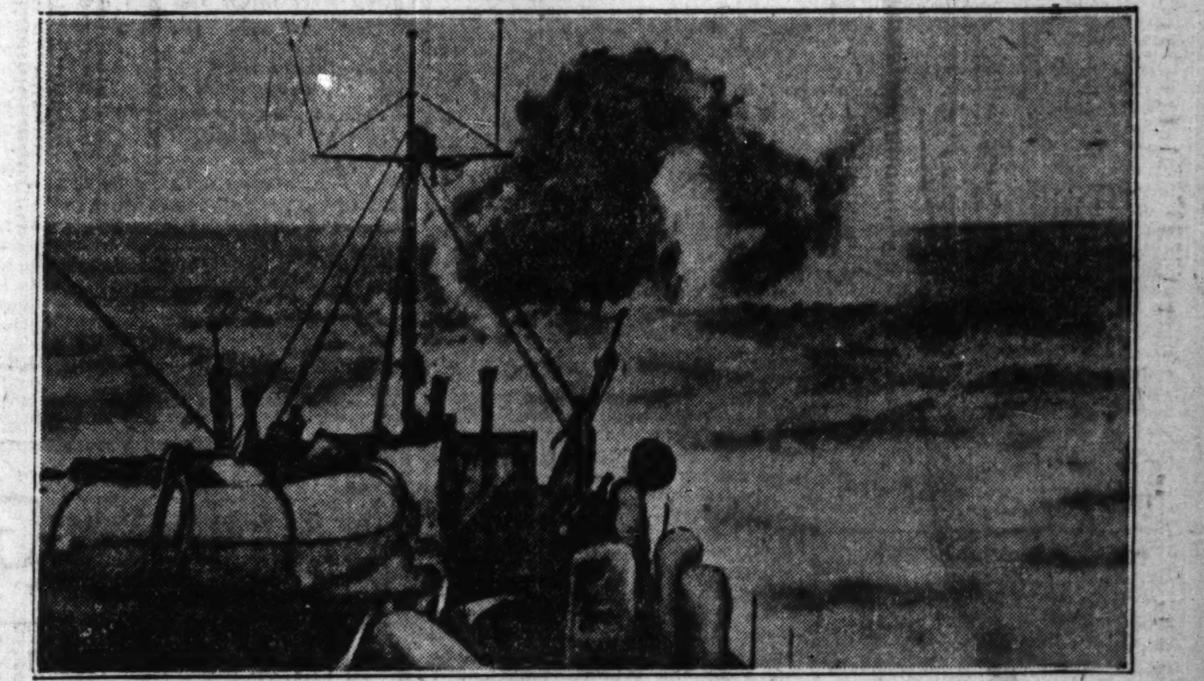
What a Uniform Temperature Would Mean

AND what does this imply? It implies a great deal: for if all the energy in the world became unavailable, the universe, as it now is, would cease to be. It is possible that, by the constant interchange of heat radiations, the whole universe is tending to some uniform temperature, in which case, although all molecular motion would not have ceased, it would have become unavailable. In this sense it may be said that the universe is running down.

If all the molecules of a substance were brought to a standstill, that substance would be at the absolute zero of temperature. There could be nothing colder. The temperature at which all molecular motions would cease is known: it is -273° C. Nobody could possibly attain a lower temperature than this: a lower temperature could not exist. Unless there exists in nature some process, of which we know nothing at present, whereby energy is renewed, our solar system must one day sink to this absolute zero of temperature. The sun, the earth, and every other body in the universe is steadily radiating heat, and this radiation cannot go on forever, because heat continually tends to diffuse and to equalize temperatures.

But we can see, theoretically, that there is a way of evading this law. If the chaotic molecular motions which constitute heat could be regulated, then the heat energy of a body could be utilized directly. Some authorities think that some of the processes which go on in the living body do not involve any waste energy, that the chemical energy of food is transformed directly into work without any of it being dissipated as useless heat energy. It may be, therefore, that man will finally discover some ways of escape from the natural law that, while energy cannot be destroyed, it has a tendency to become unavailable.

The primary reservoir of energy is the atom; it is the energy of the atom, the atom of elements in the sun, the stars, the earth, from which nature draws for all her supply of energy. Shall we ever discover how we can replenish the dwindling resources of energy, or find out how we can call into being the at present unavailable energy which is stored up in uniform temperature?



TRANSFORMATION OF ENERGY.—An illustration of energy. The chemical energy brought into existence by firing the explosive manifesting itself as mechanical energy, sufficient to impart violent motion to tons of water.
[Photo: Stephen Cribb]

It looks as if our successors would witness an interesting race between the progress of science on the one hand and the depletion of natural resources upon the other. The natural rate of flow of energy from its primary atomic reservoirs to the sea of waste heat energy of uniform temperature allows life to proceed at a complete pace sternly regulated by the inexorable laws of supply and demand, which the biologists have recognized in their field as the struggle for existence.[*]

It is certain that energy is an actual entity just as much as matter, and that it cannot be created or destroyed. Matter and ether are receptacles or vehicles of energy. As we have said, what these entities really are in themselves we do not know. It may be that all forms of energy are in some fundamental way aspects of the same primary entity which constitutes matter: how all matter is constituted of particles of electricity we have already seen. The question to which we await an answer is: What is electricity?

Matter, Ether, and Einstein

THE supreme synthesis, the crown of all this progressive conquest of nature, would be to discover that the particles of positive and negative electricity, which make up the atoms of matter, are points or centers of disturbances of some kind in a universal ether, and that all our "energies" (light, magnetism, gravitation, etc.) are waves or strains of some kind set up in the ether by these clusters of electrons.

It is a fascinating, tantalizing dream. Larmor suggested in 1900 that the electron is a tiny whirlpool, or "vortex," in ether; and, as such a vortex may turn in either of two opposite ways, we seem to see a possibility of explaining positive and negative electricity. But the difficulties have proved serious, and the nature of the electron is unknown. A recent view is that it is "a ring of negative electricity rotating about its axis at a high speed," though that does not carry us far. The unit of positive electricity is even less known. We must be content to know the general lines on which thought is moving toward the final unification.

We say "unification," but it would be a grave error to think that ether is the only possible basis for such unity, or to make it an essential part of one's philosophy of the universe. Ether was never more than an imagined entity to which we ascribed the most extraordinary properties, and which seemed then to promise considerable aid. It was conceived as an elastic solid of great density, stretching from end to end of the universe, transmitting waves from star to star at the rate of 186,000 miles a second; yet it was believed that the most solid matter passed through it as if it did not exist.

Some years ago a delicate experiment was tried for the purpose of detecting the ether. Since the earth, in traveling round the sun, must move through the ether if the ether exists, there ought to be a stream of ether flowing through every laboratory; just as the motion of a ship through a still atmosphere will make "a wind." In 1887 Michelson and Morley tried to detect this. Theoretically, a ray of light in the direction of the stream ought to travel at a different rate from a ray of light against the stream or across it. They found no difference, and scores of other experiments have failed. This does not prove that there is no ether, as there is reason to suppose that our instruments would appear to shrink in precisely the same proportion as the alteration of the light; but the fact remains that we have no proof of the existence of ether.

J. H. Jeans says that "nature acts as if no such thing existed." Even the phenomena of light and magnetism, he says, do not imply ether; and he thinks that the hypothesis may be abandoned. The primary reason, of course, for giving up the notion of the ether is that, as Einstein has shown, there is no way of detecting its existence. If there is an ether, then, since the earth is moving through it, there should be some way of detecting this motion. The experiment has been tried, as we have said, but, although the method used was sensitive, no motion was discovered. It is Einstein who, by revolutionizing our conceptions of space and time, showed that no such motion ever could be discovered, whatever means were employed, and that the usual notion of the ether must be abandoned. We shall explain this theory more fully in a later section.

Telling the Critics Where They Detrain

By Frederick Donaghey.

guessed wrong. . . . It is easier to pick the wows at Hawthorne than in the theater.

It is no part of a critic's business to say if a play is to be a wow. It is his business to tell what kind of a play it is, and if it be good or bad by the standards of its classification. The play-reviewer for a newspaper is, when he is anything, a reporter equipped to specialize in the so-called art of the drama. . . . Theater-goers would deprive themselves of a deal of enjoyable entertainment if they refrained from seeing the plays the critics call bad. A reviewer need not feel flattered if the play he calls good be successful. Mr. Davenport lists "Irene," "Lightnin'," "The Lion and the Mouse," "Jack and Jill," "Bought and Paid For," and (of course) "Abie's Irish Rose" among the wows to which the first-night critics were chilly. The first-night critics were right.

And that is the point of importance—that the critic is right, whether the public goes or remains away. His task is not to be clairvoyant, but to be correct. In spite of Mr. Davenport, the chances are that the critics will not be "almost unanimous in their personal opinions." And that is unfortunate; for critics should possess knowledge instead of opinions, and what they write should have the quality of fiat. . . . When I find that Mr. Stevens, or Doctor Hall, or Mr. Collins is not in rapt agreement with my views on a play, I am sorry for him, and seek to find to what extent he is right: i. e., to what extent he is in agreement with me. That but one of us is right in such a case is obvious; and I take a decent delight in knowing that it is I.

Some Recent Wows.

"Abie's Irish Rose" certainly classifies as a wow. If Miss Anne Nichols had submitted the play to me for production, I should have evened the account by turning her over to the police for observation. . . . Another is "Topsy and Eva." If on the night it opened its owners had offered it to me in return for the cost of a taxi from the Selwyn Theater to Tribune Square, I should have preferred the taxi,—and so, I suspect, would everybody else in the first-night audience. . . . "No! No, Nanette!" has been developed into a wow; and, although I liked it in the beginning, I doubted that it would be; and I certainly should not have taken a chance on "The Best People," even as I saw and heard the delighted reactions of its first Chicago patrons.

Au contraire, I would not have risked a dime to wager that the public would not crowd the theater for "Morphia," or for "The Amber Fluid," or for "We Moderns." . . . I had no means of knowing, and, so, was no better off in the matter than the author, the producer, the actor, the ticket-broker, or Mr. McGeehan. And it was none of my essential business to guess at it.

C'Est Vrai! C'Est Vrai!

Here is something else about critics: I ran across it in Robert E. Sherwood's page of last week's Life:

> ". . . It is estimated that 96.8 per cent of the human race is composed of natural-born critics—persons who, at the drop of a hat, would be willing to rush to press with a criticism of anything, from 'Tillie's Punctured Romance' to Sophocles' 'Antigone.'
> "Out of every ten aspirants who apply for work at a newspaper or magazine office, at least ten announce their preference for criticism, and their indisputable qualifications for the critic's position.
> "Nine of the applicants usually are justified in their claims: the other one gets the job."

In the first three months of my novitiate as a reporter for the best newspaper ever published east of THE TRIBUNE, I learned that the drama-critic, a distinguished and literate practitioner, was about to take three months' vacation abroad, and I wrote a note to the managing-editor to urge that I be made the surrogate. I modestly listed my attributes, and subtly hinted that some other desk might be found for the gentleman in the probable case that I should be retained permanently on the chore for which I believed the Creator had especially designed me. The managing-editor's courteous reply informed me that I was the thirty-second member of the staff to ask for the desk in the critic's absence. My count of the staff showed that, including the critic and the managing-editor, it was made up of thirty-four persons.

THIS-AND-THAT

Nothing has been added to or taken from the line-up of Chicago openings as listed in this place last Sunday. . . . The managers say that they don't know about "Seventh Heaven" and "Runnin' Wild"; and even "Rain" seems to be in doubt for the first week in September, when, unless plans be changed again, "No! No, Nanette!" will be out of the Harris. . . . So, as matters stand, it is "Broadway to Dixie," Great Northern, August 10; "Tarnish," the Playhouse, and "Wages for Wives," the Cort, August 17; "The Shame-Woman," Princess, August 23; "Early to Bed," La Salle, and "Meet the Wife!" Cohan's Grand, August 24; "Blossom-Time," the Auditorium, August 31.

Although he is named for the principal rôle in the impending production of "Silence" in New-York, H. B. Warner is going into the two-a-day in a sketch. . . . Miss Pauline Lord says that, if she fare well with a new sketch in the varieties, she will later try a one-act piece of Eugene O'Neill's on the clientèle.

Miss Seena Owen, Miss Flora Finch, and Frank Mayo, all of the movies, are trying their luck in the varieties. . . . The name of "The Horse-Thief" will be changed before it is given in New-York, although the name wasn't the only thing wrong with the play when it was given in Chicago.

It is said that the demand for short plays and shapely sketches, both comic and dramatic, is so great that the magnates of the two-a-day are paying unprecedented royalties for material they regard as good.

A comedy from the German heretofore mentioned in THE TRIBUNE as "My Son the Doctor" is to be known instead as "Doctor David's Dad."

Frank Craven is to experiment in Milwaukee this week with a comedy of his called "Fool's Hill." . . . "The Fall-Guy," in which he acted there two weeks ago, is said to have most of the markings of a success.

THEIR PAST LIES STRAIGHT AHEAD

MISS JANE CHAPIN

MISS MARGARET KENNELLEY

MISS CHAPIN goes tonight into the part of Sadie, the street-walker, in "The Deluge"; and this puts her in direct succession to such somebodies of the stage as Miss Emelie Polini, Miss Kathlene MacDonell, and Miss Pauline Lord. (The Misses Lord and MacDonell were in the respective New-York ventures with this good play.) And here's hoping that Miss Chapin's future will find her name further associated with the acting celebrities! . . . Her biography to-date, so far as it has to do with the theater in Chicago, starts tonight in the Cort.

Miss Kennelley's is even more copious; for she has been for at least a fortnight one of the four bridesmaids in "Abie's Irish Rose." Having no lines to speak, she is as yet ineligible for membership in the Actors' Equity; but she has her hopes, and asks consideration because she is a native of Chicago. . . . It may be added that Miss Kennelley comes rightfully by her position on the stage; for her brother is the vicar and Fides Achates of Mr. Gozzolo, manager of the Studebaker.

Stepping Harshly on the Gas in Canada

By Burns Mantle.

ion. But how are you going to get her back?"

"In the car, we hope," I stammered, feeling a bit goosefleshy beneath what I hoped was a calm, if not a gay exterior.

"You'll have trouble," he said. "They've been fearfully strict since the first of July. Better go back now and explain your case to the immigration office."

"Back to New York?"

"No, back to Rouse's Point."

We cogitated. We even tried to think. Here, we suspected, was a dilemma. We organized a conference. We saw ourselves held up for a week while Tuschia sent for her papers, which she had carefully put somewhere, but didn't know just where. Mother grew red. Tuschia went white. I was blue. Our colors, at least, were 100 per cent American.

Finally we decided to take the chance. We were in the Dominion anyway. Waiting in Montreal would be easier than in Rouse's Point. And more cheering—what with one thing and another. So we went on.

On Our Way.

The rest of the day and far into the night we planned our campaign. At 5 I decided to wire Arthur Henning in Washington to call out the state department. At 6 Tuschia declared she would walk back through the fields. At 7 mother suggested changing jobs with Tuschia. At 8 I thought of wiring my political friends in New York, Forest Hills, Jamaica, and points east. At 10 I decided to dismember the body and pack it in the tire trunk. At 2 we slept—fitfully. In fact, I don't remember ever having slept fitfuller.

With the aid of a guide and a sightseeing bus we got through the next morning. In the cathedral Tuschia said her prayers. So did Peg. "O, Lord—O, gee!" prayed Peg, who can't quite remember all the words, but senses the sentiment.

I went in search of the local immigration offices. It was a daylight saving afternoon and they were closed. So we decided we had better know the worst at once. We would not stay over another night.

Also we would not risk taking any souvenirs from the government liquor store back with us. One crime at a time. Of course, a little stimulation just this side the line would help considerably. But, on the other hand, if—

We drove slowly toward the dreaded investigators. Canada passed us back smilingly. We drove more slowly toward our own beloved country. Peg sang happily on the back seat. "My Country 'tis a thee, let 'dum ring," she shrilled.

We were stopped!

"How many in the party?" demanded a happy little fellow in uniform. We handed him the pass with trembling fingers.

"Four!" we answered. "One——"

"Same four that went through yesterday?"

"Yes. One——"

"All citizens of the United States?"

"Yes. But——"

"All right, sir. Have a nice trip?"

"Great! Thank you! Good-by!" I stepped harshly on the gas. We jerked forward.

Tuschia choked—and laughed. We were on our way. Good old America!

"You certainly tried to tell him," observed my mother. She isn't often sarcastic.

The Police in Session.

We got one laugh out of Montreal. The police convention was being held there. We watched them parade by in 100 automobiles, chiefs and detectives and other crime chasers from all over the world. A hardy, suspicious looking crowd, but proud of their badges.

"Great force, the police," I observed to a native standing by.

"Aye, sir," he agreed. "But did you hear the joke? They are holding an investigation of the force in Montreal—and had to postpone it a week for the convention."

There is a good deal of drinking in Montreal, no doubt. But it seems to be more or less formal. They open the ale houses late and close them long before midnight. American visitors don't quite understand the system. A saloon with them has always been a place to get drunk in, as the only other place open.

There are, they tell me, many hotel room parties with bottles bought before 6. But the Canadians are strongly opposed to group singing after 10 or 11 p. m. That is discouraging to an American celebration. And breaking mirrors is unlucky.

We had dinner in one of the showiest and most popular of the hotel dancing rooms. Well-to-do tourists and convention visitors (the town is always full of convention visitors these days) were buying champagne at $9 the quart and smacking their lips over it. But the most it seemed to be doing to them was to convince the old men they knew all the young steps—a foolish but harmless delusion. And good exercise for hardening arteries. In fourteen hours we did not see a single drunk—on the street or off.

The Universal Art of Forgetting.

We recall a long, new street—Sherwood Crest—on which have been planted young trees. On the frames holding each tree in place a small bronze tablet bearing the name and company of a dead hero of the war. But many of the frames are already broken and unsightly, and the weather has obliterated the names. Even the loyal, grateful, strongly nationalistic Dominionites apparently forget as easily as we do. At that, our own avenue of trees in Forest park at home is better kept. Tablets and trees mean little, however. We don't need them to remember those Canadian boys at Vimy Ridge.

We stopped over at Ausable chasm on the way back to Placid. An impressive bit of the Yosemite cut into the farm land three miles in from Lake Champlain. You walk part of it along shelving rocks and watch the black water swirling down the chasm fifty and sixty feet below. The rest of the way you ride in flat bottomed boats.

"How long have they been taking tourists through here?" another ignorant traveler, seeing New York state first, asked the boatman.

"Couldn't say," responded the boatman. "They were doing it before my time, and I been here forty-four years. And before that the Indians was aworkin' it. . . . Folks, this is the pool the movie folks use for their stunts. That there rock, sixty feet up, is where they pushed Jarvis (?) off the cliff on a white hoss they bought for $5 from a farmer named Akers. Never hurt the hoss a mite, but he fell on Jarvis an' broke his leg. I picked 'em up in this here boat, and when we got down to the landin' the state troopers arrested the whole blamed outfit, includin' me."

"I'm glad it didn't hurt the hoss," said mother. "Hosses have sense."

HE KNOWS HOW

CHARLES WINNINGER

He was put into the principal man's rôle of "No! No, Nanette!" not a minute too soon: his predecessor was a clever chap, but not in this kind of part. And, oddly, Mr. Winninger was engaged for the part about the time the decision was made to put on the old farce of "My Lady-Friends" with tunes and such: delay led to his doing other things that had him occupied when at length the piece was ready for casting. . . . He has done other things here: notably, his good fooling in the two Cohan revues brought to Chicago. In one, he made fun of Leo Ditrichstein in "The Great Lover"; in t'other, of that actor in "The King." . . . "No! No, Nanette!" was good without him: it is far, far better with him.

STAGE-NEWS

John V. A. Weaver's first play, "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," doesn't look so good to those who have observed it in an eastern try-out. . . . Miss Gertrude Bryan, not known out this way, is the star.

Announcement is made that the Phœnix Society's company is to be brought over from London this season for a tour in plays of the Elizabethan period and of the Restoration; and the difficulty is that there is no such company. . . . The Phœnix is an admirable organization which gives special performances by casts made up of good actors engaged specially for a revival. The plays are given Sunday night and sometimes repeated in an afternoon when the players are not needed in the regular theaters: much as if one were to organize a cast in Chicago this week with Miss Mary Newcomb, Lowell Sherman, Charles Winninger, Robert E. O'Connor, and Miss Olive Tell, and give the play in the afternoons when there is no matinée in their respective houses. . . . However, the Phœnix in its activities puts on many a rare work.

The producer of "Kelly's Vacation" has changed his mind about trying the play in New-York just now. . . . "Lingerie Lunacy," the play by Willard Mack now named as the next piece for Lowell Sherman, is said to be serious in theme, despite the farcical suggestion of its title.

"The Swan," one of the plays closed in New-York by the Equity's strike on June 1, is to be put on there again for a few weeks before it is sent on tour. . . . Miss Eva Le Gallienne is to remain in it; but somebody else than Philip Merivale will have the important part he acted last season.

Miss Peggy Wood, an actress held in high esteem by the Manhattan reviewers, is to assist in Cincinnati at the première of a piece called "Three Roses." . . . It is by Mrs. Anne Bradley, who wrote "The Governor's Lady," in which Miss Emma Dunn and Emmett Corrigan once acted together for Mr. Belasco.

"The Red Hawk," which has been tried out in small places, is to be one of the three plays of his which George Broadhurst will put on this season. . . . The first, however, will be "Izzy," made from the Chesters' stories called "On the Lot, and Off."

"White Cargo," which has been running a long time in New-York, is said to be booked in succession to "Wages for Wives" in the Cort, although the engagement of the latter is for an indefinite term, depending on its draw. . . . Leon Gordon, the author of "White Cargo," says he has written another, "The Helt." Also, that "White Cargo" is a success in London, in spite of the changes made at the order of the play-censor, and that he will put on his "Garden of Lies" there, although it was a quick flivver in New-York.

Lady Diana Manners is telling the London reporters that she is coming back to play the Madonna in "The Miracle." . . . And it is now said that "The Miracle," to be restored in New-York the coming month, will be kept there until mid-November. . . . It is expectation that the spectacle will be shown in the Auditorium right after the season of the Chicago Opera.

Carpentier, who may be regarded as all through in his capacity as a fighter, so far as this country is concerned,—is mentioned as a possible celebrity in the next Music-Box Revue. . . . And William A. Brady liked "The Awful Mrs. Eaton" so much in its Detroit try-out, two weeks ago, that he is assembling a cast to do the piece in New-York. It is the play about Andrew Jackson and Peggy O'Neal written by John Farrar and Stephen Vincent Benet, editors of the Bookman.

The anti-Equity producers think they have found a way to go ahead by making up their casts on a basis of what they call "open shop," in the belief that few of the rank-and-file actors will do without employment for the sake of standing by their union, and that the Equity, in turn, will hardly care to assume responsibility for keeping actors out of employment by refusing permission for them to appear with the die-hard managers.

hohe Lied," and Sudermann himself didn't quite prove that it was the quest for a perfect love that sent the girl through such degrees of degradation. Your ideals may go WITH you to the gutter, but they don't TAKE you there! (It's Sunday, so forgive the moralizing!)

You see the wonderfully flaming creature Pola makes of the girl, though it isn't a sympathetic part. Every emotion is genuine; every instant is real. But the whole isn't. After all, character is something more than the sum of emotions; truth isn't just adding scenes.

Ben Lyon (you remember him in "The White Moth"?) makes a charming lover; one of those careless, debonair, weak men, always in debt, always in love. (He's a regular Ouida hero—if you remember Ouida!) The colonel is played with skill and is NOT overdone—which would have been so easy.

The photography is superior, and the effect something to marvel at. They say it was filmed right out at Hollywood, but you'll swear it's Germany! Army officers, smart and gay; drinking bouts; wine that flows at—and without!—any pretext; a duel at daybreak—even the Hotel Adlon! There's enough foreign flavor for a dozen continental dramas. And enough plot for 'steen emotional crises.

Enough of everything—except opportunity for Pola!

Voice of the Fan

You're Quite Right.

Dear Miss Tinée: I seem to be getting to be a repeater.

Miss Dorothy Mackaill has probably had more space in your column, first and last, this season than any other player. I fail to see why she should stir either wild enthusiasm or bitter antipathy. But however good she may be, he is no friend of hers who suggests her for a rôle for which she is so eminently unsuited as Peter Pan.

This rôle demands a highly unusual combination of qualities: diminutive stature, childlike earnestness, a nice sense of delicacy of shading, and, above all, the sure possession of that vague but real thing—the fairy spirit. In all the history of the movie there have been only two persons who could do it properly—Marguerite Clark and May McAvoy. Miss Clark has left the screen, and, though she might, conceivably, be lured back by such a bait, it seems unnecessary to try it, especially in view of the fact that Miss McAvoy is, from every vantage point, so much finer an artiste. You remember "Sentimental Tommy": you know what she can do with Barrie. "The Enchanted Cottage" is still with us, and did you ever see a subtler, more beautifully shaded piece of work?

Miss Pickford, it seems to me, ought not to do it. It may be wrong, but it seems to me that her rich humanity is too pervasive, in all she does, to permit her to essay so unearthly a rôle.

I understand Gloria Swanson wants it. About that there is nothing to do except pray. If I thought there was any prospect of her getting it, I should be willing to compromise on Ernest Torrence, or Evelyn Nesbit, or Lucille La Verne, or "Teddy"—or anybody!

E. C. W.

Amen! To the Gloria part, that is. What about it, fans?

Calm Yourself, Maggie.

Dear Mae Tineé: Well, here I am, mad as a hornet at R. W. B. for even daring to suggest that wishy washy Dorothy Mackaill to portray Peter Pan. Pan is so dear to my heart that I firmly believe he sits and pipes elfish, delightful music for the fairies!. Then to think of having this clinging vineish person portray the delightfully enchanting and fascinating little creature—bah! Yours on the warpath,

MAGGIE.

Well, well, Maggie, we won't let Dorothy do it then. You have a vote of your own. Who shall it be?

KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT—OBJECTION.

Not a Bad Idea.

Dear Mae Tinée: I have always been more or less unconvinced as to the verity of various and sundry statisticians' opinions regarding the mental capacity of movie fans. But I'm converted.

The other night, while enjoying "The Enchanted Cottage," at the point where the transformation, in each other's eyes, takes place, a woman behind me said, "Look, he ain't crippled no more. What's the idea? I don't get this at all."

"Yeh," said her escort, "'n' she was homely as a mud fence before, but look at her now. It's by me, too."

If these two are samples of the average patrons of movie houses, I agree with the statisticians. Use your influence to persuade the producers to insert explanatory subtitles at obscure points, or else film bedtime stories, which might be understood by these mentally deficient movie fans.

A. A.

What could be sweeter! Bedtime stories with radio attachment! Don't they ask "dumb" ones, though? Next time you move.

Simply Can't Imagine.

Dear Mae Tinée: You may say I holler before I am hurt. If I had not read and enjoyed "So Big," I would not holler now—but I cannot imagine Colleen Moore playing Edna Ferber's heroine. She works in the fields like a man and is one of the finest types of American womanhood, the mother of a grown son before the story ends, and the part calls for heavy, strong, emotional acting.

Irene Rich is the type I would like to see in the part. If the perfect flapper makes a go of this picture, I'm through voicing my sentiments forever.

Edna Ferber deserves the best support in the screen version of this—her best and highly successful novel.

L. H.

We feel exactly the same way! It wouldn't surprise us at all to learn that Ben Turpin is co-starring with Baby Peggy in "Helen's Babies," or that Walter Hiers is going to do "Peter Pan." We're prepared for anything. Still, Colleen may grow up—but who wants her to?

Mr. Eckstein Sheds Light Upon Mystery

By Edward Moore.

With the cry, "Mother, you are avenged," Azucena falls dead at the feet of Di Luna.

"The Elixir of Love," by Donizetti, is the second of the newcomers, another of the operatic evergreens, but one where tunes are turned in the direction of comedy instead of gore. It is a story of the peasantry in which Nemorino, a young peasant, is in love with Adina, a wealthy girl. She is also sought by Belcore, a sergeant, who is more persistent than the bashful Nemorino. There comes to the village Dulcamara, the first of the medicine show doctors, who claims to have a potion which will work with magic charm in all cases of love. Nemorino buys the potion and drinks it. It is in reality a bottle of wine and it makes him drunk. He flirts with the girls of the village, but treats Adina so coldly that her interest is intrigued, even as she pretends to yield to the suit of Belcore.

There is a wedding feast, but Adina refuses to sign the marriage contract. Nemorino does not know this, however, and in his despair he enlists in the army. Then comes word that his rich uncle has died and that he is his sole heir. The village girls besiege Nemorino, who believes the love potion is taking effect. But Adina really loves Nemorino, and purchases his release from the army as proof of her love, and all ends happily.

Telling a Weird Story.

Then there is "The Tales of Hoffman," fantastic opera, based on a series of stories by a German poet, whose name is in the title, and who claimed they were autobiographical. In the opera three of his love adventures are related, beginning with his affair with Olympia, supposed to be the daughter of Spalanzani, a mechanical genius. He is inspired by Coppelius, a sinister person symbolizing the spirit of evil. Hoffman learns that Olympia is not a woman, but a mechanical doll.

Then comes his affair with Giulietta, a courtesan, who beguiles him, only to leave him in the hands of his enemies. The third episode concerns Antonia, a singer who is under the spell of Dr. Miracle, again symbolizing the evil spirit. Antonia is fading away, and her father forbids her to sing, but Dr. Miracle causes the spirit of Antonia's dead mother to arise and bid her to sing. As she does so, she falls dead.

The spirit of evil pervades this story in three guises and always triumphs. As originally written, Olympia, Giulietta, and Antonia were impersonated by the same singer, but this custom is no longer followed.

"Lakme"—the Delightful.

Finally comes Delibes' "Lakme," with the best constructed plot and the most delightful music of all. Gerald, a young English officer, wanders into the forbidden precincts of a Hindu temple where Nilakantha presides as priest, assisted by his daughter, Lakme. Nilakantha hates the English and regards their intrusion as sacrilege. Learning this, Gerald's friends, who have accompanied him, leave, but Gerald lingers behind to sketch some sacred jewels. He is discovered by Lakme, and the two fall in love. Nilakantha and his followers return to the temple, but Lakme has saved Gerald from their wrath by sending him away.

However, Nilakantha discovers that intruders have been there, and in his blind hatred starts in pursuit. He disguises himself as a beggar and haunts the market place of the neighboring city. He forces Lakme to sing in the streets, hoping thus to entrap the young officer he seeks. His plan succeeds, and he goes to summon his followers, but Lakme succeeds in warning Gerald and inducing him to flee with her to a secret place in the forest. Before he can do so he is stabbed by Nilakantha who, believing he has killed Gerald, makes his escape.

Lakme takes the wounded Gerald to the forest, where he recovers, and the lovers are happy together. However, Frederick, a brother officer, traces Gerald and follows him to the forest. He tells Gerald his services are needed with the troops. Lakme senses the situation and bids Gerald good-by, eats the leaves of a poisonous plant, and dies in Gerald's arms.

High Lights of the Week.

Ravinia is now crossing its summer meridian. A glance at the schedule in another column will indicate that the first week of its second half has casts quite up to the Ravinia standard, which means a higher one than is to be found in any other opera house on earth. Miss Easton, in addition to her "Il Trovatore" appearance, will sing the chief part in "Madama Butterfly" tonight. Mr. Martinelli, her tenor partner in "Il Trovatore," will sing in "Lakme" on Saturday night and in "L'Amore dei Tre Re" on Thursday night. Do not forget the "L'Amore" night, by the way, because, in addition to Mr. Martinelli, it will have Lucrezia Bori, greatest of the Fioras.

Mr. Lauri-Volpi has "Madama Butterfly" and "L'Elisir d'Amore" as his assignments, Miss Pareto "L'Elisir" and "Lakme" for hers. Miss Bourskaya sings frequently throughout the week. Tomorrow night's orchestra concert will present Miss Maxwell and Mr. Rothier as soloists. The Thursday afternoon children's concert is specially featured because it will be followed by the annual Carnival day circus, the same to consist of parade and ring performance by the north shore children and those of the Children's Civic Theater of Chicago. Bertha M. Iles is the director.

Here and There in Music.

Jan Chiapusso, the pianist, will give a recital at Bush conservatory tomorrow night. Beethoven, Brahms, Schubert, Chopin, and a group of modern Russian and modern French composers will appear on his program.

Esther Payne, pianist, will be the assisting soloist at the twin organ recital to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford at the Chicago theater this noon.

Among others who will ask for your kind applause during the coming season is Alexander Brailowsky, a Russian pianist, who will visit this country for the first time. He is twenty-seven years old, and they say in Europe that he is good, not that this means anything in particular for America. They say it about all of them.

Millikin university at Decatur plans a recital course for the 1924-'25 season with Jascha Heifetz, the violinist, Louise Homer, the contralto, and Allan McQuhae, the tenor, as its reasons for attendance.

Alma Gluck, in her time the occasion of about as many records being sold as any of them, plans a return to the concert platform. The last time she appeared in Chicago was in February, 1921.

Anna Pavlowa sends word that on her forthcoming tour she will have both Laurent Novikoff and Alexander Volinin. Both have appeared with her in this country, but never at the same time. Both were promised for last season, though only Novikoff appeared. This time she says she will make the promise stick.

Much is being made of the fact that Elvira di Hidalgo, the Spanish coloratura, will sing with both the Chicago and the Metropolitan opera companies next season, but no one seems to have remembered that she has been here before. It was a long time ago, 1910 to be exact, when she sang Rosina in "The Barber of Seville" when the Metropolitan made its last visit to the Auditorium. At that time she was young and talented, quite so in both categories.

The Metropolitan, it is said, seeks to lengthen its season, not in New York, but by making a more extensive spring tour than it has been in the habit of making. Rochester, Detroit, and Chattanooga are the communities that may be added to a list that heretofore has included Atlanta and Cleveland.

It would seem that some one cabled Italo Montemezzi the other night that Ravinia's performance of "L'Amore dei Tre Re" was a performance with more merits to it than is customary. At any rate, the composer cabled this to Conductor Gennaro Papi:

"Infinitely grateful to you, Eckstein, artists, orchestra, and all collaborators. Appreciate your artistic success and fidelity 'L'Amore dei Tre Re.' Montemezzi."

Another Sistine Chapel choir will tour the country next season. This time it will consist of twelve singers selected from St. John of the Lateran, St. Mary the Major, St. Peter's, and the Sistine chapel of the Vatican. A pianist and organist will also be present. In addition to the works of Palestrina and traditional sacred numbers, the programs will include operatic selections and folk music from southern Italy.

An addition to the tenor ranks of the Chicago Civic Opera company has been made by the engagement of Antonio Cortis. He is Spanish, thirty years old, has sung in the principal opera houses of Italy and Spain, also Central America, and the press department says he is slim.

OF MANY ROLES

GIOVANNI MARTINELLI.

[Bernie Photo.]

Apparently the task of singing many tenor rôles rests lightly on the shoulders of this famous artist. He will be heard three times during the present week at Ravinia: as Manrico in "Il Trovatore," on Tuesday night; as Avito in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," on Thursday night, and as Gerald in "Lakme," on Saturday night.

Cupid Slings Arrows Widely in Hollywood

By Grace Kingsley.

joining other parties. They were together at the Cocoanut Grove last Movie night—in fact, it was Viola Dana and Monte Blue night—and Miss Dana—Monte's Miss Dana—wore violet and pink chiffon.

Among Those Present.

Also at the Cocoanut Grove that evening were Priscilla Dean and Al Christie in a large party. Priscilla looked sweet in an ashes of roses chiffon dinner dress.

Viola Dana wore white chiffon trimmed in brilliants, and flirted quite naughtily with a champion golf player from New Orleans—one of those fascinating southern athletes who add the lure of gallantry to that of brawn.

Jackie Saunders is creating quite a scandal by stepping out all the time these days with her ex-husband, E. D. Horkheimer. She wore white chiffon trimmed with brilliants and ostrich feathers.

Edna Purviance was there, wearing the funniest bob in captivity—or out of it—in fact, it didn't look as though it could be kept in captivity. It was a close clip nearly to the crown of her head.

The Comedy Kids from the Hal Roach studios were present at a table all by themselves and didn't behave at all as they do in pictures. It is said the tots were so disappointed at not getting a chance to go on tour after it had been all arranged that they require to be kept in good humor with picnics and parties.

Aileen Pringle was there with a party. She was dressed in white, trimmed in brilliants.

If Frank Mayo ever finds out whether he is married at all, and if so, to whom—so that he can get a divorce from her—he will probably announce his engagement to Peggy Brown, a pretty ex-Follies girl. Peggy is in New York now, so Frank is lonely. He went with Ward Crane and a couple of other men to the Cocoanut Grove the other night.

A Battle of Words.

It has come to light that one of the sources of difficulty between Jack Gilbert and Elinor Glyn is that one day in course of argument Mrs. Glyn declared to Jack "artists shouldn't have children."

That angered Jack, as his wife, Leatrice Joy, is about to become a mother.

Jack reminded Mrs. Glyn, "Well, you had children, didn't you? And grandchildren, too."

SEIZED PATENTS HELD NEW PERIL TO RADIO GAME

Independents' Fate Seen in U. S. Course.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

Next month is expected to witness announcements of a number of "new" radio circuits, insofar as improvements on existing circuits may be classified as new. Several such announcements, it is understood, have been held up by independent manufacturers of radio apparatus pending examination by experts into the chaotic patent situation.

GEORGE A. PEARSON. [Moffett Photo.]

Radio patents, with the exception of tubes, have had little effect on the manufacturing situation in the last couple of years because of the fact that only a very few really basic patents are obtained, or, if operative, are in private hands.

Super-Het Bane of Contention.

In the matter of the super-heterodyne, the anomalous situation that obtains generally in radio is emphasized particularly. About the time that it began to be bruited far and wide that the super-het was the one development the Radio Corporation of America intended to guard with all legal forces at its command, the government, represented by the secretary of the navy, came forth with a statement that it regarded super-het patents as its very own, Maj. Edwin Armstrong and Harry Houck's claims to the contrary notwithstanding, it having been developed during the army life of these gentlemen. This gave new impetus to experimentation and research in many manufacturers' laboratories, in belief that the government would permit general use by manufacturers for the public benefit of basic patents owned by it. However, no definite step to press its claims has been made by the government, although these are expected at any time. In the meantime, many manufacturers are going ahead with super-het "makings," while others with a finished product in mind are awaiting developments. ments.

See Peril In Seized Patents.

But the open market in radio, by which the public has benefited in better and cheaper radio sets and parts, faces one peril, according to a view expressed in a statement by George A. Pearson, president of the Electrical Research laboratories, and held by many independents. This is in the disposition to be made by the government, through congressional action, of alien patents seized during the war. Most of these, held by the navy, are German, affect reflex and radio frequency principles and are basic.

"With the next administration," Mr. Pearson's statement reads, "will rest disposal of these patents. They can be turned back to their original owners, they can be licensed for use by one American corporation or they can be thrown open to the general use of the people of the United States. If they are returned to the original patentees, they will immediately become the property of the German radio trust, which, in turn, will allow their use by only one large American corporation. The same result would be obtained if they were turned directly by the navy to the same American corporation.

Urges Place In Campaign.

"If these patents are licensed by the navy for the free use of all Americans this action would have the effect of preventing monopoly, in keeping down prices by stimulating legitimate competition and would redound to the benefit of the consumer."

Mr. Pearson expresses the belief that the voters themselves should inject into the presidental campaign the issues of freedom of the air and freedom of seized patents, and should sound out the views of candidates for high offices, especially aspirants for congressional seats, on these two subjects.

"Radio," Mr. Pearson says, "is going to play a much more important part in the forthcoming presidental election than even the most astute politicians realize. The radio listeners, to the number of anywhere from ten to twenty millions, are not only going to absorb a lot of their political knowledge from the air, but they are going even deeper into the situation, unless I am greatly mistaken.

"The average radio fan knows right now that upon the next administration in Washington depends his satisfactory economical radio reception. Upon the next administration depends whether or not the consumer is going to be gouged from several different directions by a monopoly or whether the consumer is going to be protected by a free and open market in radio.

Warns of "Super Chain."

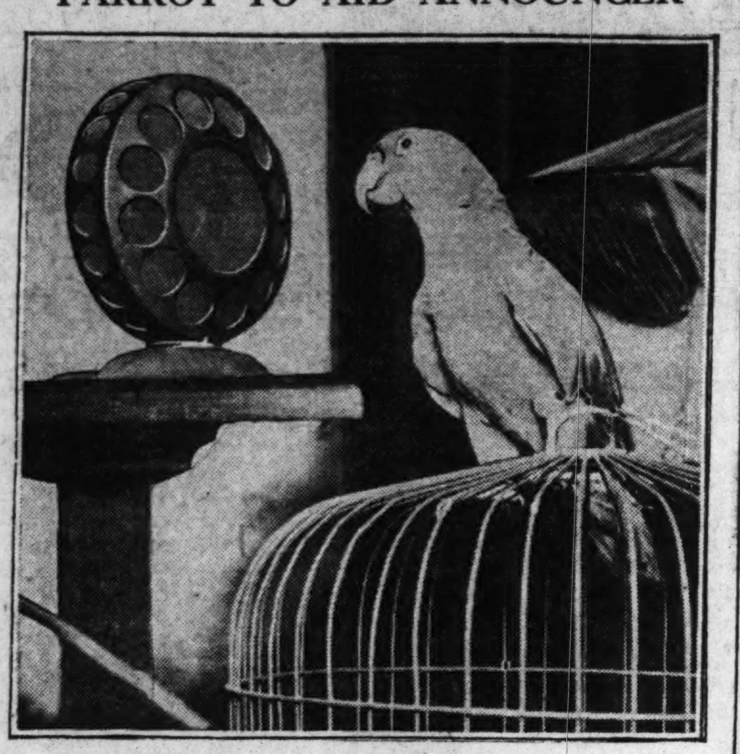
"Already a movement is under way to establish, under direction of a purely-for-profit corporation, a super-broadcasting system of ten stations which would blanket the entire United States and drown out practically all local stations which are now giving such wonderful service to the listener.

"If the radio fan is going to be compelled to accept just the kind of broadcasting that any one corporation wishes him to have, it will not be long before there will be few listeners. Just consider for a moment the kind of political speeches the listener would get if all these speeches were censored by a controlling corporation which would be seeking at all times to increase its own prosperity."

KDKA Concert in Spanish Is Heard in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, July 26.—Messages in Spanish from KDKA, East Pittsburgh, Tuesday night, were heard clearly by many radioans in the Argentina.

PARROT TO AID ANNOUNCER



"Static," a double yellow headed Mexican parrot, has been installed as mascot at WLS of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. "Static" probably is the first parrot in the world to take up a radio career. "Static," it is understood, is to assist "Smoky" the duck in entertaining the 3,000 Lullaby club members.

NEWS OF THE RADIOCASTS

What is believed to be the first news radiocast of a famous court trial is being carried on by W-G-N (formerly WDAP), THE TRIBUNE's station at the Drake hotel. Bulletins telling of the progress of the hearing are placed on the air at frequent intervals throughout the day. The service will be continued until the end of the trial.

WTL is the latest radiocast to take its place among Chicago stations, and is expected to begin its regular schedule on Tuesday. It will be operated by the H. G. Saal company and is located on the Webster hotel. Len Brosseau is program director and announcer.

Utilizing a wave of 268 meters, WTL will be on the air Tuesdays and Saturdays from noon to 1 p. m. and five nights of the week—Sunday and Monday excepted—from 10 to midnight.

Plans are said to be under way to remodel Radiocast WCBD, Zion, with the idea in view that only the super-stations will survive when the government takes the radio situation in hand. Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of the Christian Apostolic Catholic church, is said to have already contracted for remodeling of WCBD, with a view of making it a five kilowatt station, with a range of 7,500 miles. The additional cost is expected to reach $50,000.

From WHN tomorrow night at 8:50 p. m. Charles L. Ragot, who has developed the faculty of controlling voice and whistle simultaneously, will render duets by himself.

The fourth Spanish concert for Central and South America will be radiocast from KDKA Thursday at 8 p. m.

* *

New York's Third avenue railway system opened a radiocast last Friday night. The call letters are WEBJ and the wave length 273 meters. The station will radiocast twice a week from 6 to 8 p. m.

* *

Beginning Tuesday night and on each succeeding Tuesday night for a period of ten weeks, WBZ, Springfield, Mass., will radiocast a series of one act plays. "Alias Irish Tessie" is due Tuesday night.

Two new radiocasts are planned for Nashville, Tenn. It is reported that one will be operated by Fisk university and the other by a large insurance company.

On Thursday, at 3 p. m. and 8 p. m., the Atlantic City control station of WIP, Philadelphia, will broadcast from the bottom of the Atlantic. A deep sea diver, with a microphone connected by lead cable to the boat, and from there to remote control station of WIP on the Steel pier, inside his helmet, will describe what is going on under the water.

A pianist of considerable note, George Vause, famous through his direction of the Federation Radio choir, will broadcast a recital from WEAF Thursday evening.

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—A survey by the department of commerce shows that the number of radiocasts in the United States on July 1 totaled 534. This is 55 less than the number in operation June 1, and 39 less than July 1, 1923. Of the stations which stopped broadcasting 53 were in class A and 29 in class C. No class B stations ceased to broadcast.

Today there are 54 class B stations, an increase of 12 over June 1. There are also 377 class A stations, 101 C, and 2 in the experimental class D still operating.

The peak of radiocasting was reached May 1, 1923, totaling 592 stations. On June 1, 1924, there were 589 stations.

W-G-N [formerly WDAP], THE TRIBUNE's radiocast at the Drake hotel, expects great results from its new antenna. Installation was made during last week-end under the supervision of Elliot Jenkins, station engineer. He removed the former antenna, consisting of four cages which ran from the mast in the center of the hotel roof almost to the four masts on the roof corners.

These cages were replaced by single cables consisting of ⅜ inch hemp rope over which had been braided a great many strands of fine enameled copper wire. At the further ends of the four cables were placed large copper spheres to prevent any chance of brush discharge or corona.

Mr. Jenkins explains that the reason for this type of cable, believed to be unique in Chicago radio usage, is that it has an extremely large space of copper, while the actual amount of copper involved is far less.

Although not complete in tuning, Mr. Jenkins' tests have shown the new antenna to be superior to the one it replaced. W-G-N listeners are urged to let the station know how the antenna has affected reception.

An experimental station at Chelmsford, England, using the call 5XX is radiocasting tests daily from 6:30 to 7:30 a. m., 11:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., 2:30 to 3:30 p. m., eastern daylight savings time. The output is 40 amperes in a 400 foot aerial. Various wave lengths are used in the tests.

Schenectady, N. Y.—WGY, General Electric Company, on Thursday radiocast its regular program on a wave length of 15.85 meters, said to be the shortest wave length ever used by any radiocast in this country.

While the program was going out on this short wave it was also radiocast simultaneously on two other wave lengths and this is believed to be the first time that any station has sent the same program out on three distinct wave lengths at the same time.

The 16 meter wave length will continue to be used by WGY to demonstrate the greater advantage of the short waves. Particular attention will be given to the afternoon programs, as it is believed the short waves are more reliable, will improve daylight radiocasting and perhaps make signals constant twenty-four hours of the day. Under ordinary wave lengths programs are heard much greater distances at night than during daylight hours.

Under the new arrangement all programs from WGY will now be broadcast on 380 meters, either 60 or 107 meters, and on 15.85 meters simultaneously.

MAKE YOUR TWO-GRID TUBE IF YOU MUST PLAY WITH SOLODYNE

BY EXPERIMENTER.

Radio Pengineers are just now going into literary ecstasies over the Soldyne circuit (known in England as Unidyne), which received initial attention in the west nearly two months ago from THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. The Pengineers are so anxious to put over the idea of the four-element tube that they have indulged in columns of literature on how to make it work on a three-element tube. It may be done, brother home experimenter, but it's a heck of a sight easier to do it in type than it is to do it with wire and things to lead the wires to and from.

If you must play with the four-element tube—which you can't this week, at least—tack on another element to your present tube or tubes, and you will get something approaching results. It won't, in the ordinary case, be anything that will cause you to scurry over to your neighbors to invite 'em to comenlissen; but it will be better than worrying, after the hook-up, as to which piece of apparatus is at fault.

To make your own four-element tube cut a piece of copper foil the size of the plate of your tube, solder to it No. 22 or 24 wire long enough for your plate lead, and call this your plate, when you have found some convenient way to make it stay in place around the tube, so that it will cover the original plate's area. The original plate lead should be made the "outer grid" lead, while the grid itself will become the inner grid lead. You can hear over that, at least; using the three-element tube alone the chances are the best you ever will be able to do is to swear over it.

To avoid trouble from power lines and local electrical machinery one ingenious French amateur has devised an interesting scheme of antenna connections which has received the approval of the engineering staff of the Radio Revue, a French technical publication.

The principle consists in connecting the free end of the usual horizonal antenna to a ground. This connection should be made by a wire large enough to have practically no resistance. With the ground connection itself the average resistance should be not more than forty ohms.

The other end of the antenna is connected to the receiving set and thence to the ground in the usual fashion. At this end also the total antenna to ground resistance should be low, preferably not more than eighty ohms. The ground connections themselves must be efficient ones, made preferably by burying zinc or aluminum plates about a yard square and about four feet under ground.

If possible the ground plates should be placed where the soil is continually moist, even in summer. If it is unavoidable to place the ground plates in dry earth they may be buried in beds of coke, which should be wet down by the garden hose every so often. In this case a larger piece of metal should be used.

In ordinarily moist soil the dimensions of one square yard, mentioned above, will produce very good results, and under these conditions it is not necessary to make any measure of the resistance of the ground. Otherwise, if the resistance of the ground is more than eighty ohms, the mounting will have little effect in eliminating parasitic interference.

400 AT B. L. A. MEETING HEAR STARS OF RADIO

Also Talks on Strides of National Body.

Spread of the American Radio association over the United States, and its mission of guarding the personal radio interests of its members in Washington against untoward legislation, as well as lightening their interference burden, were emphasized last night before the open meeting of the Broadcast Listeners' association, the Chicago organization of listeners-in, with headquarters at 6240 Cottage Grove avenue. The open meeting last night, as on every Friday night, was in Hamilton park field house, 72d street and Normal boulevard. Four hundred were in attendance.

Boosts A. R. A. on Air.

Frank H. McDonald, who is president of the B. L. A., which recently voted affiliation with the A. R. A., with headquarters at 50 Union square, New York City, and who is a member of Mayor Dever's radio commission, and Charles H. Porter, secretary of the commission, gave some attention to the cause of the B. L. A. and the A. R. A. in their addresses. Added to this, Mr. McDonald made an appeal for organization of the listeners-in in a vigorous address over WLS Thursday night. Others who spoke on the B. L. A. program Friday night were Ernest Reichmann, Mr. Edelson of the M. & E. Booking agency, who assured the B. L. A. of continued appearance in person of radio artists at the open meetings, and Harry Shotwell of the Operadio corporation.

Radio artists who entertained were Sally Menkes of KYW, Bobby Brown, who has appeared frequently at W-G-N, and Harold Morava.

Radio Association Meets.

The meeting Thursday evening of the Chicago Radio association at Ogden park field house, another organization of radioans, also was largely attended. Entertainment features by radio artists, technical talks and questions and answers on radio subjects featured the gathering.

IF YOU HAVE A PET RADIO PLAINT SHOOT IT ALONG!

Grievances seem to be edging their way all along the line in receiving circles the country over with seldom a chance of the one nursing a pet plaint being able to register it. If you don't like something on the air, you can either tune it out, or quit listening; but you can't talk back.

In order to provide a forum for those who are nursing plaints or suggestions, THE TRIBUNE will open a "Radio Talk Back" column, in which the eltters considered of the most general interest will be printed each Sunday.

"Talk Back" communications which fail of acceptance will not be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed stamped envelopes.

HERE'S A RADIO THAT ACTUALLY AIDS YOU TO SAVE YOUR MONEY

Radio and money spending are supposed to be such confirmed pals that it is with a sense of pained surprise that one which actually helps you to save you money, and which doesn't cost anything if you do save your money, was found to exist. It is in the form of a crystal set as the top story and a savings bank as the story below the top story. You listen with the top story and save your money in the basement. When the basement becomes flooded with coin, you divorce it from the top story, on the roof of which you continue to adjust the cat's whisker while the family hastens to the bank to deposit the accumulations inspired by listening in.

This apparatus, a crystal set with a range of forty miles under good conditions, is known as the Radi-O-Bank and is being distributed to customers by the Harris Trust and Savings bank. It is the mechanical product of the Cherington Radio laboratories, Waukegan, and is a good job electrically as well as mechanically.

Freakish Week Finds Dialog Tuning Coast

Monday Fine at Noon, but Awful at Night.

Despite a freakish week that found Chicago one night cut off from the outside radiocast world, except for Zion and Elgin, we managed to extend our summer area, and on Thursday after midnight brought in KPO—very weakly—convincing us that it will not be long before we shall, on good nights, be able to reach out 2,000 miles. It was hard hearing KPO in the horn, and it would not be fair to list it as part of a concert, unless we could key our imagination to the point of believing that static forms a sort of a rum-ta-ta, boom-ta-rum-boom accompaniment in "the music of the spheres." Too much good music over the air, however, has dulled our imagination. Time was when we could listen somewhat more than tolerantly to near-discord; but no more.

Static Strong Early.

In early evening Thursday static measured very close to signal strength on KDKA, and it took continuous minor shifts of the dials to understand the radiocast of the Tunney-Carpentier argument. It was close to midnight before we tuned in again. Static still remained, but signal strength had increased to such degree that it was easy to clear up most stations brought in. WFAA, Dallas, strong enough, supplied music from 12:10 a. m. to 12:23, after which WHB filled the house with conversation leading up to signing off at 12:24.

On the lower waves we found some distant radiocast, with music rising clear above rumbling trains of static, but before we could log the point of emanation WDBY burst in with a test program of piano music.

Next came KPO, dimly, after which we sought KHJ and found the test idea had spread to W-G-N. No luck in hunting for KFI and KGW, Los Anglese and Portland, Ore., respectively, and at 12:50 we turned to the Nighthawks' frolic at WDAF, coming as strong as Davenport and St. Louis in the recent weeks, radiocasting from the Newman theater. At 1 a. m. we listened to Dallas signing off, after which, with W-G-N still at test, we gently removed the clip from the minus post on the A battery and gave the household a chance to return to sleep, while we devoted a moment to wondering why night tests are not deferred until 3 a. m. daylight savings time and 2 a. m. standard.

Monday Good By Day.

Monday already has been wept over by Elmer, and doubtless many an experimentally inclined fan let that night inveigle him into some wiring gymnastics due to a belief that his set had gone wrong; but one thing that was overlooked possibly by many was the condition existing during the day.

If Monday night was abominable from a radio standpoint, Monday from noon to 3 o'clock was remarkable. At noon WWJ, with its afternon concert, spouted from the horn with a clarity and volume that made it enjoyable [until it was nosed out by KYW at 12:30] while we sat at luncheon on the floor below the Nameless set. At 2:40 KSD was tuned in with usual daytime volume, but at 3:40 it had lost its pep.

So, even as a lot of you probably did Monday night, we started hunting for trouble in our set. Although we succeeded in accumulating a lot of trouble for ourselves, conditions grew worse and worse, until, after WCBD had signed off, we finally opened the gate of our understanding to the fact that it was a perfectly rotten night, radiocastically speaking.

Sunday Night Also Poor.

Sunday was little better, for Omaha refused to even set up a scratching lure, and WOS and other familiar standbys were lost somewhere in the ether.

The preceding night, Saturday, July 19, was fine. At 9:45 WHAS, with a woman singing "Ben Bolt," was so strong it had to be reduced to one-stage, with the ensuing time signals emitted at local volume. From 10 to 10:50 came clear and strong, KSD, WOC, and WLAG, with "The Star-Spangled Banner." At 11:15 WOAW, Omaha, was held at volume enough to fill the room on one stage of audio during a piano solo.

Friday night a week ago was quite good, and last Wednesday little to speak of—so, after having given you this brief record of a freakish radio week, we'll close with this new one as a signing off cheerio from KDKA: "May you laugh in your dreams!" (Jack Nelson, your chee-ild is strayed.)

"RADIO PICNIC" FOR ALL CHICAGO FANS ON TAPIS

Plans for a "radio picnic" in a city park early in September were discussed by Mayor Dever's radio commission which held its first meeting Thursday in city hall. Ald. Jacob M. Arvey (24th) was confirmed as the commission's chairman and Charles H. Porter was elected secretary.

Invitations will extend to every radio fan in the city to attend the commission's picnic. A radio cast station will be set up for the day and artists and entertainers from all local stations will participate in a program full of surprises for listeners-in as well as picnickers. Manufacturers already have promised exhibits of every known radio set and accessory and experts will be assigned to demonstrate the instruments.

The commission, which Ald. Arvey says will become an advisory body, of aid to local broadcasting and reception, contemplates the establishment of a city hall bureau where fans may register complaints and receive information. Proceedings of subsequent meetings of the commission, including addresses by radio experts may be broadcast if arrangements can be perfected, Ald. Arvey said.

WILSON J. WEATHERBEE.

In addition to Ald. Arvey and Secretary Porter the commission includes Ald. Joseph O. Kostner (23d), Charles S. Eaton (6th), and W. D. Meyering, as well as Wilson J. Wetherbee, director of Westinghouse station KYW, Herbert H. Frost, Frank Reichmann, and F. E. Goodnow, electrical engineers, and Frank H. McDonald, president of the Broadcast Listeners' association.

Super-Het Train Due to Arrive in Chicago July 30

Previous to arrival here, the train will be on display at Omaha and points between. The piece de resistance is a super-heterodyne designed by Lieut. Victor Greiff for the Radio Receptor company. Other equipment on display will be a special loop designed for use in a steel railroad car, the product of the Nassau Manufacturing company, Gould Unipower batteries, and the Ethovox reproducer, a British loud speaker product. H. V. Kaltenborn, associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, is in charge of the tour and is assisted by Elmer Applegit, radio editor.

CANADA TO GET FIRST BRITISH BEAM STATION

Empire Arranges for an Official Chain.

LONDON, July 26.—The British postmaster general announced in parliament this week that the government had agreed with the Marconi company for short wave directive stations, using the new beam wireless for communication between England, the Dominions, and India. The first is to be erected in Canada for communication with England, South Africa, India, and Australia.

The postmaster general also announces that the government has arranged to issue a new simple form of license for broadcast receivers which permits use of any apparatus. Hitherto only British made apparatus had been allowed, except to holders of an experimenter's license, the issue of which is very limited. The cost of an annual license is 10 shillings, part of which is retained by the government, and part paid to the British Broadcasting company, which supplies the programs.

BERLIN, July 26.—A large German news bureau serving 100 newspapers is the pioneer of a system of transmitting press service by wireless telephone, replacing leased telegraph and telephone wires. A three months' trial has convinced the bureau of the advantages of this system, which it is planned to extend to other subscribers in Austria, Poland, and other countries.

Nauen station is transmitting regularly commercial messages to Buenos Aires on a 70 meter wave length and 2¼ kilowatt of energy. The system is developed on the Marconi method, except that no effort is made to control the direction of the waves with parabolic antennae. Power required is one-tenth of the amount necessary with longer waves.

COPENHAGEN, July 26.—Radio has conquered all of Denmark, and the majority of receivers are American. The Marconi system is almost universal, only one Danish station using the Poulsen system. The government prohibits private radiocasts and controls all receivers.

VIENNA, July 26.—Radio casting in Austria is practically undeveloped, having been made a government monopoly, with only instruments of Austrian manufacture permitted. This shuts out American and English receivers, which are far ahead of anything developed here. Politics also has interfered with the building up of the service. From Sept. 1 lessees of the government will begin a regular radiocast service.

Schulze Collection Given Institute in Memory of Aviator

By Eleanor Jewett.

IN the Walter H. Schulze Memorial gallery of American paintings, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schulze to the Art institute, there are really some splendid canvases. A hint of sadness lingers upon them when we realize that they commemorate the death on Armistice day itself of a young American aviator, but even the sadness is dispelled in great measure by a closer realization of the intrinsic artistic worth of each painting.

In the first place, several of the pictures are old friends. They lose not a whit of their value by this fact. Perhaps the less familiar paintings gain a little, but even that possibility is open to serious doubt. The first painting we recognize is the splendid, powerful, rugged and more or less desolate winter landscape by Schofield, "The Power House, Falls Village, Conn." A few houses, insignificant in their magnificent setting, yet necessary to emphasize that setting's magnificence, are thrown down carelessly in the heart of a frozen world, where frost whitened trails lead back into snow ridged hills that bear on their bosoms like gems the green clustering conifers. Pines, firs, hemlocks—their spicy armor of needles is proof against even a Connecticut winter.

In contrast to this scene there hangs on the adjoining wall the glorious "The Northwest Wind," by Charles H. Davis. Here is hot August with its thick green grass and heavy foliage, its smell of hay and its chatter of crickets. Mastering all these, however, is the August sky, blue as the sea in mid-ocean, deep and tender, a curtain against which lazily wander white, billowing clouds, aimlessly as any sheep Bo-Peep might have lost on just such a day. Through the vastness of the sky blows the wind. The presence of its invisible strength is felt. If Davis had never painted but this one picture, his genius would have well established itself in the mind of any one who had taken in the charm of the canvas.

Across the way are enshrined the familiar and beloved figures of "Himself" and "Herself," by Robert Henri, an elderly couple that impersonates the serenity of old age with wholesome sweetness. Between them are the frills and laces of a gay young person—Frieseke's "Lady Trying on Hat." This is a composition of his favorite ingredients, a mingling of sheer laces and lawns, trifles for the boudoir, pale pink and blue, innumerable ribbons. The dressing table, an airy trifle; a blue bandbox, significant bon-bon; then the hat, a veritable masterpiece, a tiny creation of straw with a crown encircled by a wreath of green leaves clasped by a single pink rose from whose enfolding petals droops a blue plume—these make the lady, and the lady, with her mirror, realizes they have done a friendly deed.

Another familiar painting is "The Play of the Waves," by William Ritschel. The water ebbs and flows between the brown rocks. Near shore the white foam that crests the waves is broken into streaks of creamy lather that swirl meaninglessly over the surface, but, beyond, the foam rides proudly on the incoming billows, as proudly as ever rode the white plumes on the helmets of the knights in the time of romance. Dignity pervades the painting, the dignity of force that is self-confident.

To the left of the marine is "Snow Crowned Hills," by Guy Carleton Wiggins, an aptly named composition of hills and snow behind a thin screen of naked, shivering trees.

To the right hangs "Early Winter, Westchester County, New York," by Bruce Crane. This, by the way, is the single example of Bruce Crane that the Art institute owns. It is a haunting, haunted, lonely field of brown. A little gray pool in the foreground reflects a gray sky. The trees in the distance are misted and gray. The year is dying, and the tears of those who weep to see it go drench with their sweet saltness the melancholy earth.

"The Willows," by Childe Hassam, is comparatively negligible, not nearly as fine a piece of work as his "The Cathedral Spires" in the same room. A companion piece to "The Willows" is "Fete by the Lake," by Frederick Ballard Williams, a picture whose trees might have been leafed in by Corot and whose figures might have been arranged by Watteau. It is French and reminiscent, charming and romantic—but not great.

Perhaps the most unusual painting in the collection is a vast marine by Emil Carlson, which at first scarcely catches the eye. It is done, the whole of it, in light blue. A tiny boat is set in the midst of a vast calm sea over which a vast calm sky bends, a few clouds drawing away into the horizon. Christ is in the boat. He stands at the prow with his white robes fast about him and over his head a halo. Three fishermen are at the stern, naked to the waist. Between Christ and the disciples, those men of little faith, is a great net with its silvery catch shining through the folds. It is a beautiful re-telling of the story, one of the simplest the Bible holds.

To the right of this hangs "Golden Field," by W. L. Lathrop, the single Lathrop owned by the institute, and realizing exactly its title. Beyond is the "Lute Player," by J. Alden Wier, a slender girl, her back toward you, striking out the notes of some song on a mellow instrument.

To the left hangs a Twachtman, "Gloucester," light in key and charming—the shore line of that much painted coast seen on a summer day and transformed into a beauty of white village, green fields, and slumbering blue water. Next to it is the "Cathedral Spires," by Childe Hassam, another lovely canvas which has been mentioned already.

With this the collection is drawn to a close, but written words tell only part of the pictured wonders after all. Some day, not too hot, go for yourself and enjoy the unusual variety of loveliness set here before you.

Numerous medals engraved with the faces of North American Indians are being displayed in a case in the new children's room at the institute. The medals are the work of Edwin Warren Sawyer, an American, born in 1876. They were given by Edward E. Ayer, a trustee of the institute.

An addition of six rooms, to be ready Sept. 28, is under way for the school of the Art institue. The rooms each measure approximately 24x28 feet and will be lighted by high windows set 6 feet above the floor and extending to a 16 foot ceiling. They adjoin the Alexander McKinlock Memorial court on the south. They are being constructed in such a way that they can be converted into museum galleries easily, were such a change wanted at any time.

A case has been placed on the walls of gallery 1 in which the steps of a delicate process are clearly shown. Many persons wonder how the remarkably fine work to be found on cloisonne vases and various enamels, in which the orientals show surpassing skill, is done. The illustrative case shows the various stages in the making of a vase so that the process may be easily followed by the eye, but—could you do it? That is a different matter.

WI' AN EDINBURR

He's what in the French revues would be called the compère of "Artists and Models," and does therein, after his own fashion and with due regard for the librettists' material, what Balieff does in the Chauve-Souris.

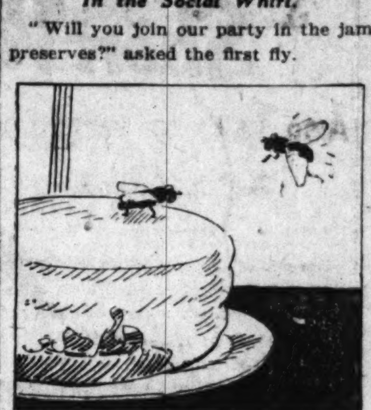
In the Social Whirl.

"Will you join our party in the jam preserves?" asked the first fly.



"No," said the second fly; "the lady of our house has baked a cake with icing on it. We're going in for winter sports." F. C. D.

Explained.

"John," said his wife, "I found some queer looking tickets in your desk today. One said: 'Ruler, 6 to 1.' What does it all mean?"

"My archaeological studies, dear," he answered. "Relics of a lost race." L. E. R.

In Reverse.

There had been a railroad accident. Pat, one of the passengers, had not been hurt at all, but in the excitement he had scrambled into his coat backward—as he was wearing it, the front was closed and the buttons were down the back. He was vainly trying to wriggle straight when the doctor reached him.

"Are you hurt much?" he asked.

"Strange to say, docthor, I don't seem to be hurted atall, atall, but shure I'm fatally twisted," said Pat. G. W. H.

Outguessed.

During the hearing of a traffic case in an Ohio town the judge put this question to the chauffeur brought before him for having run down a man:

"You knew that if you struck this pedestrian he would probably be seriously injured, did you not?"

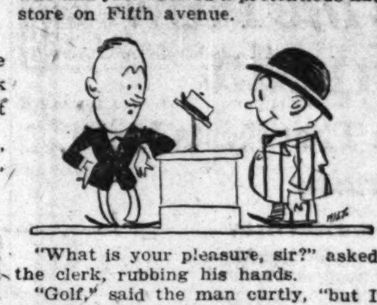
"Yes, your honor," said the chauffeur.

"In that case why didn't you zigzag your car and miss him?"

"Your honor," explained the driver, "he was zigzagging himself and outguessed me, that's all." M. B.

Something Quite Different.

A clerk came forward to meet a man who had just entered a pretentious hat store on Fifth avenue.



"What is your pleasure, sir?" asked the clerk, rubbing his hands.

"Golf," said the man curtly, "but I came in here to get a hat." F. L.

"Let Me Help You Better Yourself"

ARE you in a rut? Are you one of the vast army of low-salaried workers who hold down "blind-alley" jobs as book-keepers, clerks, factory workers — or what not? Do you long for the worthwhile things of life—a home of your own, a car, success, happiness—but despair of getting them because your job lacks a future? I have been privileged to help thousands who were once in just this position and if you have the red blood that commands "Onward" you too should read my message.

A Few of the Thousands of Men This Magazine Has Built

"One Issue Saved Me $45.00"

You don't know me and I never met you, but I have read every magazine you ever published from the start. A recent issue saved me just $45.00, and that will pay for the magazine for a long time. This saving was through your exposure of one of the fraudulent concerns you are so vigorously fighting.—F. Mack Kenney, Boston, Mass.

"Marked Turning Point in Life"

The first copy of Specialty Salesman Magazine I bought marked the turning point in my life. Up to that time (and I was nearly forty-five) I never had saved any money, but since reading my first copy of our magazine, less than a year ago, I have put nine hundred dollars in the bank, and my book will show that every cent of it has been saved since that time.—Robert Clayton, Oak Creek, Colo.

"A Substantial Income—Thanks To You."

Specialty selling has afforded me a fine income and lots of pleasure during the last five years, but I must admit that I was working somewhat in the dark previous to reading my first copy of "our" magazine last year. Now I get each number regularly. The letterhead on which I am writing is really a result of my reading our inspirational monthly, as I have connected with one of your advertisers and am making a substantial income each month, thanks to you.—Ed. A. Chaitkin, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

"Better and Better Every Day In Every Way"

Dear Bob—I have just finished my second reading of the latest issue of our magazine. I like everything in it, and I believe that anyone who aspires to be independent and likes to sell feels the same way. Bob, you know that this magazine makes us—I mean the readers—better and better every day in every way, as Mr. Coue would say. I for one envy you the position you must hold in the hearts of your readers and admirers, in your ceaseless efforts to make this U. S. A. a better and finer place to live in by your constant exposures of schemes and crooks and your convincing arguments in every issue that "Honesty is the best policy."—Michael C. Kolls, Akron, Ohio.

"I Like Your Way of Doing Business"

Every time I get through reading anything in Specialty Salesman Magazine I feel like writing to you and expressing my appreciation. I know you are a square shooter, and I want you to know that we appreciate it. I know the magazine has helped me a lot, and I like your way of doing business.—Fred Kamnitz, Salt Creek, Wyoming.

I think it is one of the best magazines published.—Johnson Fillingins, Pensacola, Fla.

To the playgrounds of two nations

No passports required

A FEW short hours eastward lie the favorite summer playgrounds of two nations. Clean, balsam-scented air, a thousand crystal lakes and streams of Canada, where life comes flooding in and your appetite sharpens.

Camp, hike, canoe and fish—or enjoy the refinements of comfortable living and formal sports at big, sumptuously furnished hotels and lodges where tennis, golf and dancing, motoring and horseback riding can be enjoyed to the full.

On your vacation this summer, visit the lake-dotted Highlands of Ontario. Enjoy historic Montreal and old-world Quebec. Visit the Lower St. Lawrence. Explore the beauties of the Maritimes—the provinces by the sea. Turn south to the cool, rock-bound Maine coast or the sunny sands of Long Island Sound.

Take a train towards the sunrise and make this summer's outing memorable.

Write for tourist fares with liberal stopover privileges, resort rates and illustrated booklets on any sections of these playgrounds of the nations.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Wisconsin Farm Present Home of Count Bolognesi

By Mme. X.

IT is safe to say there never was a more generally popular, even beloved foreigner in Chicago than Count Giulio Bolognesi, formerly Italian consul general for the northwest, with headquarters in the Windy City. Coming here with small knowledge of English, knowing no one, quite unacquainted with Americans and their customs and manners, he yet in a short time made a unique place for himself in many varied circles.

He learned our language quickly; he soon accepted our different ways of doing things; he became a great social favorite; he played one of the best games of bridge at the Chicago club, that haunt of expert bridgeites; and also was that rara avis, an amiable bridge player; he was musical, and was one of the guarantors of our grand opera as long as he stayed in Chicago, as well as having season seats and being a frequent attendant there; in short, he " filled the bill " so completely that he has been missed and mourned ever since his government took him from this part of the world and sent him first to that historic and dramatic spot, Sarajevo (where the Austrian crown prince and his wife were assassinated in 1914), and from there to Montreal.

In both of these widely different places both he and his wife found or made life interesting and worth while. In Montreal they were immediately discovered by the gay and charming society which is a feature of life there and were made much of and fêted.

At Home Anywhere.

Few men in Count Bolognesi's career have had such a wide and varied experience of life as he. He spent years in Egypt and Tripoli, other years in South American posts, such as the Argentine, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, and Brazil; he knows Paris, London, Constantinople, and Madrid, as well as Rome and other Italian cities. He is the typical cosmopolite, at home in any country, among any people, yet always keeping his individuality, his vivid personality, that of an Italian nobleman, belonging to one of the oldest families of northern Italy.

There is more difference between north and south Italy than there is between north Italians and the peoples that live beyond Italy's Alpine ramparts. Count Bolognesi in appearance is not at all what we are accustomed to consider Italian. He suggests more those big, blonde tribes that used to sweep southward through snowy passes and overwhelm the Romans and their neighbors, the Etruscans, Genoese, and other nearby aborigines.

If I dwell so strongly on Count Bolognesi's past it is because the turn of the wheel which has cast him on so many strange shores has now landed him in a quite different surrounding from any he has hitherto known, a big stock farm, numbering nearly 3,000 acres, in northwestern Wisconsin, in the Lake Superior district. Here the experienced, cultivated diplomat, the man of the world, the connoisseur of music, of social life in its many manifestations, is for the time being making the close acquaintance of nature as well as a, to him, new aspect of mankind, the agriculturist and small town resident.

MISS MARY LUCILLE HOOPER.

MISS DIXIE DAVIS.
[Matzene Photo.]

Among the most attractive of the many Chicago girls who have announced engagements this summer are Miss Mary Lucille Hooper, Miss Dixie Davis, Miss Virginia Louise Whalen, and Miss Margaret Mary Ross.

Miss Hooper, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hooper of 5525 Lakewood avenue, will be married on Aug. 9 to Melvin Gordon Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Young of Cambridge, Mass. The wedding will take place in the afternoon at the Church of the Atonement, and will be followed by a reception at the Hooper residence. Mr. Young will take his bride to Hollywood, Cal., where they plan to reside.

Miss Davis, who is engaged to Harold Allen Davis, son of Mrs. Cora Davis of 7022 Constance avenue, is the daughter of G. C. Davis of Oak Park.

MISS VIRGINIA WHALEN.
[Moffett Photo.]

Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Whalen of 6221 Kenmore avenue are the parents of Miss Whalen, whose engagement to Golden J. Ruel of Two Rivers, Wis., is announced. The wedding is to take place this fall.

MISS MARGARET MARY ROSS.
[Roehlk Photo.]

The engagement of Miss Ross to Burr L. Robbins, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Robbins of 1031 Bryn Mawr avenue, is announced by her aunt and uncle, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Cunningham of 5726 Sheridan road.

Inspired by the belief that he could benefit both his own countrymen and this country by founding a colony of Italian farmers who would learn the advantages of tilling the soil instead of being herded in cities and employed in the soul destroying industries or hard manual labor which is the fate of so many of them in this country, in the neighborhood of lovely Lake Nebagamon, Wis., he made sizable investments in land in this scarcely opened region. He assembled a small colony of his countrymen and embarked on the experiment.

The men liked it well enough, but the women did not. They longed so desperately for the city and its excitements that finally they induced their husbands to drift away from the sweet and wholesome land and to betake themselves and their families to other pursuits. A few of the original Italians are still in and near the Bolognesi holdings and give an Italian flavor to the place, but the original idea had to be abandoned, and the big farm is now turned into a stock farm. Over eighty-five handsome, sedate Holstein cattle now feed on the pastures that constitute a large part of the Modena farms. The owner, however, keeps an Italian atmosphere which is created by an up to date cheese factory and a well stocked warehouse, fragrant and mysterious, where are made many different kinds of the cheeses for which Italy is famous.

It is curious to think that up there in northern Wisconsin the same cheeses that the ancient Romans used to make are being turned out of an Italian-run factory, created from Wisconsin clover and from milk given by cows of a Dutch breed. The Romans learned to make cheese from the Sabines, a pastoral people who lived in the mountains. This gives an even more historic and remote flavor to the industry now being carried on in remote Wisconsin. Just such golden, gour shaped cheeses as one sees hanging in twine bags in the smoke tinted kitchens of Italy are here hanging in a cool darkness, waiting shipment to various parts of the country.

Count Bolognesi and his brother, Count Emilio, have several other industries incident to their big estate. The younger brother, Count Emilio, fought in the world war, and was captured by the Austrians at the battle of Caporetto. He spent a year and a half in an Austrian military prison, where life was none too easy. He had an opportunity to be transferred to a better one, but when he asked if his young cousin, also a prisoner, would be transferred likewise, and was told that he would not, Count Emilio, being a real gentleman as well as a gallant soldier, refused to leave his relative.

He is now quite absorbed in his brother's several enterprises in or near Lake Nebagamon. The young Italian nobleman, who has been a soldier and a gay "man about town" in Italy, is accepting this new deal of fate with great philosophy. He has taken out his citizenship papers, and will be an American citizen at the end of this year. He is immensely popular thereabouts, knows every one, and is hail fellow well met with all.

On the Brulé River.

One of the loveliest streams in the U. S. A. flows through this northern Wisconsin region. Its name, the Brulé river, betokens its French discoverers, the first white men to explore the thickly wooded district surrounding Lake Superior. The Brulé is deliciously clear and limpid, and flows either in tumbling, clamorous rapids or in still, glinting quiet over rocks stained golden reds and browns, that provide ideal lurking places for the speckled brook trout for which the stream is noted.

Thick woods, mostly composed of second growth timber, line its borders. The occasional splendid pine trees, Norway or white, which tower in groups or singly above today's leafy growth, remind one of the mighty forests which covered the land only thirty years or so ago and which the lumber companies have stripped off as if they were so much grass with no thought of conservation for future generations. Those who come after us will marvel at the wastefulness of the present and preceding generations.

Along the Brulé, for the most part hidden by the shrubbery and young trees, are many habitations built of fragrant pine logs and called camps, which have been the summer refuge of well to do folk from St. Paul, Duluth, Milwaukee and even from so far away a city as St. Louis. The most notable and costly of these camps is that of the St. Louis oil magnate, Henry Clay Pierce. He owns the Brulé for a large part of its way through the forests. He has made fish hatcheries in many of its by-waters, and from these fish nurseries fine trout, brook, German, rainbow, and Loch Leven escape and populate the lower stretches of the stream, much to the delight of the rest of the fishermen who cast their mysterious flies skilfully and industriously into every dusky pool and gurgling eddy.

Not only does the Brulé owe some of its finny denizens to Mr. Pierce of St. Louis, but one of its most exquisite features is due to an English gardener who once planted Mr. Pierce's grounds where they slide and drop into the brawling stream thickly with forget-me-nots. Today this lovely blue flower drips from almost every rock, sprouts from almost every stranded log, slips into the water from almost every mossy bank, in short, delights the wayfarer who paddles or poles up or down lovely Brulé. Sleek and chic little cedar waxwings, birds with a smart little tuft, lovely golden waistcoat, and bronze wings, escorted the writer in a trip upstream in canoe. Silver throated sparrows sang to her from the thickets on either hand. Kingfishers squawked their indignation at having their kingdoms invaded. The river turned and twisted, and the job of poling against the current up some of the brawling little rapids was by no means an easy one.

His Favorite Retreat.

Suddenly the Brulé widened and grew quite still and calm, and there ahead of us was what might have been a bit of Thames scenery. Mr. Pierce has surrounded his charming gray, bark covered, green roofed group of cottages with lush green lawns, bordered at the water's edge with thick, low, well clipped shrubberies or hedges. The river winds in placid fashion around this settlement, creating an island, a green, secluded, enchanting island, approached by charmingly rustic bridges, and set in a circle of dense forests, forests whose occasional giant pines punctuate the sky above and stand sentinel or like guides for the soaring birds of prey that occasionally float overhead. The woods in that region still shelter wild deer, and the howling of wolves is often heard on winter nights. The bristly porcupine, that inoffensive and fantastic creature, is frequently encountered on woodland strolls, and partridges beat their wings in anxious flight if one explores the thickets.

Of all his many dwellings—and he has them in Newport, in England, in St. Louis, and in New Brunswick—Mr. Pierce is said to care most for this delectable retreat in the Brulé region. In its furnishing he has put much sentiment. Of course, it is the latest word in luxury and is furnished with electric lights, modern plumbing, steam heat, most luxurious bedrooms, attractive red and blue and black wicker furniture, made especially for it in France, and many curious adornments suggestive of Mr. Pierce's prowess in hunting and fishing.

The chandeliers in the dining room are shaped like salmon caught in nets. The electric light fixture in the entrance hall is in the form of a group of canoes, made of transparent black and white ground glass. The heads of caribou, moose, and elk adorn the walls. The legs and hoofs of an elk Mr. Pierce shot have been turned into the legs of a side table in the dining room; its pelt is the top of the table. Its coat lies in front of the fireplace, softly hairy, a lovely symphony of browns and fawn color. Many stuffed birds and fish ornament the walls and fill cupboards. The place is a veritable woodland shrine set in a wilderness and far from the madding crowd. The only access to it is by narrow trails or by the winding, golden brown, tree bordered, delicious Brulé river.

One of the habitués of this region visited the Nile in Egypt a few years ago.

A fellow traveler said to him: "Isn't this the most beautiful river in the world?"

"No," replied the man; "I know one more beautiful in my country."

Another tourist, standing near by, turned and said: "Is that the Brulé?"

He, too, knew this Wisconsin stream, and loved it beyond all others.

Camp in Ruins.

One of the most attractive of the camps along the river, which belonged to Mrs. Noyes of Milwaukee, the mother of Mrs. Donald MacLennan of Lake Forest, was burned a few weeks ago, just as it was being put in order for the summer occupancy. Its quite complete ruins, surrounded by some splendid Norway pines, scorched to a beautiful but tragic bronze, are visible to the passerby in a canoe.

Undismayed, though terribly grieving, Mrs. Noyes was not to be deprived of her summer on the Brulé, and was able to rent another roomy, odoriferous log house a little further up the river, where she devotes herself to entertaining her numerous progeny. A woman with nineteen grandchildren never needs to be lonely when she has such an ideal summer place to offer them.

The country lying along Lake Superior's southwestern shores is still undeveloped from an agriculturalist's point of view. It is in the second stage of its usage. It is not yet entirely pastoral. It is a big job to clear the land of the myriad of stumps left by the lumber industry. But this is being accomplished fairly rapidly. After it has been used for this great industry, it will become in the course of time a farming country. This is the process of evolution in our rich forest country.

Wisconsin is a state well endowed by nature. Its soil is fruitful. Its landscape is diversified. Innumerable babbling and well stocked brooks run through its fields and groves. Hundreds of little lakes, some of them crystal clear, dot its green countryside. Low forest clad hills give beauty and variety to its scenery. Its government, whatever its other failings, has not deprived it of the good roads which are the life giving force in a rural community. Broad, well kept, well provided with signs giving information to the wayfarer, they seam the land from north to south, from east to west. It's a prosperous, smiling, charming part of the country, and a delightful territory for the tourist in automobile.

Their house near Nebagamon and their farm two miles out of it make a pleasant place for the self imposed exile of the two Counts Bolognesi. In time their industry will have created a fine estate out of the simple, archaic, but delightful surroundings in which they find themselves now. Meanwhile their friends love to abandon the hectic joys of life in and near Chicago and visit Modena Farms. They like to watch those fine, sleek black and white cows giving down floods of rich milk at the call of the mechanical devices attached to their big bags which convey the delicious fluid by pipes into whirling coolers and thence into immaculate containers. They, the visitors, like to visit the cheese factory where the thick, white gooey substance bubbles and seethes in the long vats. They delight to inspect the cool, dark warehouse, and they love to swim in the blue, caressing waters of Lake Nebagamon, whose brown sands are soft and supple as velvet.

It is good for the soul to get at least once in a while in intimate contact with the earth out of which we are created and which gives us our sustenance and will in time receive us again into its gentle embrace.

Don't Miss It.

Meanwhile, here's praying that today will be one glorious day, such a day as will lure the most housebound out this afternoon to the Cubs park to watch what will be one of the sportiest baseball games of the season. Not only will all who attend get their money's worth out of the match, but the money put in at the gate window will go to help pay the expenses of one of the finest enterprises in this region, Camp Algonquin, where every season hundreds of mothers and their offspring are given that blessedest of privileges, a sojourn in beautiful country surroundings, with fresh air, good food, plenty of sunshine, and the joy that trees, grass, shubbery, and flowers alone give.

So don't miss seeing THE TRIBUNE team hit its famous outfield balls, with the Algonquin Indians pitching; with Richard Henry Little and Vangie umpiring; with Sidney Smith (Andy Gump's dad) making home runs, and all the other celebrities taking part. Boxes, each holding eight seats, are only $10, while seats are only that easily acquired $1. If you can't go and want to help one of the most appealing of enterprises, THE TRIBUNE will transmit any sum you may care to give to Camp Algonquin.

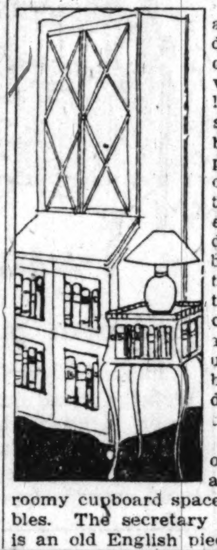
Artistic Extras in Furniture

BOOKS may not be at all what they seem, as is evidenced by some of the smartest of furniture tidbits observed recently in a fashionable shop devoted to such things.



One piece is an antique secretary desk, small, and of gayly painted wood, with what looks like two shelves of books below the desk part. The backs of the books are there, sure enough, nice dingy leather backs informing the world that they are literary classics, Dickens and the like. But, unlike other books, they aren't detachable from the shelves, but form doors, which open by means of a key and disclose roomy cupboard space for one's valuables. The secretary herein described is an old English piece.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Congregationalist Triennial Meets Here in September

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

DR. OZORA S. DAVIS, president of the Chicago (Congregational) Theological seminary, sailed for Europe last week, and just before doing so sent a picture of the new seminary building at 5757 University avenue and an invitation to attend the dedication of the new dormitory in connection with the triennial convention of the Congregational churches of the mid-west on Sept. 23-24. Dr. Davis expects to return in time to lead in the ceremonies of the occasion.

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, moderator of the national council of Congregational churches and a graduate of the seminary, will take a conspicuous part in the convention and dedication. Dr. Arthur E. Holt, the newly elected professor of social science at the seminary, will be one of the speakers. President Davis will speak on "The Seminary's New Program for the Next Three Years."

Dr. William E. Barton, who recently resigned as pastor of the First church of Oak Park, after twenty-five years of service, will speak on "Sixty-six Years of Service." At the dedication ceremonies greetings will be brought by the University of Chicago and Garrett Biblical institute. Chicago and visiting clergy will be present and laymen who have been active in the campaign to raise $1,000,000 for building and endowment will be among the presiding officers. Clarence S. Funk, national chairman, will preside at the banquet at the Hyde Park Congregational church; John R. Montgomery, president of the board of trustees, will preside at the meeting of the board of directors which begins the two days' meeting, and Charles S. Pellet, a director and one of the division chairmen in the campaign, will preside at the fellowship luncheon at the Quadrangle club at the University of Chicago.

Among the other speakers will be Prof. James H. Tufts, the Rev. Everett Lesher, the Rev. Thomas R. Faville, the Rev. Charles C. Merrill, Prof. Frank G. Ward, the Rev. Earle A Munger, the Rev. R. W. Gammon, Prof. H. H. Walker, and the Rev. Chester B. Emerson.

A camp meeting of the German Methodist Episcopal churches of the Chicago district is in session at the Berger camp ground, South Holland, Ill., on the Illinois Central and Pennsylvania railroads. Last week, July 19-25, the William Nast institute, under the direction of the German Epworth league, was held. The camp meeting is in charge of Dr. William Esslinger, district superintendent.

THE REV. JOHN H. DE LACY, D. D.
[W. M. Wood Photo.]

Dr. DeLacy is pastor of Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th street and South Paulina avenue. He has recently completed a canvass for $81,000 with which to build a community house and pay all indebtedness on the church plant, which is now valued at $150,000.

A lot which was presented by John Bain, south park commissioner, on which the community house is to be built, is valued at $10,000. The entire plant, when completed and free from debt, will be valued at $200,000. The membership is 1,200, one of the largest of the denomination in Chicago. It increased 200 during the last year. Dr. DeLacy is in the fifteenth year of his pastorate. He studied at Northwestern university and Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, but was not graduated because of the insistence of Thoburn church on having all his time. He received the honorary degree of doctor of divinity from an Iowa college in recognition of his unusual church work.

Officials who helped Dr. DeLacy in his recent successful canvass for funds, in addition to Mr. Bain, who gave the lot, were Howard E. Elmore, $5,000; Rudolph H. Schoeppe, $2,500; George Volk, $2,000, and the trustees, L. G. Groebe, F. W. Gronau, H. M. Burnett, F. J. Rosenberg, O. W. Glenk, E. E. Elmore, C. N. Bergstrom, William Mitchell, and Dr. S. A. Lundgren.

A Brotherhood of St. John's is being formed of all men who contribute to the fund and a Cenacle of St. John's to all women who will contribute. The new pastor, the Rt. Rev. Mgr. O'Brien, will send certificates of membership to all who join and will offer up mass for the brotherhood on the first Sunday of every month and for the Cenacle on the third Sunday.

Robertson Macartney, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Waterloo, Ia., who will preach today at 10:45 o'clock in the Kenwood church, Greenwood avenue and 46th street, is a brother of the pastor of Kenwood church, although spelling his name in a slightly different way, the Rev. THE REAL INSIDE DOPE ON THE MOVIE STARS

Perilous Stunts in Films Bring Pearl White Fame

By Julia Harpman.

PEARL WHITE had a wretched, unpromising childhood. She never knew a mother's tender caress. At 6 she was an unkempt, neglected, yellow haired kid who would lie when the truth would serve her better; who stole from the neighborhood children. She, with her brother and sister and an aged and simple grandmother, lived in a decaying red brick house, which had lost all sign of its past pretentiousness.

She, whose daring exploits on the screen had made millions of fans gasp, was known back in her home town of Greenridge, Mo., as a "'fraid cat." She was a cowardly child, afraid of the dark and much more ready to run than to fight.

Pearl's first remembrance of her father was a box on the ears. It was a greeting upon his return from a lengthy trip, when he found Pearl in the act of tying the tails of two dogs together. Edward G. White, Pearl's father, was descended from a long line of Irish. To him Pearl owes not only her sense of humor, but the conquering of her cowardice. Part of her fear was thrashed out of her and the rest was subdued because she was more afraid of her father's whippings than she was of the dark or of the neighborhood children.

Learned to Like Danger.

Pearl became hard-boiled, and she still is. Pearl says she did not entirely conquer fear, but she learned to love the sense of overcoming danger. She made film history when she starred in "The Perils of Pauline," a thrilling serial, in each chapter of which the heroine was called upon to risk her life a dozen times or more. Miss White was advertised as "Peerless, Fearless Pearl." She has this to say on the subject:

"I have been petrified with fear more than once during the filming of pictures. I have actually got to like fear and like the sensation of taking some dangerous chances that frighten me. My old heart beats a ragtime and I face the music, feeling more thrilled than I would be doing something in which I knew there was no risk."

When Pearl, the ninth child to be born in fifteen years, entered the world, her mother left it. Her mother's name was Elizabeth House. She was of an Italian family, which had translated their surname "Casa," into its English meaning.

Pearl's father married again and brought his beautiful bride to the ramshackle old house. The stepmother, who had some money, renovated the family, along with the house. Each child was allotted certain duties about the farm; they were bathed and clothed properly, and sent to school, and the house was completely remodeled.

During the summer vacation, Pearl and her brother, Fred, sold newspapers. While selling her papers on the street corner one Sunday, Pearl heard that the show people, who had arrived in Greenridge to play "Uncle Tom's Cabin," were putting up their tent. They were to open next day.

Plays Little Eva.

Pearl ran to the lot and stood around all morning, clutching her papers, which provided an excuse for her remaining there, and singing snatches of ragtime songs she had picked up. The manager of the show, named Hall—a name which Pearl adopted later during her extensive career of trouping—was attracted to the child. He was in a quandary because the Little Eva of the show had the measles. So he offered the part to Pearl, with the proviso that she get her father's permission to play.

Pearl's father and stepmother had gone to Sedalia, a town twelve miles away. Anyway, Pearl knew her father would not have given his consent, even had he been in town. So she bribed her elder sister, by giving her all her toys, to write a note and sign their father's name, saying Pearl could appear in the show.

Pearl spent that afternoon and all the next morning rehearsing. They painted her cheeks white and reddened her lips and covered her short hair with a wig of long yellow curls. The afternoon performance went off all right. But the night performance was rather disastrous.

Pearl was elated at having been recognized in spite of her makeup, and she was feeling angelic on making little Eva's ascension to heaven. This was done by standing on a stepladder behind a curtain in which a hole had been cut. A spotlight shone on her face, which was seen through the hole in the curtain behind a strip of mosquito netting.

Suddenly she looked down toward the audience to enjoy the awe of the villagers. Standing at the door and staring up at her was her father. Pearl started, lost her balance, and tumbled through the curtain down on to the stage below, howling as she fell.

But Pearl had made her stage debut. The virus was in the blood and there was no cure.

When she was 17 Pearl got a job with the "All Star Stock company." The job paid $15 a week, her largest salary up to that time. The company played one week in each town and put on a different play every night. Between the acts singing and dancing turns, called "specialty acts," were put on, and Pearl had to appear in those, too.

PEARL WHITE.

The company stranded in Charleston, S. C. Pearl had saved $60. She was stopping at a boarding house where the purser of a passenger ship, which ran from New York to Cuba, was spending his leave. He offered her a job as stewardess on his boat.

Leaves Home Again.

She got a job in a variety hall in Havana. She was billed as "Miss Maizie," and she sang American songs to audiences which understood little English. Then she went in the steerage to South America and worked in the music halls of Buenos Aires. But she couldn't stand the life there and, as soon as she had enough money to pay for the trip, she went back to Springfield.

Her father told her cynically that he had always known she would not succeed on the stage. He insisted that she become a seamstress. So, for four months, she worked as a dressmaker's apprentice, receiving $4 a week for sewing seams, delivering bundles and doing housework in the dressmaker's establishment. Her next job was nurse girl to three children.

Pearl left home again on her 18th birthday, having secured work with a traveling stock company through an advertisement. After eight weeks she was fired.

She had been using the name of Maizie Hall. Now, she took her own last name but retained the "Maizie." She dyed her blonde hair black and piled it up in a high pompadour. She blacked her eyebrows and whitened her face. She thought the change in her appearance would also change her luck.

There followed a long period of trouping around the country, playing one night stands, seldom knowing where the next week's meals were coming from. But Pearl was determined never to return home again unless she was a success.

Pearl Tries Movies.

She was playing in South Norwalk when her voice rebelled against the strain of many years' shrieking melodrama. It cracked and, sometimes, Pearl could speak only in a whisper. A fellow actor advised her to try the movies. She let her hair return to its natural shade, meanwhile wearing a wig, and resumed her real name.

After applying for work at several studios, John A. Golden, then director for the old Powers company, which had a studio at 241st street, tried Pearl as an extra at a salary of $5 a day.

Her first picture, a one-reeler, was finished in two days. She was given steady employment at $30 a week. She went from Powers to the Lubin company at three times her former salary, then to Pathe Freres and from Pathe to the Crystal company, where she starred in many slapstick comedies.

When she had saved $6,000—more than she had expected to have in a lifetime—she bought passage for Europe and sailed the next day.

She bought beautiful clothes in Paris and stopped only at the most expensive hotels in London, Paris, Rome, Naples and Monte Carlo. She was the toast of the cafes. A count was her slave. When her money was nearly gone, she decided to gamble with $50 at the Casino, as a last fling, and then start for home.

She played the red and the red won. Her $50 was tripled. A man who had been losing and who had watched her play asked her to gamble with his money. She won $18,000 for him and, as is the way at the casino, he insisted that she acept half. She played around Europe several months longer on those winnings.

Chance for Fame.

Upon her return to America she went back to the screen.

Pathé offered her a huge salary and great publicity if she would risk her life in the series called "The Perils of Pauline." She had to fly in an airplane and balloon, jump overboard from a ship just as it was blown up by the villain, be lost at sea, fall from a cliff, drive a racing car, and be in a train wreck. Her contract stipulated that she took the job at her own risk and in the event of her death the company would not be responsible.

It was her chance to become famous, and Pearl took advantage of it. "The Perils of Pauline" was the first thrill serial ever produced. Pearl followed in pictures of the same type, including "The Exploits of Elaine," "The Iron Claw," "Pearl of the Army," and "The House of Hate."

Since her rise to fame she has never made less than $200,000 a year.

She was married to Victor Sutherland, an actor, in 1914. She divorced him two years later and shortly thereafter married Maj. Wallace McCutcheon, an actor and war hero, who bore thirty battle scars. Miss White divorced McCutcheon in July, 1921.

During the following spring the boulevardiers of Paris circulated the report that Pearl was to become the Duchess of Louis, Duc de Vallombrosa, close friend of Vincent Astor and member of a family prominent in the affairs of Europe since the year 1300. The fair Pearl is not yet the Duchesse de Vallombrosa. It may or may not be significant that she wears about her right ankle a golden chain which she admits was placed there by a titled admirer.

Through with Stunts.

Several months after their divorce Maj. McCutcheon disappeared suddenly from his rooms at the Lambs club in New York, and it was thought he had committed suicide. Pearl suffered a breakdown. It was reported she had retired to a convent in the French Alps. Two years later McCutcheon returned as suddenly as he had left. It developed that he had succumbed to the old fever of war and had spent the two years fighting in Peru, Mexico, and the Balkans.

Pearl recovered her health and returned to the Paris music halls, where she is a great favorite. Her last picture was "Terror," played by an American company in Paris.

Pearl returned to New York recently to defend a damage suit in which she was the co-defendant with the Fox Film company. They were sued by John F. Beatty a professional horseman, who claimed that he was injured when Miss White backed her horse into his while he was doubling for Robert Elliott in "Without Fear," in which Pearl starred. Miss White won the case.

Before she returned to her darling Paris she announced that she would never again appear in a picture and that, henceforth, her interest in the moving picture business would be confined to directing.

Parents, Wake Up!

There is a nation-wide movement to limit school opportunities of children in order to cut education costs and save big tax-dodgers. It is supported by a powerful combination which may win out before the public is aware of what is taking place.

Intelligence Tests May Brand Your Child "Mentally Inferior" Junior High Schools May Shunt Him Into the Factory

It Is Boldly Asserted:

THAT a very large percentage of children are mediocre and never develop intelligence beyond that of a 12 or 13 year old child, and that their further education causes waste of money;

THAT "Intelligence Tests" should be given to children on entering school so that authorities may know exactly which children are "mentally inferior";

THAT "Intelligence Tests" show whether a child's native ability corresponds to the intelligence level in the professions, the skilled trades, or unskilled labor, etc., and that great economy may be effected by using this information in planning the child's education and assigning him to a vocation.

THAT it is safe, by means of "Intelligence Tests," to stamp a child of 12 with a brand of permanent inferiority and determine his future occupation.

THAT we cannot teach the existing number of high school and college students in the way their parents want them taught without spending more money than the community is willing to pay—and perhaps more than it ought to pay.

If these plans and purposes are allowed to succeed they will destroy our democracy.

Read the following from a recent address of a President of an American University. This is but one of a number of such statements that might be cited from recent addresses of American University and College administrators:---

Quotations from Inaugural Address of President Cutten of Colgate University, Hamilton, New York.

We have never had a true democracy, and the low level of the intelligence of the people will not permit of our having one. We cannot conceive of any worse form of chaos than a real democracy in a population of an intelligence of a little over thirteen years.

If the war was fought to make the world safe for democracy, the success of the object would be a ghastly failure. Fortunately no one thought that it was fought for that purpose, except those who were unfit to be a part of democracy.

By democracy I accept the ordinary meaning of the word . . . the definition which found its crystallization in Lincoln's Gettysburg speech—"Government of the people, by the people, for the people."

It may be interesting to speculate concerning the effect of mental tests upon the problem of democracy. If the present hopes and expectations are realized they will result in a caste system as rigid as that of India, but on a rational and just basis. We are now examining children in the public schools, and find all ranges of intelligence from imbecility to genius. We are told that the intelligence quotient of a child rarely changes, so that we are enabled to tell early in his life what the limit of intelligence of any person will be, and in a general way to what class of vocation he is best fitted, and, to a certain extent, destined.

When the tests for vocational guidance are completed and developed, each boy and girl in school will be assigned to a vocation for which he is fitted, and, presuming that the tests are really efficient, he will in the future not attempt any work too advanced for his ability and hence make a failure of it, neither will he be found in an occupation too elementary for his ability and hence be dissatisfied. Economically, nothing could be more desirable. All differences in accomplishments or results from that which the intelligence quotients would indicate would be due to certain traits of character which intelligence tests do not measure, viz.: industry, perseverance, thoroughness, honesty.

One's intelligence quotient will eventually be known and persons will be classed thereby. Those of high intelligence will be directed into lines of occupation which call for leadership. Those persons will naturally be placed in the professions, and in leading positions in industry, commerce, and politics. Each person will then be directed on a scale of intelligence down to those whose work is of the most routine character of which an imbecile is capable.

But what effect will this have on our so-called democracy? It must inevitably destroy universal adult suffrage, by cutting off at least twenty-five percentage of the adults, those whose intelligence is so low as to be incapable of comprehending the significance of the ballot. On the other hand, it will throw the burden and responsibility of the government where it belongs, on those of high intelligence, and we come back again to the rule of the aristocracy—this time the real and total aristocracy. For its own salvation the state must assume the obligation and responsibility of selecting this intellectual aristocracy, and, having selected it, see that it is properly trained.

(From "School and Society," Oct. 28, 1922)

Intelligence Tests and Junior High Schools

Proper tests, properly given to children, and properly interpreted, for proper purposes are not being criticized here. So-called "native ability" is not the only test for fitness for life and citizenship, for criminals and other failures in life have ranked high in "native ability" but were lacking in human and moral qualities such as kindness, sympathy, integrity and courage, without which society cannot progress.

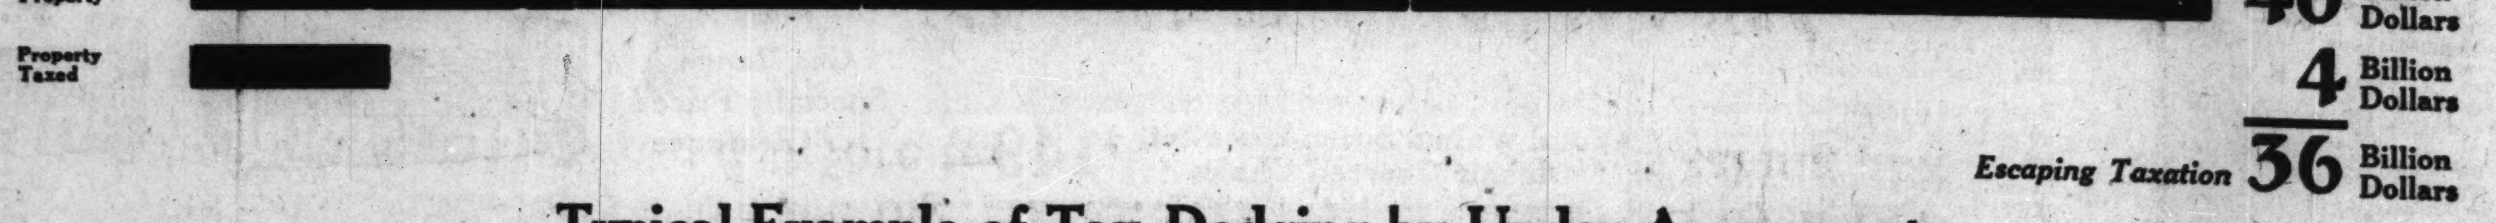
There are many varieties of junior high schools. The junior high schools of Rochester, N. Y., have been held up as models for Chicago. There has not been a regular high school built in Rochester for twenty years. This means that the establishment of the junior high school in Rochester has stopped large numbers of children from continuing their education in the regular high schools. In its power to hold children in regular high schools Rochester is twentieth in a list of 33 large American cities.

In Chicago more than 90 per cent of all children who now complete the eighth grade enter high school. Will the establishment of the junior high schools in Chicago mean that large numbers of Chicago children will be side-tracked from the ninth grade in the junior high school into industry and away from the high school? Will it mean that they are to be deprived of the liberal education necessary for intelligent, worthy American citizenship and away from the knowledge and appreciation of the worth while things of life?

Teachers, who know the tax situation in Chicago and who know that childhood is being deprived of educational opportunity in order to cut education costs to save big tax-dodgers, appeal to the parents of the children to wake up and act before it is too late.

Why Tax Rates Are High and School Revenues Low

One-Tenth of the Value of the Taxable Property in Chicago Bears the Entire Tax Burden



Typical Example of Tax-Dodging by Under Assessment

Valuation of land comprising Palmer House site:

As fixed by Real Estate Appraisers for purpose of loan	$20,000,000
As fixed by Board of Assessors for purposes of taxation	7,425,000
Taxes withheld from the public treasury by under-assessment	514,000

This land value—$20,000,000—is given to this small site by the millions of people who work and live in and around Chicago; that is, it is a "socially created" value. Above all, these socially created values should not be allowed to escape their lawful taxes.

The under-assessment of the Palmer House site is typical of the under-assessment of the land of the entire Central business district of Chicago, and this site is less than one-half of one per cent of the land area in this district.

The enormously valuable lands in the Central business district are so under-assessed that the burden of taxation must be shifted elsewhere, so it falls heavily on the small business men, home owners, and apartment owners who pass the taxes on to the renters—Chicago's Cliff Dwellers.

The fact that we have already quite a large number of depositors in Chicago alone shows its appeal.

HERE IS THE KIND OF JOB ANY MAN WOULD BE HAPPY IN.

I know what you are looking for: I know how hard it is for a man to find just what he wants in the way of a selling position—and the kind of pay that he wants to go with it. The position that I want to tell you about has everything that is necessary to make a man perfectly comfortable and happy. The pay is big and the position is highly dignified. The nature of the work is tremendously appealing, and we count our prospects by the thousands. The firm you will be connected with is very large, doing millions in volume annually. The position is not mechanical. You have plenty of freedom, and you are practically your own boss. Lack of experience in our line will not disqualify you for the position if you can show that you have had general business experience. The man who owns this business is a wealthy Chicagoan. Own Your Own Home

IN ONE OF THE NEW DE LUXE APARTMENTS OF THE South Shore Co-Operative

Located one block from Jackson Park and the South Shore-drive, on the southwest corner of Crandon-av. and 68th-st. [lot 210x190 feet], in the heart of the best section of the South Shore district.

The finest and best appointed building in the co-operative field, consisting of 7, 6, and 5 rooms. Every bedroom has a private tile bath, equipped with showers; floors thoroughly deadened with Flaxlinum. All windows and doors supplied with weather strips. Woodwork in either ivory, white or hand rubbed mahogany. Every apartment contains man size rooms, planned like a private home. Nineteen steam heated garages, with private street entrance—drive 23 feet wide.

The Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank are Trustee.

The tenant owners of the South Shore Co-operative Bldg. will be only responsible and socially desirable people.

Co-operative ownership is successful because it does one thing, and that one thing well, namely, it saves you money. Perhaps you do not realize that approximately half the rent you pay goes to the landlord as profit. Now, under the co-operative plan this percentage of your rent can be saved to you.

Compared with a house and lot you will find that the first cost of one of our co-operative apartments is less than half of what you would pay for a house laid out in the same generous proportions and located in the same neighborhood as the South Shore Co-operative Apartment Building.

The Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank is Trustee.

Now is the time to make your choice. They will be ready for occupancy by Oct. 1.

An agent is on the ground at all times, and will gladly show prospective purchasers through the apartments.

Why Investors and Builders ARE BUYING AT Niles Center Elevated Extension

Transportation makes valuation. Here is our convincing evidence. We take you out and show you how fast the construction of the ELEVATED ROAD is PROGRESSING. Three shifts of men working twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week to HASTEN the COMPLETION OF THIS WONDERFUL ACHIEVEMENT. B. J. FALLON, VICE PRES. OF THE ELEVATED LINES, STATES THAT TRAINS WILL BE IN OPERATION BY JANUARY 1st 1925. THIS IS an OPPORTUNITY of a lifetime. An elevated station located on our property, making every lot within two blocks from the station. A few hundred dollars invested NOW will roll into thousands within a year. Parks, schools playgrounds, and churches carefully planned. Remember what happened to Wilson-av., Howard-av., and Ravenswood terminals. Take advantage of this GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY IMMEDIATELY. I shall be pleased to explain all details without any obligation on your part. Easy terms. Address T Y 318, Tribune.

THE MOST WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY EVER OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC TO PUT THEIR MONEY TO WORK AND GET THE FULL EARNING POWER OF YOUR MONEY.

Our property is just west of Evanston, 2 stations right on the property; property is zoned for business and apartments. You must know what happened at Wilson-av., Howard-st., Lawrence and Kedzie. No interest or taxes for one year and a small monthly payment. Answer this at once for full particulars, address S N 325, Tribune.

DON'T PASS BUY. NOT YET TOO LATE.

The construction of the Niles Center elevated is now under way. It is not yet too late to buy business or apartment sites near and adjoining the stations of this branch; don't you recall the history of fortunes made by investors at other L branches? Glencoe.

SKOKIE HEIGHTS, GLENCOE.

This attractive development is VIRTUALLY A PRIVATE PARK with a freedom from auto traffic that will immediately appeal to those who have small children or who appreciate quiet. It is perpetually restricted to residences that cost not less than $15,000, and only one house to a lot. Sales are made only on written application [after the manner in which memberships are applied for in first class clubs]. This insures an exclusively American community. To build a home in Skokie Heights costs no more than it does in unprotected districts. It is still possible to secure a site in Skokie Heights at from $6,000 to $10,000. Drive out today and look it over—office on property. To enter Skokie Heights go to Bluff-st. and Skokie-rd. [Dundee-rd.] and drive through stone entrance. FISHERMEN & HUNTERS,

Read this: Three friends roamed the country for a good hunting and fishing spot. We found the spot, a paradise for hunting and fishing on a lake one mile long, without a shanty or boat, and the finest beach ever looked upon. Lake teems with large mouth bass, and a smaller lake with small mouth bass and pickerel. We have been going here a few years and desired to buy a spot for ourselves. Owner would not sell any except all the acreage. We purchased this spot, too much for us, and have decided to plat a few lots on the lake with its fine beach; sell for $55 each. Located in Michigan and a night's ride from Chicago; a day's drive by auto over fine roads. If you would like to have one of these lots write or call. McCabe, Room 803, 11 S. La Salle-st., Chicago.

Big Sale of RENEWED Jordan Cars

Renewed Jordans Insure Satisfaction

The fact that Jordan owners are the most loyal group of motor car owners any manufacturer can boast of means a great deal to the discerning prospective purchaser who checks up on actual owner satisfaction before he purchases.

And for this reason Renewed Jordans, rebuilt and guaranteed by us, insure you motoring satisfaction even as they did the former owner who, perhaps, traded in his touring car on a sedan or brougham or his "F" model on a late model "M."

This sale is absolutely without precedent. Every one of the Jordans listed below has been completely rebuilt, tastefully refinished, and thoroughly reconditioned in every detail. They are priced far below their usual selling prices. These are actual figures we will be glad to check with you.

Jordan Touring '20 Ser., 5 Passenger. Reduced from $700 to $550

Jordan Touring '21 Ser., 5 Passenger. Reduced from $900 to $700.

Jordan Touring, '21 Ser., 7 Passenger. Reduced from $875 to $600.

Jordan Sedan, '22 Ser., 5 Passenger. Reduced from $1,700 to $1,300.

Jordan Brougham '22 Ser., 4-5 Passenger. Reduced from $1,500 to $1,200.

Jordan Brougham, '23 Ser., 4-5 Passenger. Reduced from $1,800 to $1,500.

1922 STEPHENS SPORT TOURING. The original owner of this car had a great deal of mechanical knowledge and ability. It has been kept in perfect mechanical condition every mile of the 8,294 it has traveled. Complete equipment, having disc wheels, lock, 5 good cord tires, etc. Paint, top, and upholstery O. K. This car will prove serviceable for many years and in our estimation is decidedly a value. This is a cleaner and sweeter running Stephens than any we have ever had or seen offered for sale. Reduced from $800 to $500.

WE WANT MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE TO HAVE YOU MAKE AN ACTUAL COMPARISON OF MECHANICAL CONDITION, APPEARANCE, AND PRICE; THEN FORM YOUR OWN CONCLUSION.

"BUILT TOO GOOD"

THAT'S WHAT THE "INSIDERS" IN THIS BUSINESS WILL TELL YOU ABOUT CASE CARS. THE CASE, LIKE A FEW ACKNOWLEDGED GREAT CARS OF THE WORLD, IS BUILT IN A COMMUNITY OF TECHNICIANS, WHOSE CRAFTSMANSHIP IS TRADITIONAL — SHEER GOOD WORK JUST FOR ITS OWN SAKE.

From $450 Up

Ridiculously low prices have been placed on every used Case model here, to reduce our stock of Case cars taken in trade for latest Case models. It is a byword in the industry that Case owners invariably stick to Case.

Continental Motors

Case engines are of this famous make, just as used in a number of cars of great social prominence. And in addition, the Case quality policy is actually to rebuild each new motor before putting it into a chassis. Case responsibility plus Continental prestige!

Columbia Axles, Etc.

Every Case unit, and all Case manufacturing practices conform to this standard of building "too good" judged by commercial standards. But Case owners know how worthwhile it is.

Sworn Statement Plan

Furthermore every used Case here is certified by the exclusive Sworn Statement Plan. Never has so much known mileage in high character cars been offered to you at the low prices placed on these Case cars for instant clearance.

"It's Cheaper to Buy Brand New Furniture."

FACTORY SAMPLES OF Furniture and Rugs of the Better Grades at Prices
25% TO 30%
LESS THAN RETAIL

Factories we represent have instructed us to dispose of all our samples at the new Furniture Mart immediately.

Ordinarily we do not cater to retail trade, but in order to move our goods rapidly we find it necessary to open our display rooms to the public.

These goods that are displayed before retail dealers are, obviously, of better construction and finish than the average stock.

Among the living room furniture is everything that could be desired in the latest designs of coverings in mohairs, tapestries and damasks.

Exquisite dining room and bedroom furniture in walnut and mahogany and many odd pieces too numerous to mention that would beautify the home.

We will appreciate an opportunity to show you what we have. You will be under no obligation whatever to buy anything. Rarely does a person see our stock and leave without making a purchase.

If you care to drive down, park your car in front and our man will drive it around to the rear, where ample space for parking has been provided.

An early visit will be to your advantage. We are sure to dispose of our samples quickly at these prices.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

RIALTO GETS FIRST "LITTLE BLUE BOOK SHOP"

Publishing World Ford Invades Chicago.

BY AL CHASE.

E. Haldeman-Julius, who calls Girard, Kas., his home, and who is called the Henry Ford of the book world, on account of having published 60,000,000 of his "Little Blue Books" in the last five years, and sold most of them at 5 cents each, has kept his promise and opened a "Little Blue Book Shop" in Chicago. It's at 61 West Randolph, in the heart of the Rialto.

In order to get the real estate facts out of the way, so we can go ahead with the story, we hasten to add that this Kansas publishing prodigy is going to open several more Chicago book shops. One will be on Wabash, across from Brentano's, another in the Wilson avenue district, and a third in the neighborhood of 63d and Cottage Grove.

Imitates Henry of Detroit.

Mr. Haldeman-Julius, in addition to practicing the mass production ideas of Henry Ford in the issuing of his books, also has imitated his price reduction schedule. These "Little Blue Books" first sold for 25 cents; production increased so fast he was able to cut the price to 10 cents. Later the books sold so fast he slashed it to 5 cents. This apparently is going to be the standard price.

New ideas in book selling also have been introduced in the marketing of the little books by Alfred Painter, national store organizer, who has opened his Chicago store on the cafeteria idea. You wander around the shop and help yourself from an ingeniously arranged rack which contains several copies of each of the 700 books now being printed, in separate little divisions.

"The Jungle" in Six Volumes.

If you haven't seen these little books, we might add that they are only about 5x3 inches and merely little paper pamphlets, but are clearly printed and in practically all cases are not condensed. When a story is too long to print in one volume it is stretched over several. "The Jungle," for instance, is issued in six little volumes.

What induced Mr. Haldeman-Julius to invade Chicago was the fact that 9,000 Chicagoans were buying his books by mail from Kansas. He already has stores in Los Angeles, New York, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Montreal, Birmingham and a few other cities.

National Chain Planned.

According to J. E. Leach, who is local manager with Mr. Painter, the growth of the book stores already opened indicate that a nation-wide chain of shops ultimately will be operated.

Mr. Painter says the list of 700 titles is constantly being added to and that by the end of the year the total will be 1,000. In addition to printing books on which the copyright has expired, a long list of original works is being printed and more are being written for the Little Blue Book publisher.

CHICAGOAN BUYS WISCONSIN ACRES FOR RESORT "SUB"

Lawrence P. Romano, president of the North Suburban Realty company, has incorporated the Resort Development company to handle an 800 acre subdivision he has acquired at Winchester, Vilas county, Wis. The headquarters are the Turtle Lake Rod and Gun club, Turtle Lake resort, on North Turtle lake, where a nine hole golf course will be laid out and a permanent club house erected. The Chicago offices of the Resort Development company are in the Burnham building.

Buys Site on East 63d for Two Story Tile Front Bldg.

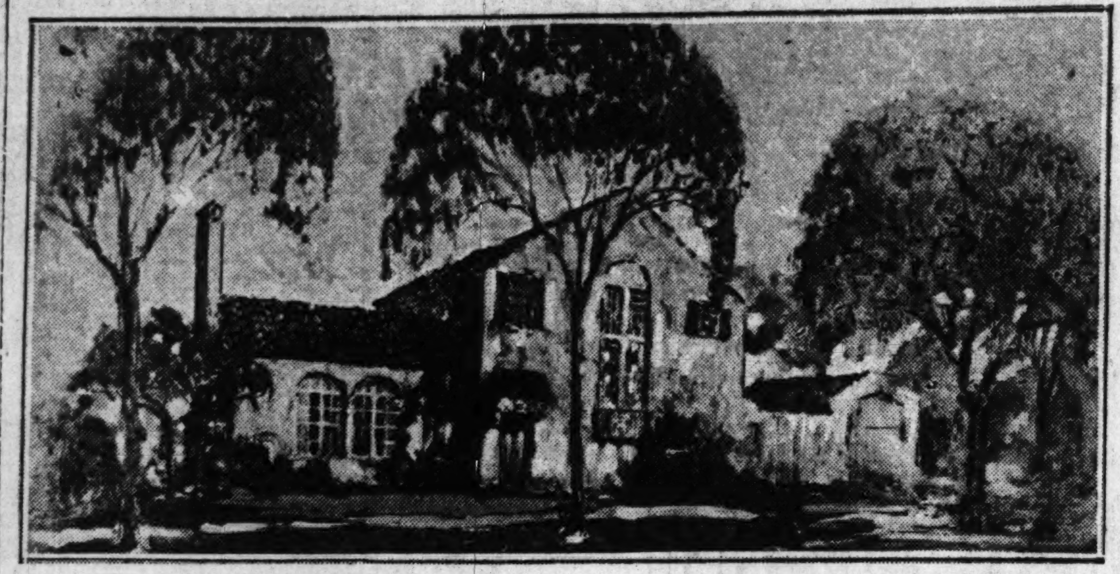
Bernhardt Kornblith, who operates a suit and cloak store at 4714 South Ashland, and Max Cohen, a florist, have bought 50 feet of frontage at 717-19 East 63d from Louis and Ray Eisenberg for an indicated $45,000.

They also are negotiating a ninety-nine year lease on the property adjoining it on the east. When this is acquired they plan erecting a two story tile front building. Each of the owners will occupy a first floor store. J. N. McMinn of McKey & Poague, was broker.

MASON-DIVISION CORNER SOLD.

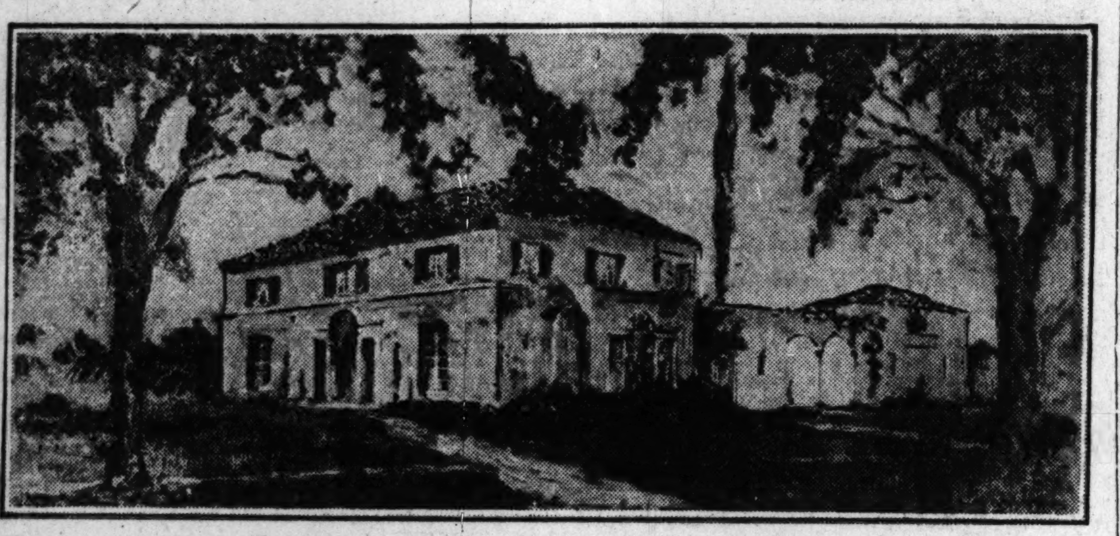
The four one story stores at the northwest corner of Mason and Division were sold by Abe Kaplan to Varellas Brothers for a reported $40,000. T. G. Gravens of Thermon, Lovett & Gravens was broker.

A Bit of Italy in Far South Side Suburb



Above is one of the several residences designed by Alfred P. Allen and Maurice Webster, associated architects, for the South Shore Land trust's 155 acre Flossmoor Park, across from the Idlewild Country club. It will cost in the neighborhood of $17,000 and will have a story and a half living room, three bedrooms, and two baths. The architecture is Spanish, and it'll be of stucco on hollow tile.

John A. Carroll Residence at Flossmoor Park—Maybe!



Alfred P. Allen and Maurice Webster, associated architects, designed the above Italian style residence, now under construction at Flossmoor Park, 'way south on the I. C. Rumor has it that John A. Carroll, Hyde Park banker, realtor, etc., is going to occupy this house. The walls are of solid masonry, brick, and cut stone, with red tile roof. The cost is placed at $27,000.

START MOVE FOR BETTER DESIGNS IN "SUB" HOUSES

Flossmoor Park May Be Made Beauty Spot.

Some of the officials of the South Shore Land trust several months ago decided after an exploration trip along the north shore that one of the things especially noticeable in the string of I. C. suburbs was lack of individuality and originality in architecture. The variety of designs, the wealth of color, and the novelty in effects so plentiful along the north shore, they decided, was needed to brighten up the far southern suburbs.

So they engaged Alfred P. Allen and Maurice Webster, associated architects, whose work they had specially noted in their Columbusing along the north shore towns, to design several houses for Flossmoor park, their new subdivision at Flossmoor.

The owners of the subdivision believe that if a number of attractive homes are erected, all different from each other and also different from the commonplace suburban residence built without an architect or from stock plans, the result will be setting an architectural pace that other owners will at once try and follow.

This is in line with the already demonstrated policy of making this subdivision high class in fact as well as advertising, for the owners, as told in this department some weeks ago, engaged one of the leading city planning firms in the world to lay out the subdivision. Now they apparently are following it up with the effort to make it architecturally attractive.

"Carlos" Meroni Rents New Restaurant on Rush Street

Charles Meroni, who has been operating Carlos restaurant at 118 East Ohio, has leased the store at 617 Rush street from the Newberry library trustees for three years at $9,000, and has opened a new "Carlos." H. E. Doney of Earle A. Shilton's office negotiated the lease. Signor Meroni was a chef at the Sherman for nine years and at the Congress for five.

'NO BOBBING HERE' TO BE JOYFUL SIGN TO ALLERTON BACHELORS

For the man who balks at having a flapper shingle bobbed in the next chair to where he's getting a hair cut, here's a bulletin of cheer.

The Allerton bachelor apartments at Boul. Mich. and Superior are going to have a barber shop with two outstanding features. It'll be a daylight establishment, with no artificial light, and it is hinted that flappers will be taboo. This latter is not absolutely official, but as the building is devoted exclusively to men, it is assumed ladies will not be welcome in the barber shop.

Charles L. Sack, who wielded the razor and scissors at the Stratford hotel for two decades, has leased the shop and will have five chairs. He also has a shop in the London Guarantee building.

"Prairie Farmer" Buys 160 Acre Experimental Farm

The Prairie Farmer Publishing company, which issues the Prairie Farmer, a weekly, from 337 West Madison, has bought 160 acres two miles south of Hinsdale for $42,500 and will operate an experimental stock and grain farm. The property is at Plainfield and County Line roads, and was bought from Edgar A. Bancroft.

BUYS GAS STATION SITE.

The Standard Oil company has bought the triangular lot at the northeast corner of Jackson and 5th avenue, 235x77x223, from Harry and Hyman Berkson for an indicated $45,000.

BEGIN ON BROMPTON FLATS.

Architect Sidney Minchin has drawn plans for a $90,000 sixteen flat building, work on which will start tomorrow at the northeast corner of Brompton and Halsted. The owner is S. G. Contos.

Brokers' Notes

Kurt Kroeber has withdrawn from the K. B. K. company and that concern will now be known as Kelley & Berlaney.

Samuel Glover, formerly of Glover & Malone, is now associated with the Howard & Orr Co. at its Hyde Park office.

Mrs. Moscelyn D. Condit, formerly with the Harold Bradley company, is now with W. K. Young & Brother, at their Upper Michigan avenue office.

News of the Architects

R. G. Wolff has moved his architectural offices over the Bridge of Chews from Mr. Wrigley's main building to his new annex. He occupies much larger quarters in suite 544-46. His phone is unchanged.

Architect Harry B. Aarens has moved from 109 North Dearborn to 1000 Argyle street. His phone is Edgewater 8365.

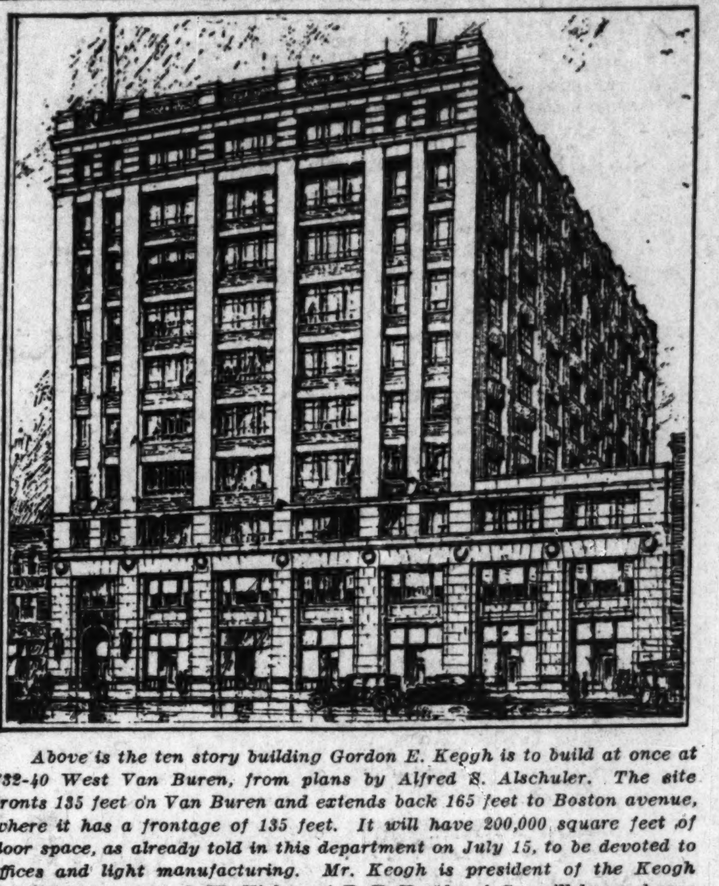
Rents Shop in Allerton for Boul Mich Drug Store

The first of the several ground floor shops in the Allerton bachelor apartment building at Michigan and Superior has been rented to J. I. Childs, a wholesale chemist, who will open a drug store. He has taken No. 707 shop, the only one which opens into the club-hotel lobby. He will pay $10,000 annually for five years and will open Sept. 15. His rental also includes a cigar stand in the Allerton lobby.

BUYS 25 ACRES FOR SUBDIVISION.

Carey Bros. of River Grove have sold 25 acres on the Des Plaines river at Grand avenue near the forest preserve to Volk Bros. for subdivision purposes. This property is said to have been in the hands of the Carey family for more than half a century.

On Van Buren, Just East of Halsted



Above is the ten story building Gordon E. Keogh is to build at once at 732-40 West Van Buren, from plans by Alfred S. Alschuler. The site fronts 135 feet on Van Buren and extends back 165 feet to Boston avenue, where it has a frontage of 135 feet. It will have 200,000 square feet of floor space, as already told in this department on July 15, to be devoted to offices and light manufacturing. Mr. Keogh is president of the Keogh Printing company. J. W. Hickey of E. F. Keebler & Co. will have charge of the renting. Completion date is set for Feb. 1.

FINDS PLAYROOM IN FLATS HELPS RENT BUILDING

Agent Has Praise for Welfare Plan.

Miss Marie G. Merrill, assistant commissioner of public welfare recently suggested to Henry G. Zander, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, that every flat building should have a playroom in the basement. As we told in this department two Sundays ago, Mr. Zander at once sent out a copy of the letter to every renting agent in Chicago.

The first result so far as the real estate editor is concerned was letters and phone calls to him from persons who stated they already had installed such rooms long ago. Well, every one knows that playrooms aren't an invention of 1924. Architect Harry Dorsey has been putting them in his buildings for several years. C. T. A. Anderson writes in that a playroom by day and a community room for grown-ups in the evening is provided in the new flats at 6636 Yale avenue. He adds that renting is made much easier as a result of it.

And right there is going to be the factor that should appeal to the landlord, no matter how much of a rent gouger he is. "It makes the renting easier." We know of one new flat building where five room apartments first were held at $110. That was months ago. They're still vacant but he's only asking $85 now. Maybe if he installed a playroom he might rent every apartment. It's worth trying.

Miss Merrill's suggestion has even reached the theater. The Kidland Amusement company has been formed which has secured the Olympia theater at 4619 South Ashland, through Cerf & Ehrenhalt, and will install a playroom in the basement.

Samuel Dulsky of Dulsky & Dulsky, attorneys, president of the Kidland concern, is going to have playrooms in two big apartments he is erecting, one at Washington and Harvey and the other at Montrose and Seeley.

LISTS FACTS ABOUT THE CO-OPERATIVE APARTMENT MOVEMENT

Here are some facts regarding cooperative apartments, compiled by the Coöperative Apartment Association of Chicago, of which Albert W. Swayne is president; Richard C. Johnston and H. H. Decker, vice presidents; Arthur E. Curtis, secretary, and Frank H. Anderson, treasurer:

ALBERT W. SWAYNE.
[Mabel Sykes Photo]

"In use in Europe for centuries; in New York for fifty years, and in Chicago ten years.

"One concern alone in New York has sold over 100 city blocks of high class apartment buildings on this plan.

"More than 100 buildings in Chicago now owned by their tenants. They vary from six flat structures built by groups of workmen, doctors, and University of Chicago professors, to large exclusive apartments on the Gold Coast.

"Thirty-five to 50 per cent of rental expense is saved by owning your own apartment.

"You can sell or rent your apartment as you would a house.

"All tenants must be approved by a board of directors (apartment owners) who manage the building.

"Many coöperative buildings in Chicago have a waiting list of buyers.

"Many banks and mortgage bond houses consider a loan on a tenant-owned building as superior to other loans.

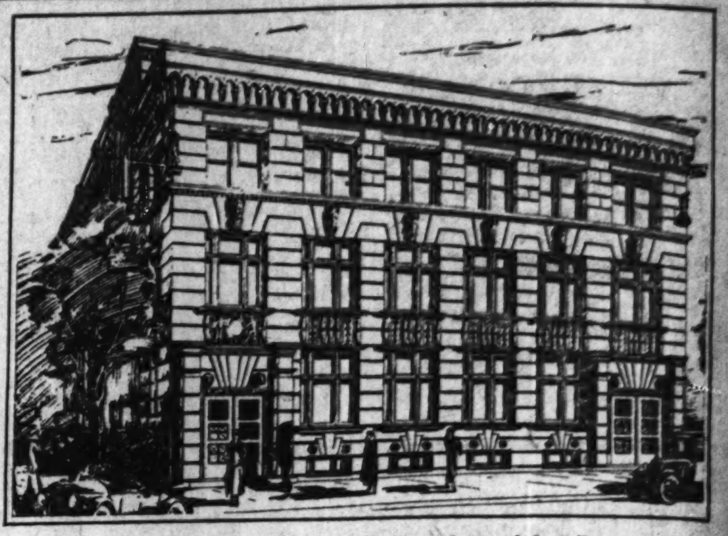
"Many banks now loan on coöperative building stock collateral the same as on standard listed stocks.

"Coöperative ownership of apartments in Chicago and suburbs and throughout the United States is rapidly increasing."

$208,000 NORTH SIDE DEAL.

Bertha Glazer bought the forty-two apartments at 607 Wrightwood from Alma Johnson for a reported $208,000, subject to $148,000.

Union Carpenters' Bank and Club



Architect Paul Gerhardt designed the above club, office, and bank building, to be erected at once by the Carpenters' District Council of Chicago at 12-18 East Erie street. The 70x109 site cost $80,000 and the building will represent an investment of $200,000. The exterior will be of terra cotta. It will have foundations for several more stories and will be fireproof. It has been designed to accommodate a carpenters' bank, to be formed later. It will start with 28,000 depositors, which is the number of members in the council.

The union will use the front part of the basement for a lounge with a vault for the storage of tools. The rear portion will be rented with the first floor. The second floor also will be rented temporarily. Both of these floors will be used by the bank later on. The entire third floor will be used by the council for general offices and meeting rooms. The general assembly hall will be two stories in height and seat 600. The building is three stories in front, but has a setback which gives it four in the rear. Completion is promised by Jan. 1, 1925.

Building Permits

There were ten building permits issued yesterday for a total of $210,000. Of the total, seven were in excess of $5,000. Those for $10,000 or more were:

Hutchinson-st., 5447, 1 story brick residence: Home Builders, owners; J. Morrison, arch.; C. Scheib, mas.	$ 11,000
Laramie-st., N., 828, 2 story flats; D. Smith, owner; E. Bruacher, arch.; T. Peterson, mas.; J. Frederickson, carp.	12,500

$260,000 LOAN.

William Wicks and others have given a trust deed for $260,000, eleven years, 6½%, secured by the northeast corner of Cottage Grove and 74th, to the Chicago Title and Trust company. They are erecting a two story department store on the property.

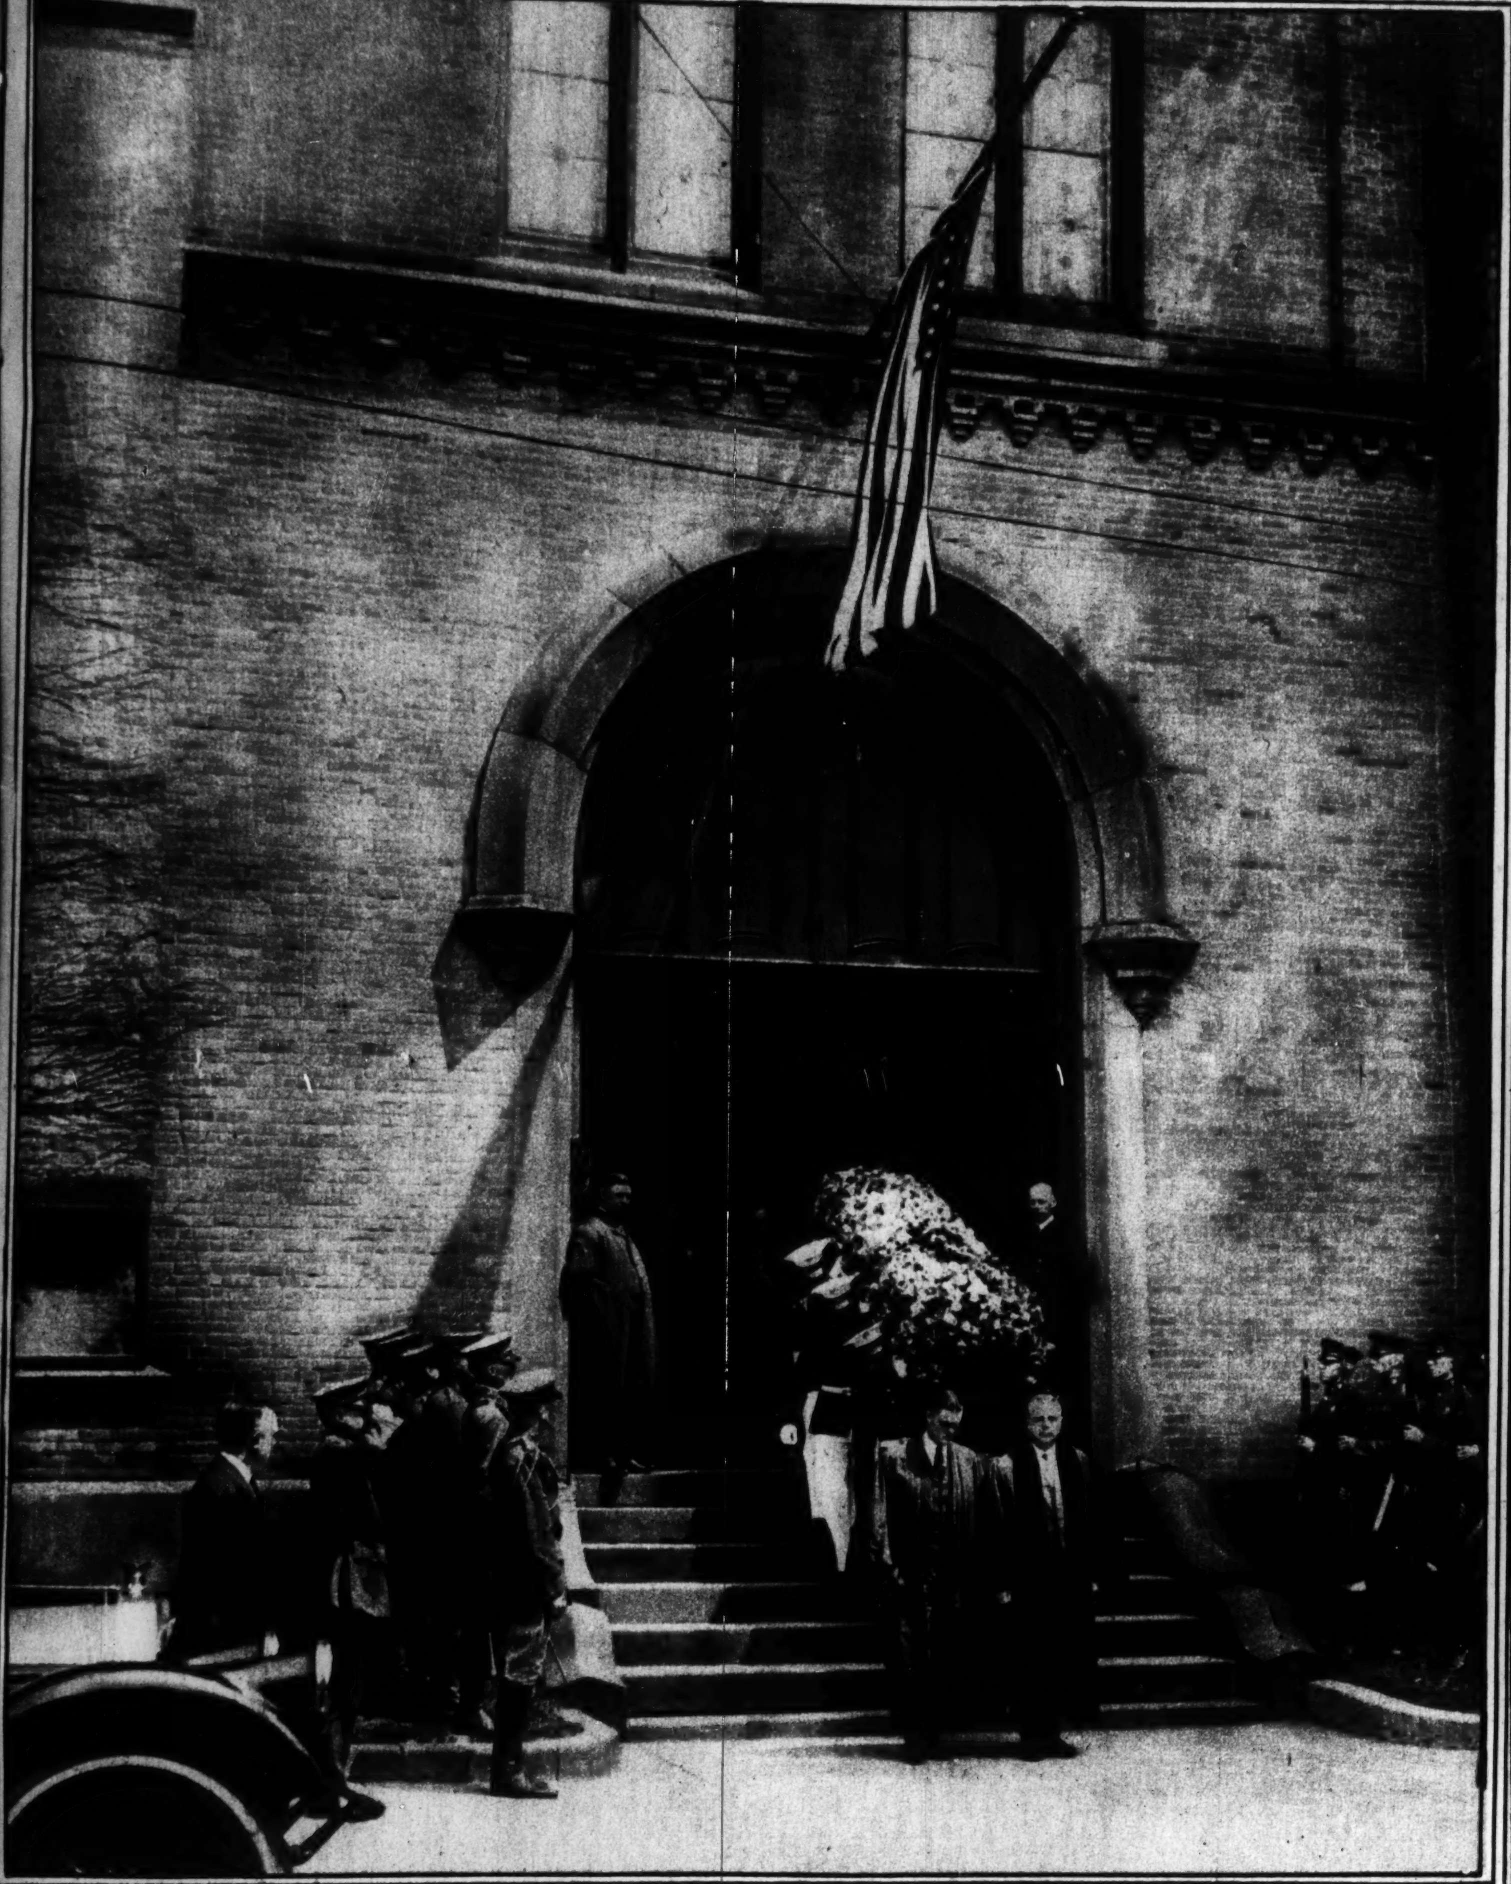
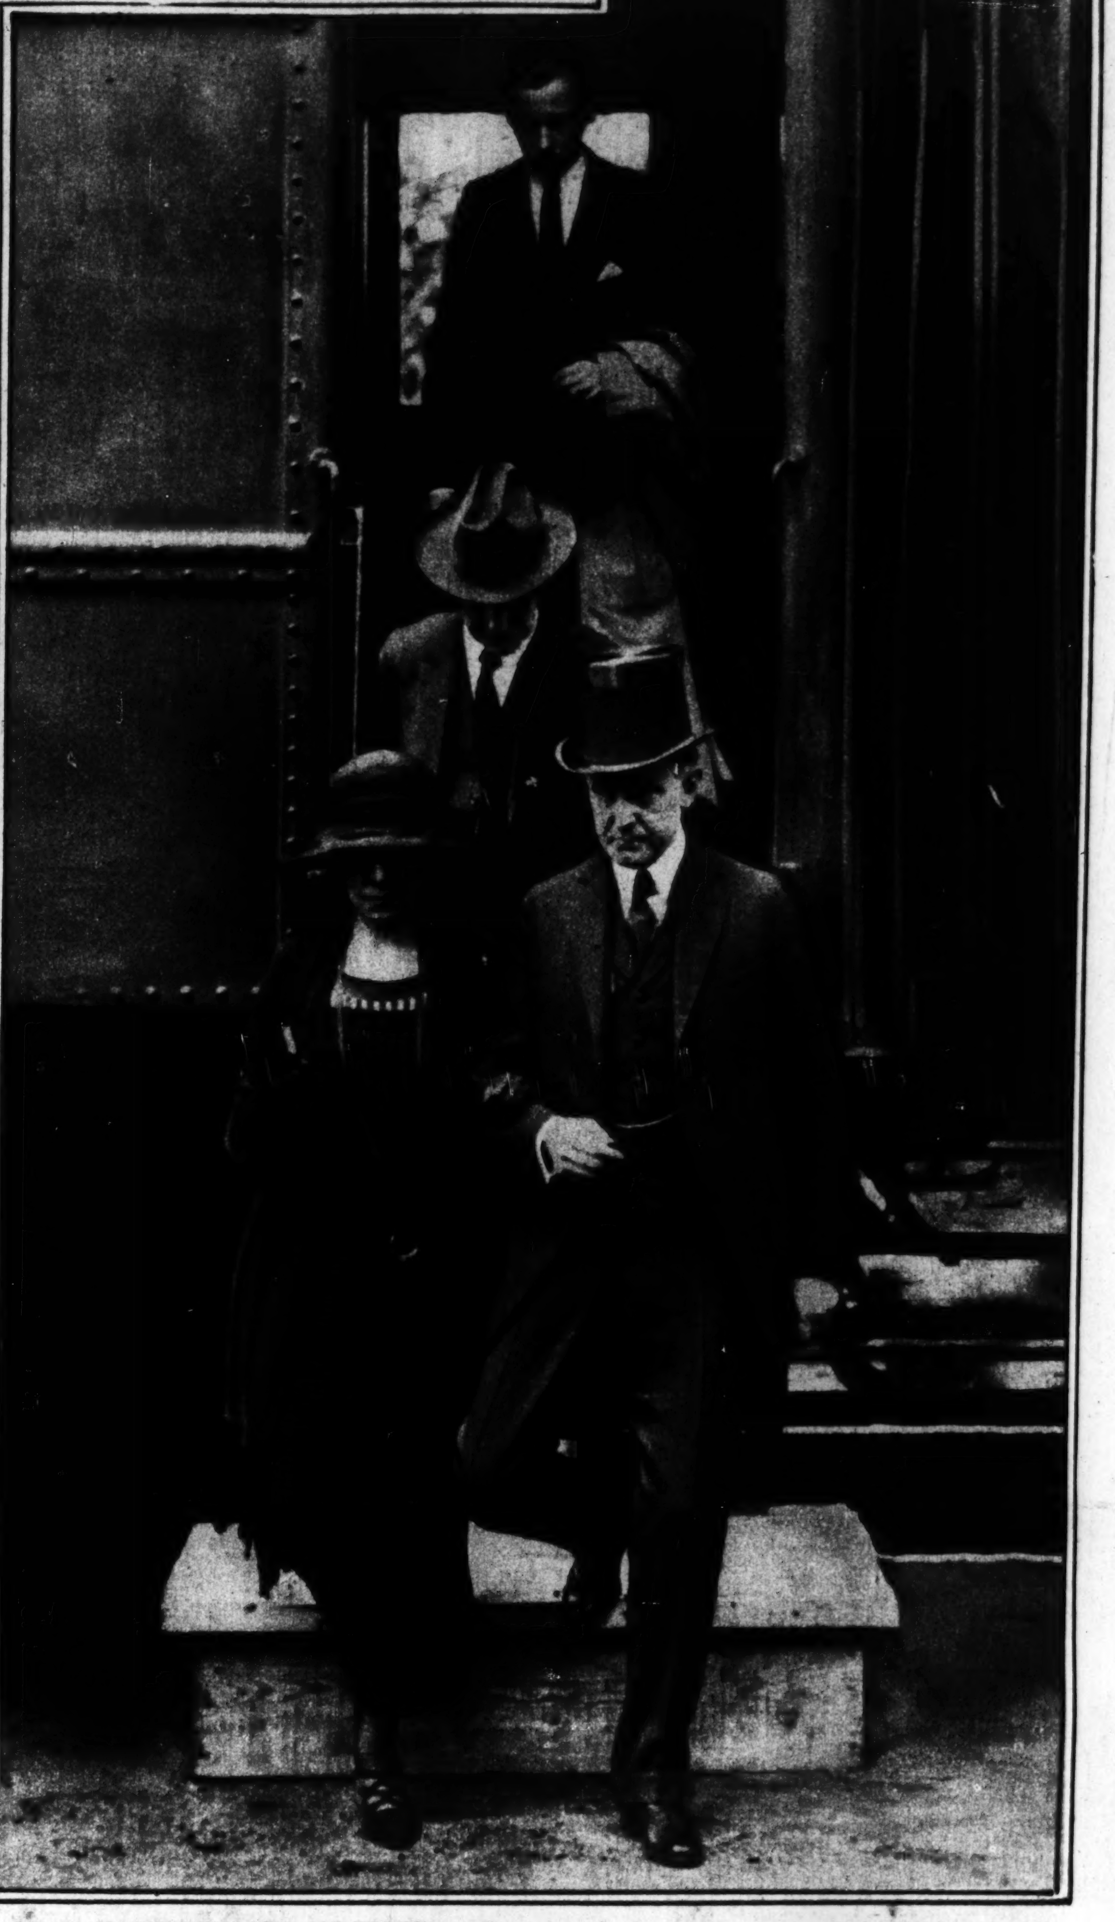
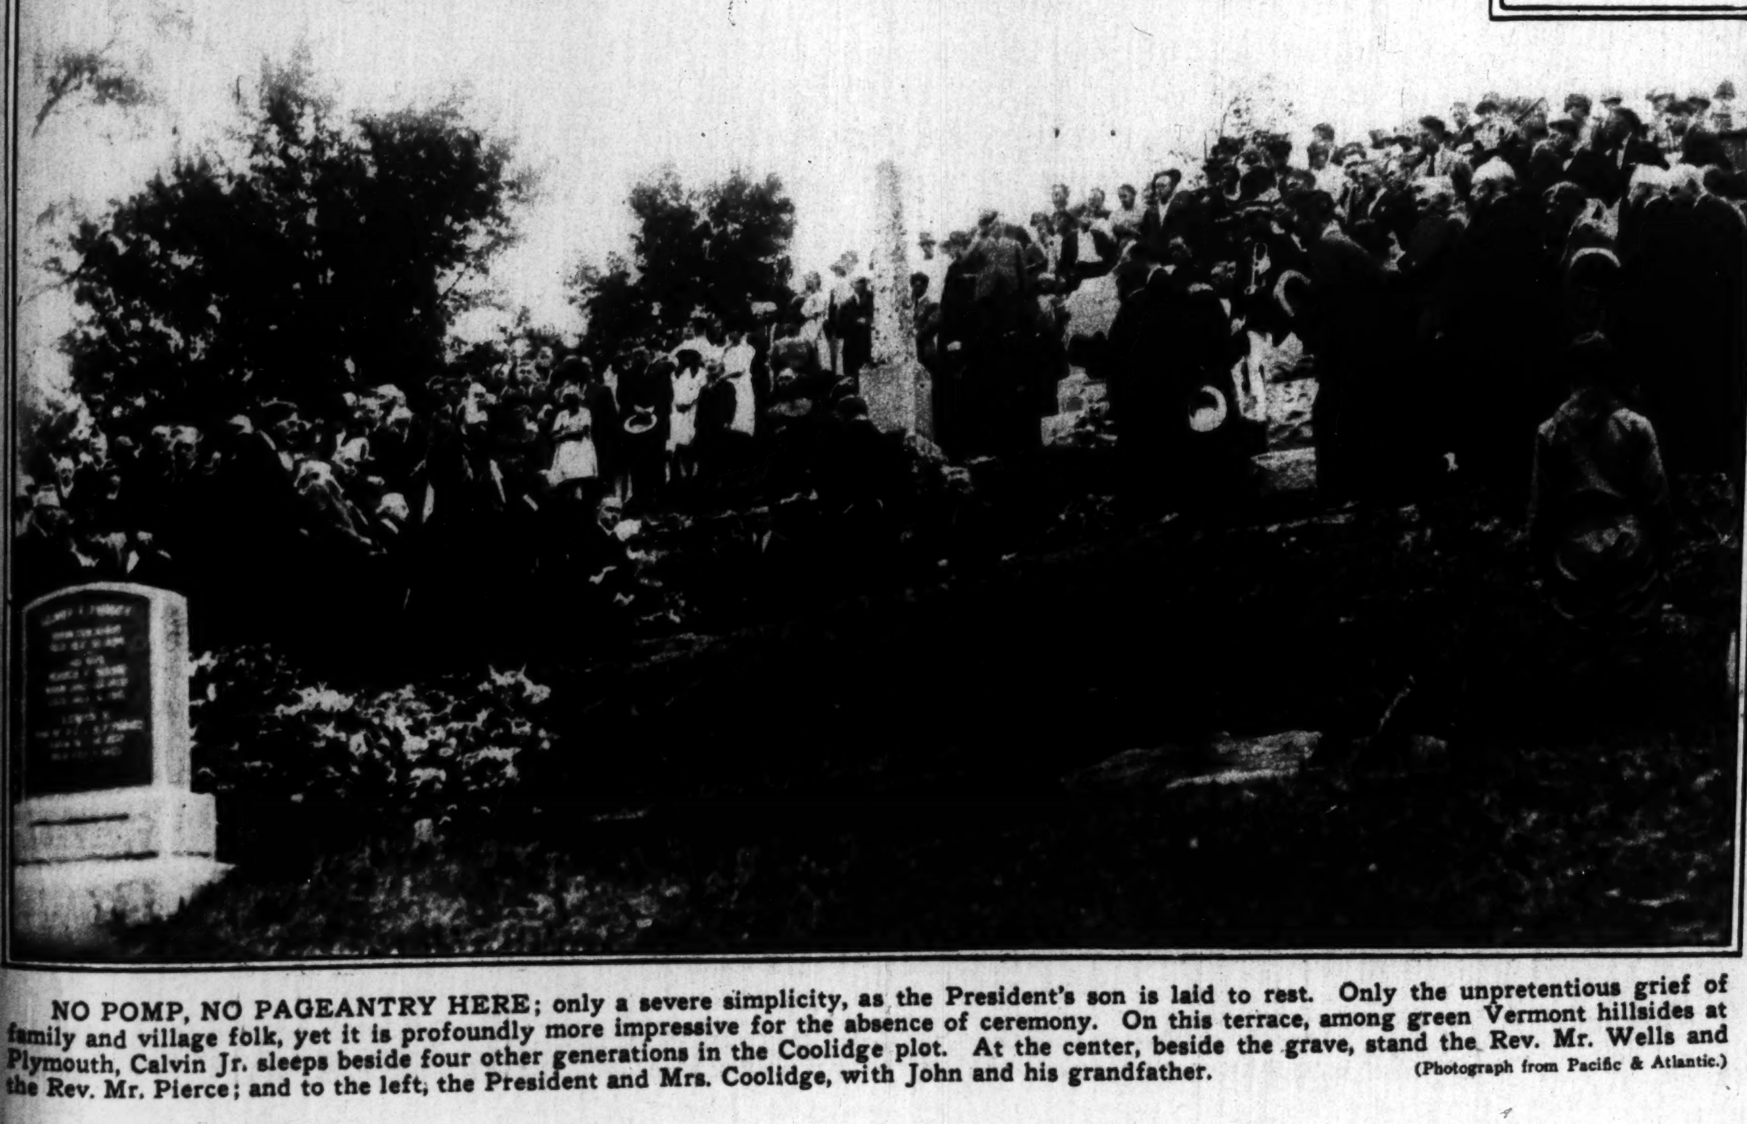
WHEN THE PRESIDENT'S SON WAS LAID TO REST



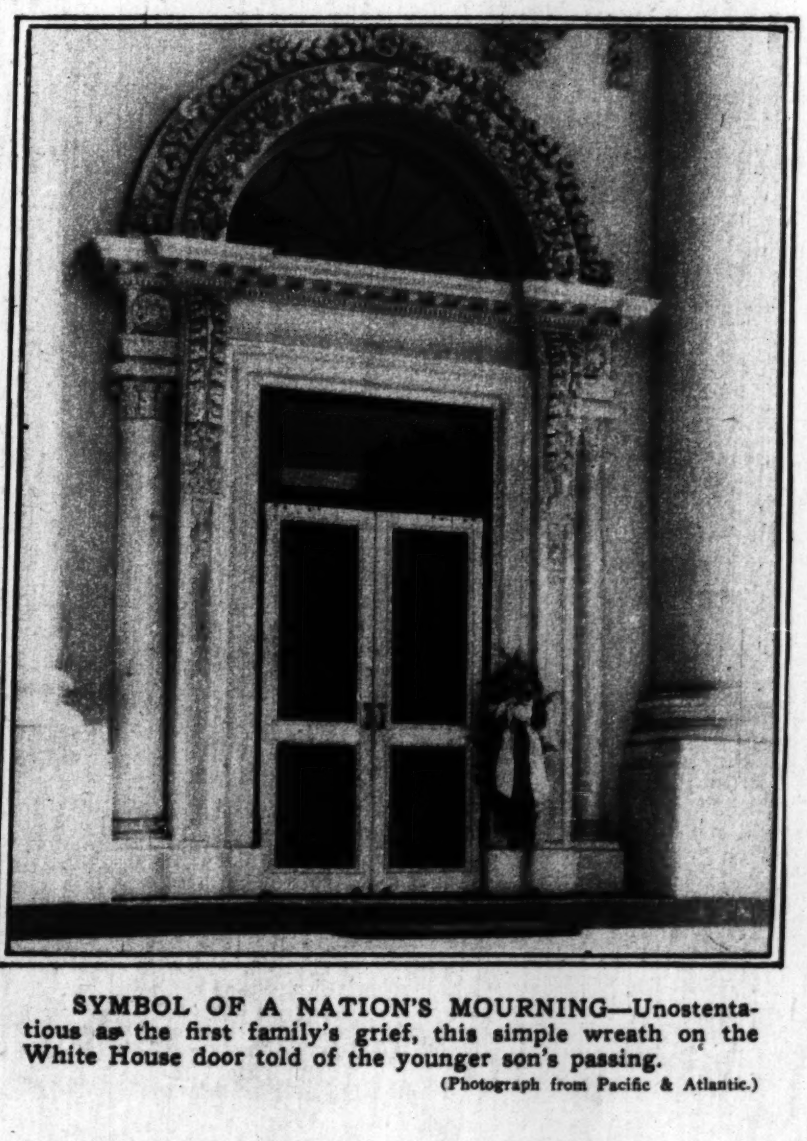
AT THE CHURCH OF OTHER DAYS—Following the funeral service at Northampton, Mass., the body of Calvin Coolidge Jr. is carried through the portals he had entered so often before. Pink roses blanket the casket, which is borne on the shoulders of marines from the Mayflower, the presidential yacht; and it is preceded by the Rev. Kenneth B. Wells (left), the Coolidge family pastor, and the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the President's church in Washington. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



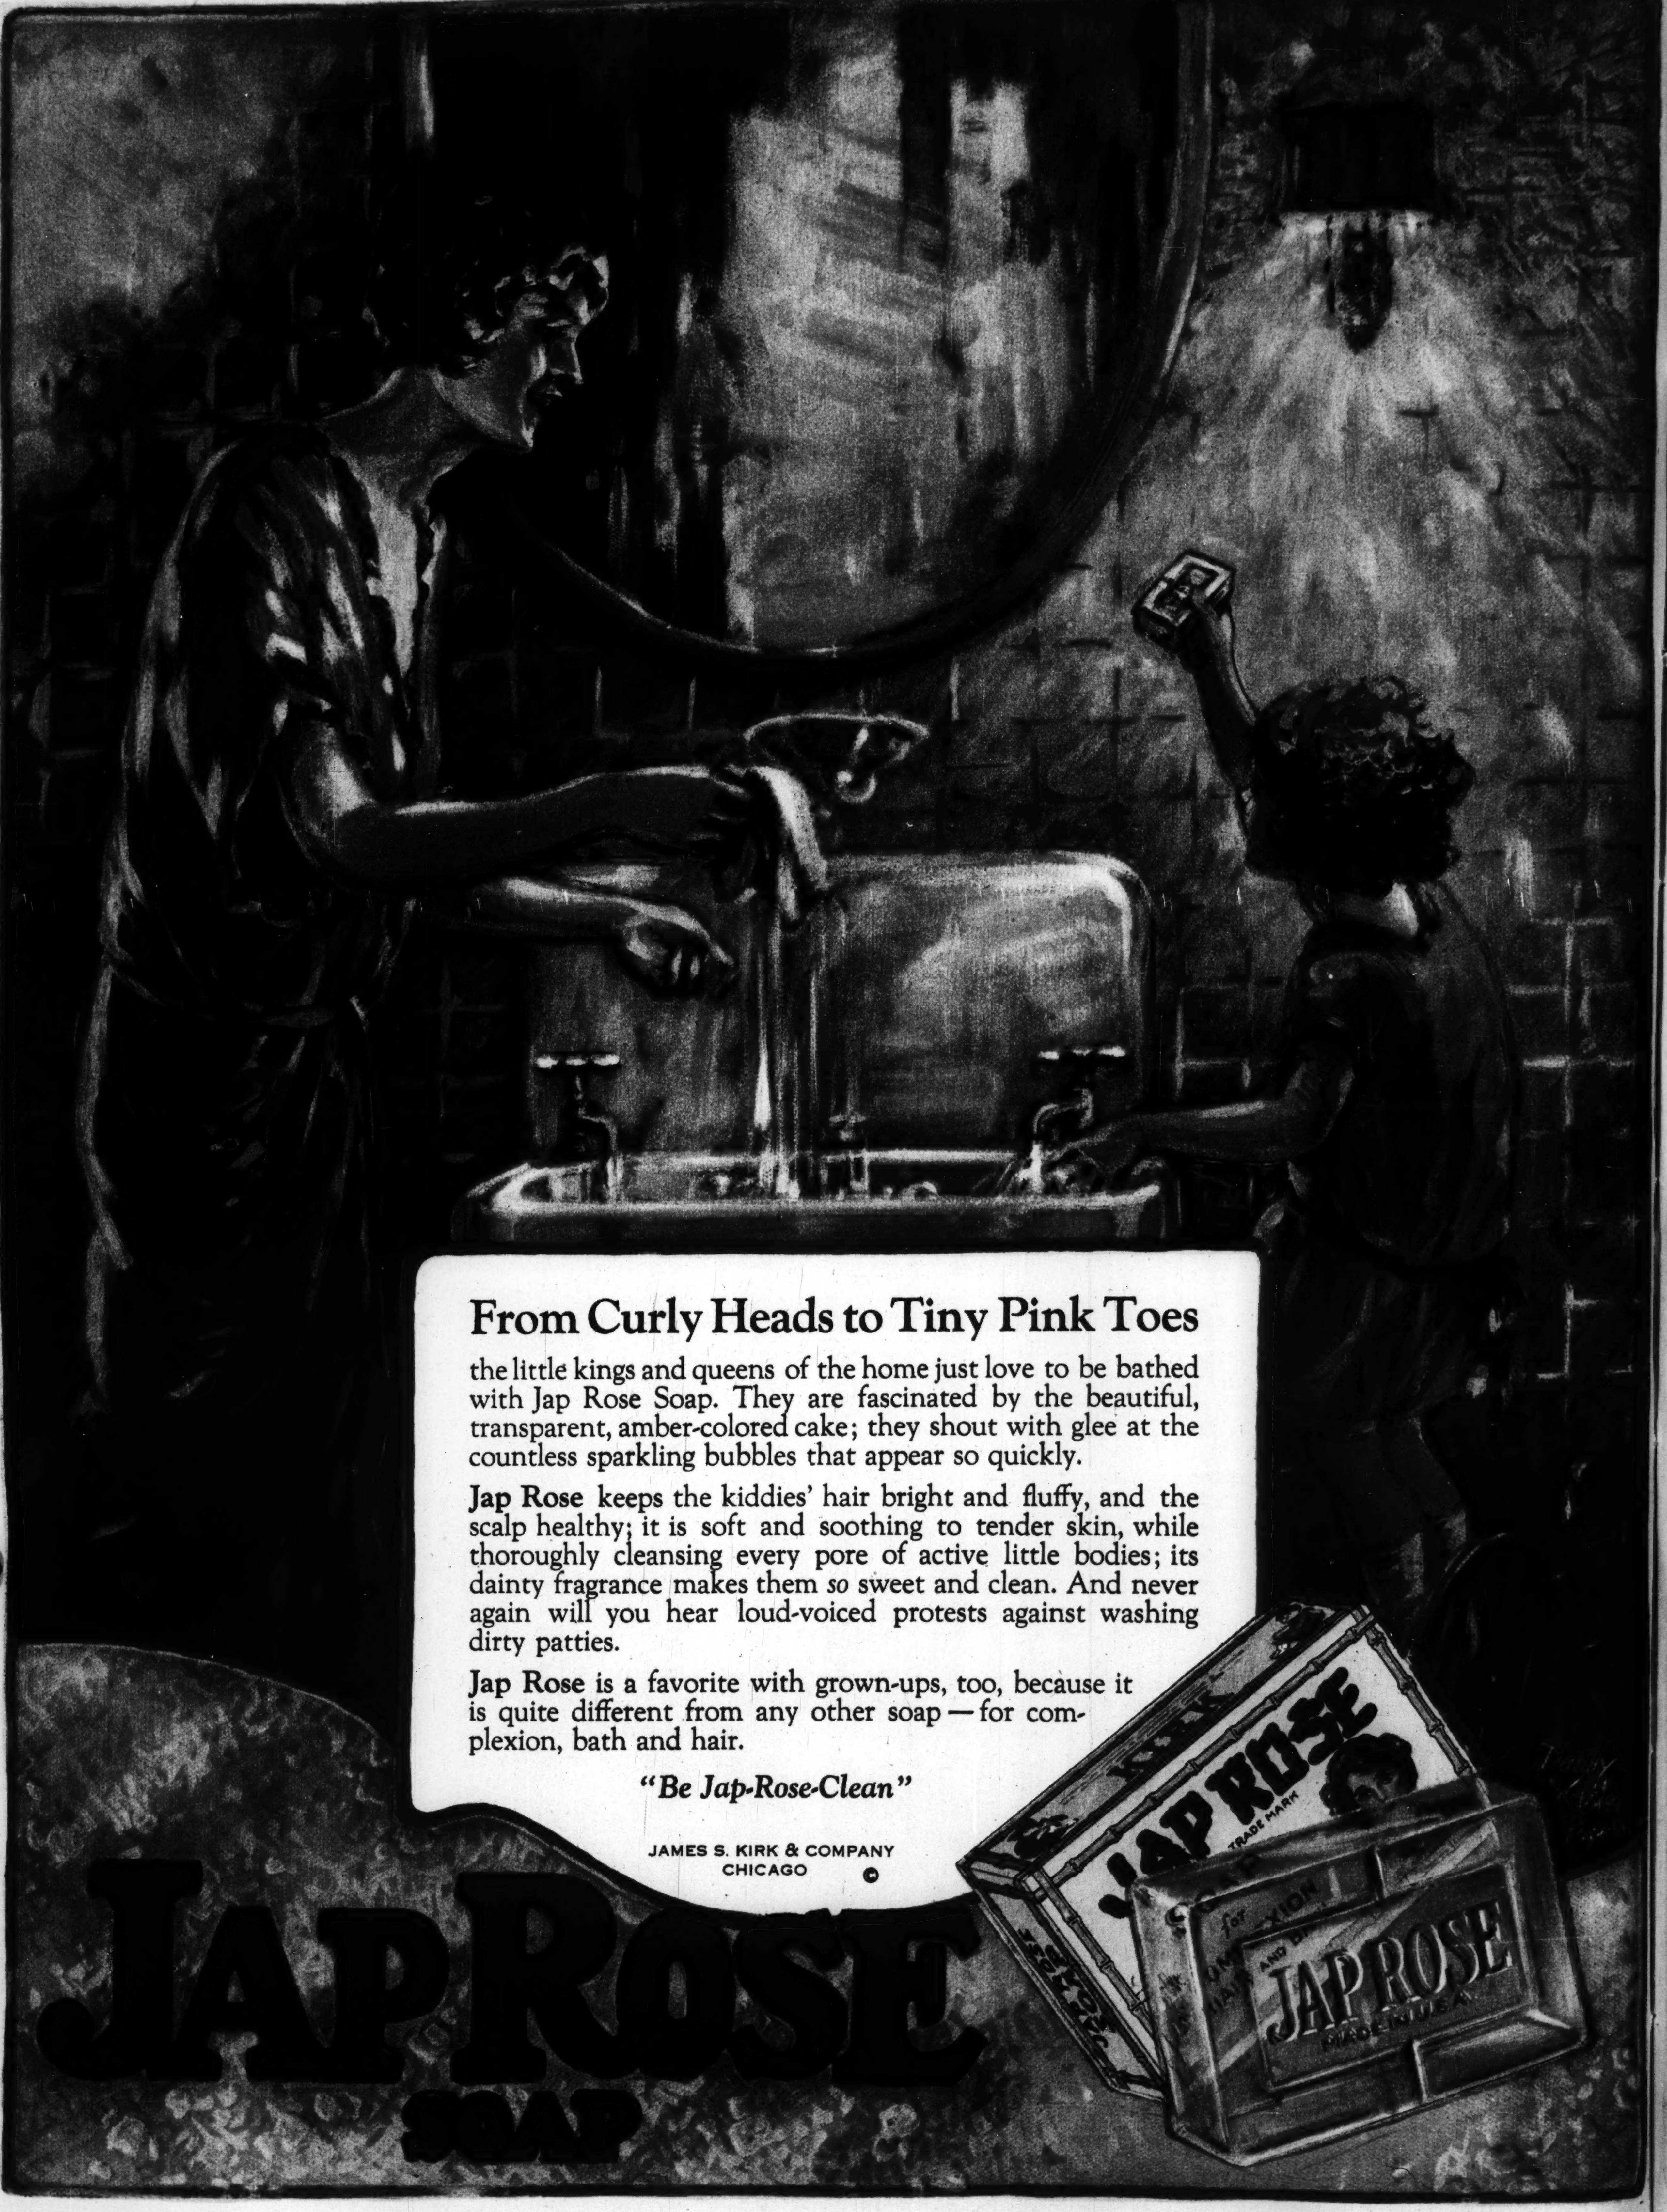
A FATHER AND MOTHER, nothing more in the face of tragedy despite eminence of position, stepped from the train at Ludlow, Vt., whence they proceeded by motor to Plymouth to bury their son. Following the President and Mrs. Coolidge are the boy's grandfather and John, the remaining son. Erect, calm, unflinching, this stricken family gives instinctive obedience in a terrible hour to traditions inbred through Puritan centuries. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



NO POMP, NO PAGEANTRY HERE; only a severe simplicity, as the President's son is laid to rest. Only the unpretentious grief of family and village folk, yet it is profoundly more impressive for the absence of ceremony. On this terrace, among green Vermont hillsides at Plymouth, Calvin Jr. sleeps beside four other generations in the Coolidge plot. At the center, beside the grave, stand the Rev. Mr. Wells and the Rev. Mr. Pierce; and to the left, the President and Mrs. Coolidge, with John and his grandfather. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



SYMBOL OF A NATION'S MOURNING—Unostentatious as the first family's grief, this simple wreath on the White House door told of the younger son's passing. (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



From Curly Heads to Tiny Pink Toes

the little kings and queens of the home just love to be bathed with Jap Rose Soap. They are fascinated by the beautiful, transparent, amber-colored cake; they shout with glee at the countless sparkling bubbles that appear so quickly.

Jap Rose keeps the kiddies' hair bright and fluffy, and the scalp healthy; it is soft and soothing to tender skin, while thoroughly cleansing every pore of active little bodies; its dainty fragrance makes them so sweet and clean. And never again will you hear loud-voiced protests against washing dirty patties.

Jap Rose is a favorite with grown-ups, too, because it is quite different from any other soap — for complexion, bath and hair.

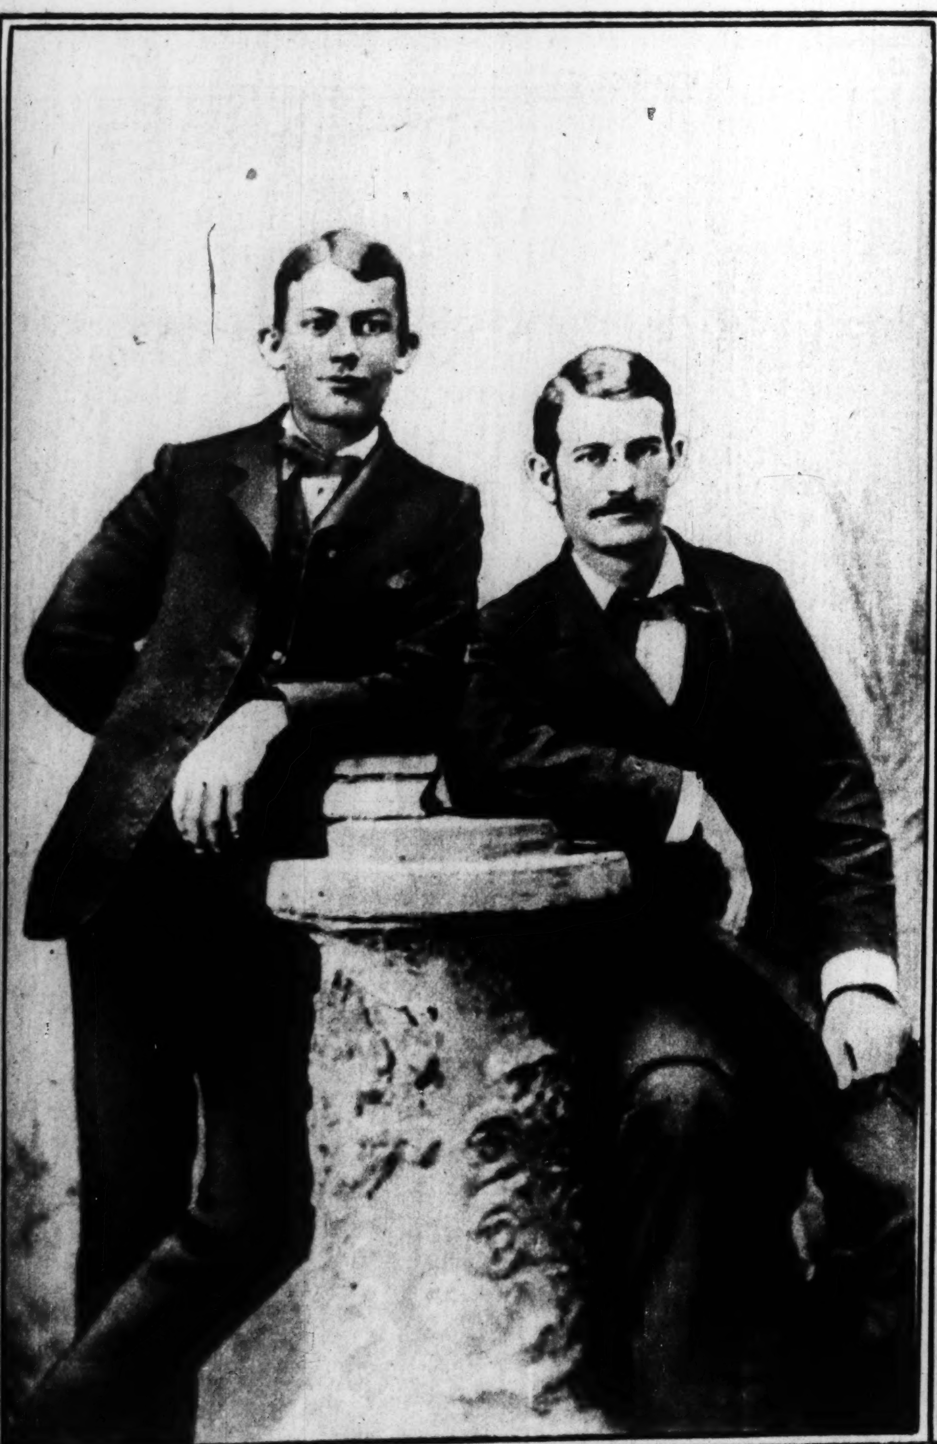
HER FATHER MAY BE PRESIDENT—The former Miss Julia MacDonald Davis, daughter of John W. Davis, the Democratic standard bearer, photographed with her husband, William McMillan Adams, at the time of their wedding last fall at the Davis summer home on Long Island. Do you detect a remarkable resemblance between the two?
(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

MRS. JOHN W. DAVIS smilingly contemplates the possibility of moving to the White House. She became Mrs. Davis in 1912, Mr. Davis' first wife, for whom his daughter was named, having died in 1900, hardly more than a year after her marriage.
(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

VICE-PRESIDENTIAL PROSPECTS more particularly engage the attention of Mrs. Mary Louise Harnsberger of Ashland, Neb. She is the daughter of Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, newly famous as Mr. Davis' running mate on the Democratic ticket.
(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



THE BRYAN BROTHERS IN 1888—A "'way back when" picture taken in Salem, Ill., when the vice-presidential nominee (at the left) was twenty-one and a student at the old University of Chicago, and William Jennings Bryan, then given to the adornments of mustache and burnsides, was a budding lawyer of twenty-eight.
(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

GOV. BRYAN'S SON, Silas M. Bryan, is a youthful gentleman, though already he exhibits the family tendency toward baldness. He is now an energetic practicing attorney of Minneapolis, Minn.

"THE AVIATOR," an impressive heroic figure by Augustus Lukeman—shown here with his handiwork—is to be cast in bronze and erected by Mrs. Louis Bennett of West Virginia in honor of the American fliers who died in the world war. Mrs. Bennett's son, Lieut. Louis Bennett, was one of those killed, and this will be her seventh memorial. She was the first American woman to place a window in Westminster Abbey in memory of British airmen who lost their lives, and she has erected a church in France in the town where her son died.

LOCATING HIDDEN PERILS at the bottom of the sea has become a matter of marvelous accuracy with this device, newly adopted by the United States coast and geodetic survey. A long strand of stout wire cable is dragged along, suspended from twenty to sixty feet under the surface, by two specially designed vessels, each at an end of the cable, and when submerged reefs or other impediments to navigation are encountered a signal is instantly given. These models in miniature illustrate the new method of sounding.

MARY AND DOUG—Another of their perennial travel pictures, showing them this time in Berlin, where the film stars received an enthusiastic welcome. The north pole and the island of Yap, according to the best available records, are now the only points on the earth's surface where the Pickford-Fairbanks family have not as yet been accorded the conventional ovation.

SHE'S A COP!—Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, wife of Gen. MacArthur, formerly superintendent of the military academy at West Point, has been appointed a special officer on the Manila police force, her husband being now detailed to duty in the Philippines. Her first exercise of authority was the arrest of a Filipino who was accused of beating his horse. Mrs. MacArthur, before her recent marriage, was Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks, widely known in New York and Washington society.

HE DROPPED IN A HURRY—A parachute jump was on this balloonist's program, but he hadn't intended to make it 100 feet from the ground. He did so, perforce, when his craft burst into flames. Not being too far away, he was caught by an enterprising photographer, whose picture gives evidence that the daredevil didn't make his getaway a moment too soon. It happened during a holiday celebration at Des Moines, Iowa. (Photograph from Wide World)

TOY SHIPS, TOY DOCKS, TOY STREETS they look like, but they are not. The picture, taken with a camera pointed straight down from an airplane, shows the New York waterfront at the point where Twenty-third street meets the Hudson river. At the left are the Twenty-third street ferry slips, with one ferry berthed, another nosing in, and a third on its way out. The long piers are those known as Nos. 62, 61, 60, and 59 (reading from left to right). They are used by the International Mercantile Marine company, two of whose liners may be seen with their decks strangely and almost indecently exposed. Just behind the ferry slips at the left is Thomas F. Smith park. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood)

WALES ON A HORSE—The dashing heir to the British throne, who may be seen in America next month, changing ponies in a polo match which he helped his team lose to opponents by 7 goals to 1. He doesn't look just at ease. Neither does the pony. Maybe both had the same horrible suspicion that something was bound to happen. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

From sunny climes comes the flavor of Clicquot Club Ginger Ale!

WHEN the day's a broiler and your mouth is parched, you're tired. That's a rule of nature. And it prescribes refreshment . . . . and when you take a pleasant, cooling drink of something good, you're suddenly on your toes again . . . . Take nature's hint when you're thirsty. A nice cold glass of sparkling, bubbling, refreshing Clicquot Club Ginger Ale is exactly the prescription you need. At the first mouthful, the fatigue will lift. It has the effect of a breath of fresh air when you've been closed up all day. And it tastes so good.

Where do the ingredients come from that make Clicquot Club Ginger Ale so fragrant, so golden, so sparkling—and so wholesome, too? From the sunshine lands of the earth! Jamaica, Cuba, the groves of California, the shores of the Mediterranean—and the cool, deep springs of our own country.

Its pure ingredients

These ingredients are so tempting, so pure, so genuinely good that, balanced and proportioned as they are in Clicquot Club, they could not fail to make a perfection drink. That is what Clicquot Club is. Take the quality of ginger that goes into it. Genuine ginger root this is—just as it is grown in tropical Jamaica. No better ginger root can be bought. Its cost is about four times that of most ginger.

Its fruit-grove fragrance

Take the perfectly blended fruit flavors that give the fragrance to Clicquot Club. No better limes and lemons can be grown than those from which these fruit flavors are derived. They have the sunshine flavor in them from California, from the Mediterranean. Take the sugar that sweetens Clicquot Club—the highest grade of granulated sugar produced. And the water that goes into Clicquot Club is not only the purest possible to secure, but it's exclusive to the Clicquot Club springs and to Clicquot Club Ginger Ale. And from spring to capped bottle, Clicquot Club Ginger Ale is not touched by hands. There is nothing artificial about it.

They all like it

Clicquot Club Ginger Ale has been made for thirty-nine years. The connoisseurs found it good. Then the public did too. Today they all like it. It is used in the great homes and in the small ones. At the smart functions and the little informal dance, in exclusive hotels and hospitable friendly homes.

Today Clicquot Club Ginger Ale is more widely bought than any other ginger ale. Nobody finds it overcharged or undercharged with bubbles. Nobody finds it too sweet. Nobody finds it too dry. Nobody finds the ginger zest too great or the fragrance other than what it should be.

Clicquot Club Ginger Ale is a summer drink and an all-year-round drink. It is so wholesome that it is given in hospitals to convalescents. It is good at meals and good between meals. It is good for grown-ups and good for youngsters.

It is good to buy Clicquot Club by the case and have it in the ice-box. Buy it from your grocer, your druggist, or your confectioner—and remember that it is worth insisting on. The Clicquot Club Co., Millis, Mass., U. S. A.

"Keeping Pace with the Growth of Chicago"

THE MORRISON HOTEL

Where Rates Are Lowest, and Convenience Greatest

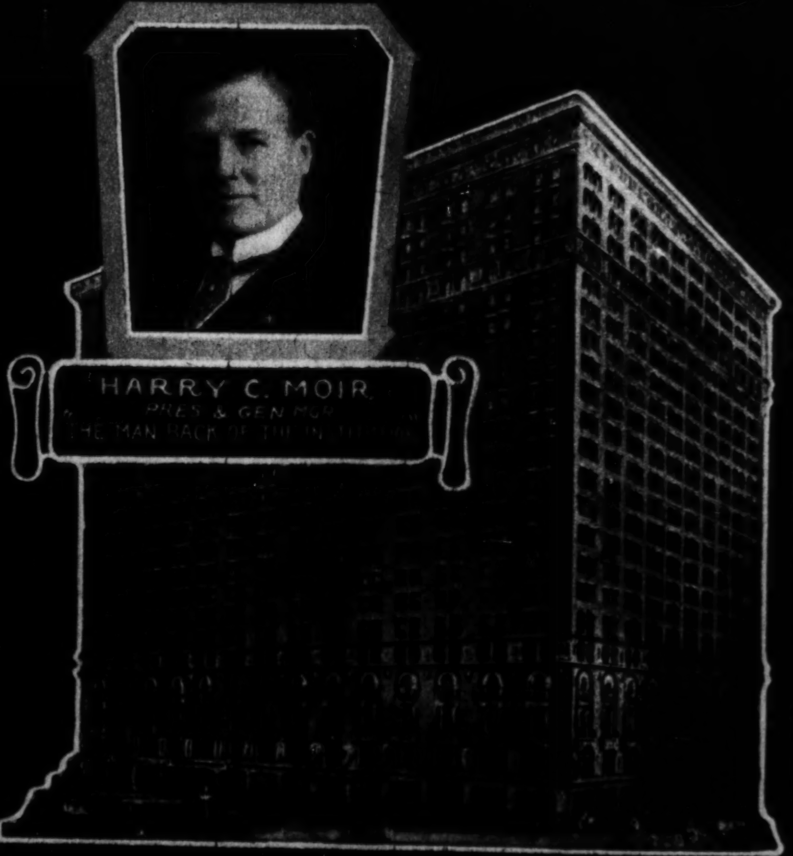
CLOSER than any other Chicago hotel to theatres, offices, stores and railroad depots, the Morrison Hotel offers to its guests the most convenient location in the city.

Yet they pay less, instead of more, for this privilege, as the store-subleases pay all the rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests. Only $3 or $4 is charged for rooms that would rent for $5 or $6 at other premier hotels.

A delightful spirit of friendly, informal courtesy has made "Morrison Service" proverbial with habitual travelers throughout America. The Morrison is famous also as the home of the Terrace Garden, "Chicago's Wonder Restaurant," internationally renowned as the best-planned dance-and-dine rendezvous in America, with every seat commanding an unobstructed view of the entertainers; the cuisine is perfect, and the sparkling dance music is of the most artistic quality.

As the city grows, the hotel grows to meet its needs. Its 1,054 outside rooms, each with bath, will, when present plans are completed, be increased to 3,400—the largest hotel on the face of the globe.

Chicago Municipal Pier (eastern end) showing Concert and Dance Hall



The New Morrison will be the world's largest hotel, containing 3,400 rooms.

CHICAGO MUNICIPAL PIER

NEARLY three years were occupied in building Chicago's immense Municipal Pier, the cost amounting to $4,000,000. In the foreground of the illustration appears the eastern end of the structure, with the concert and dance hall, which has seating capacity of 4,000. The Pier is 292 feet wide, and extends 3,000 feet into Lake Michigan, affording 8,500 feet of dockage, which is extensively used for lake passenger traffic and package freight. Serving as a playground for large throngs of holiday makers during the summer months, this vast structure is typical of the progressive spirit which continually provides for the needs of Chicago's growing population. Construction began in October, 1913, and the Pier was opened on June 8th, 1916.

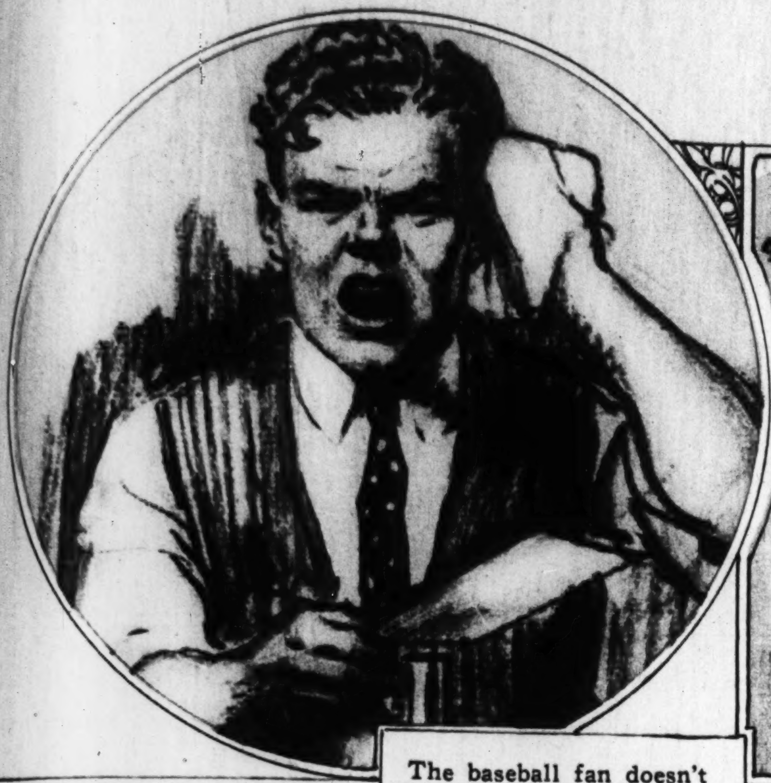
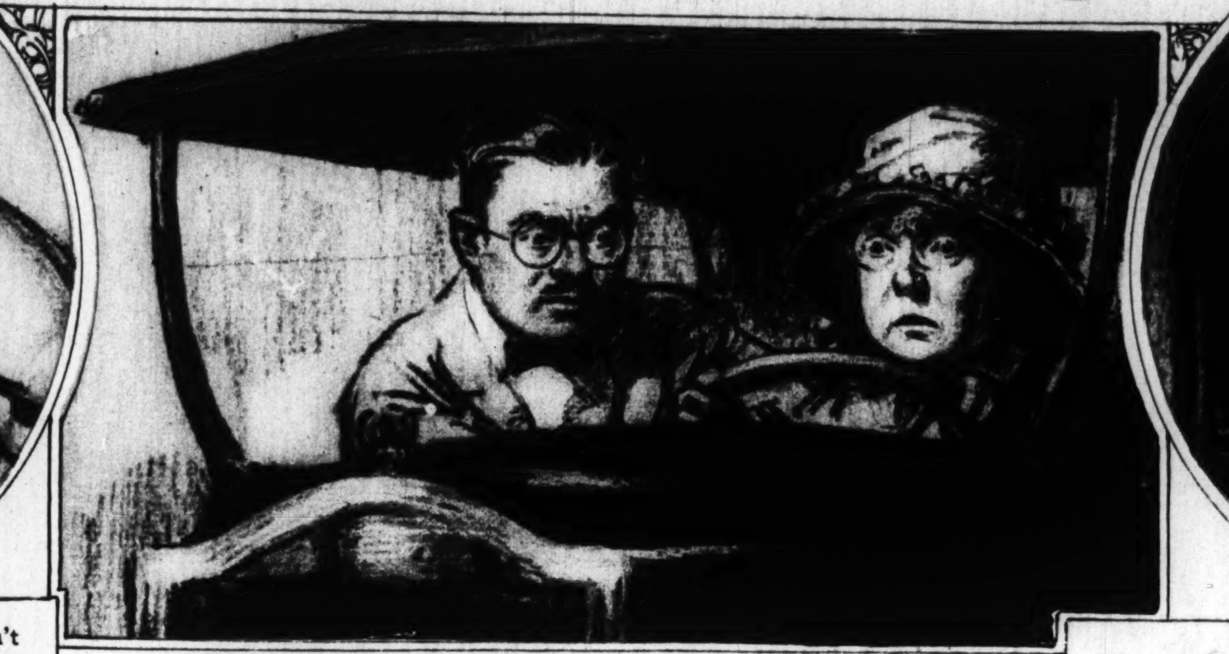
THE SUMMER MAN

By W. E. HILL

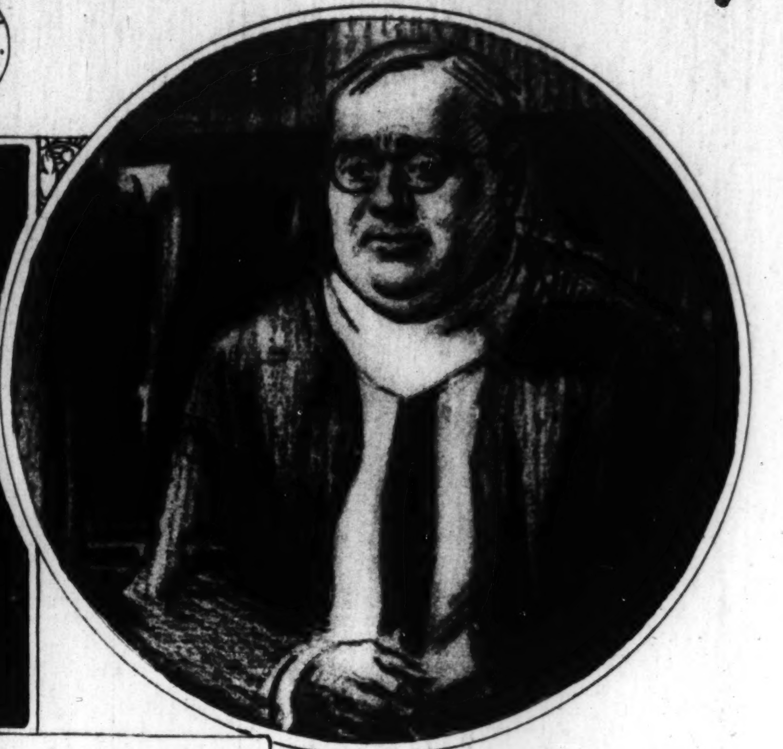
Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune



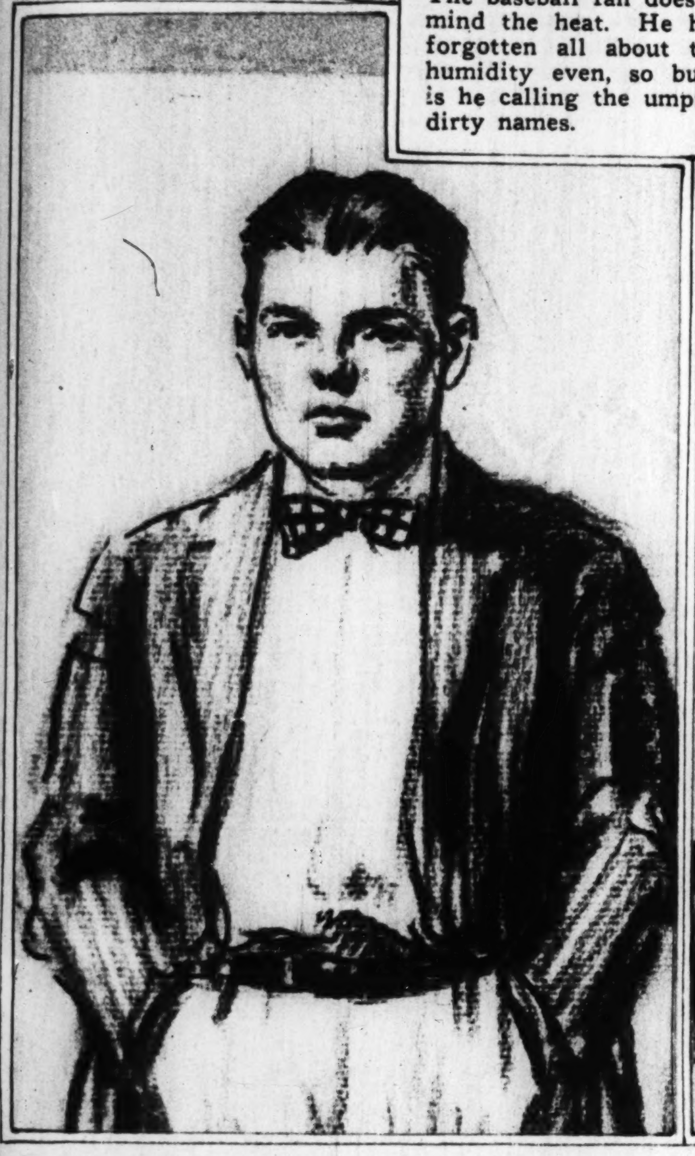
The baseball fan doesn't mind the heat. He has forgotten all about the humidity even, so busy is he calling the umpire dirty names.



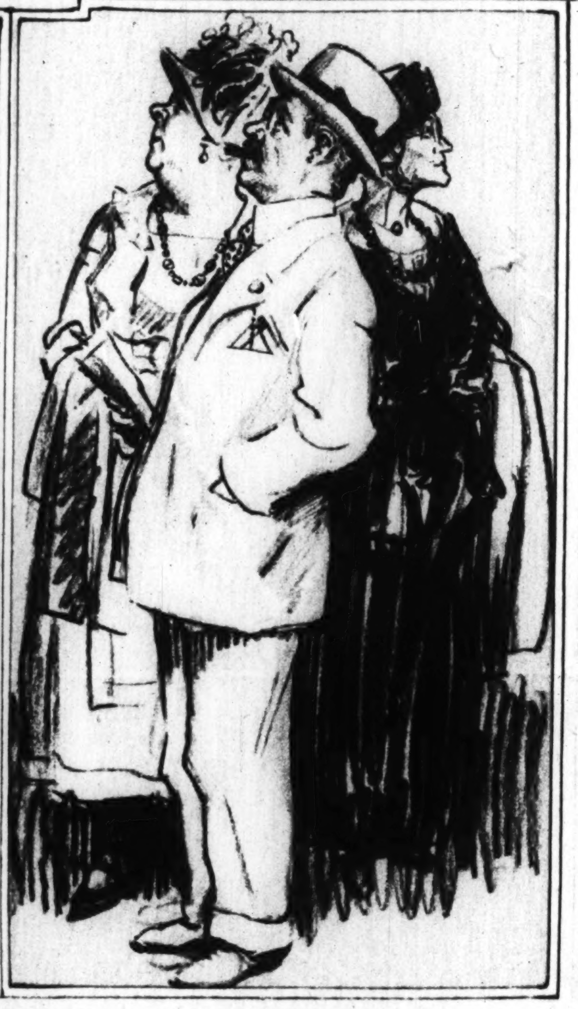
The automobile salesman has his innings during the summer months keeping elderly ladies who want to drive from running into brooks, ditches and telegraph poles.



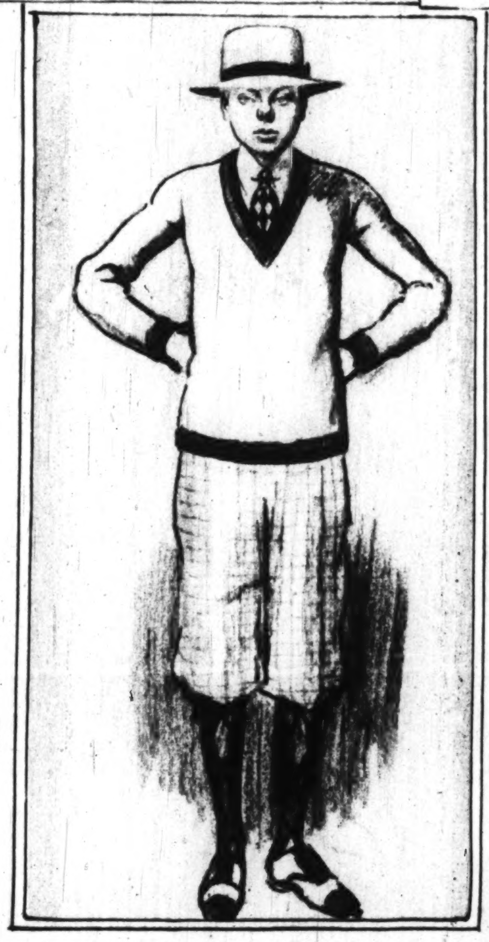
The man in the club car who swelters and wilts perceptibly during the heated term.



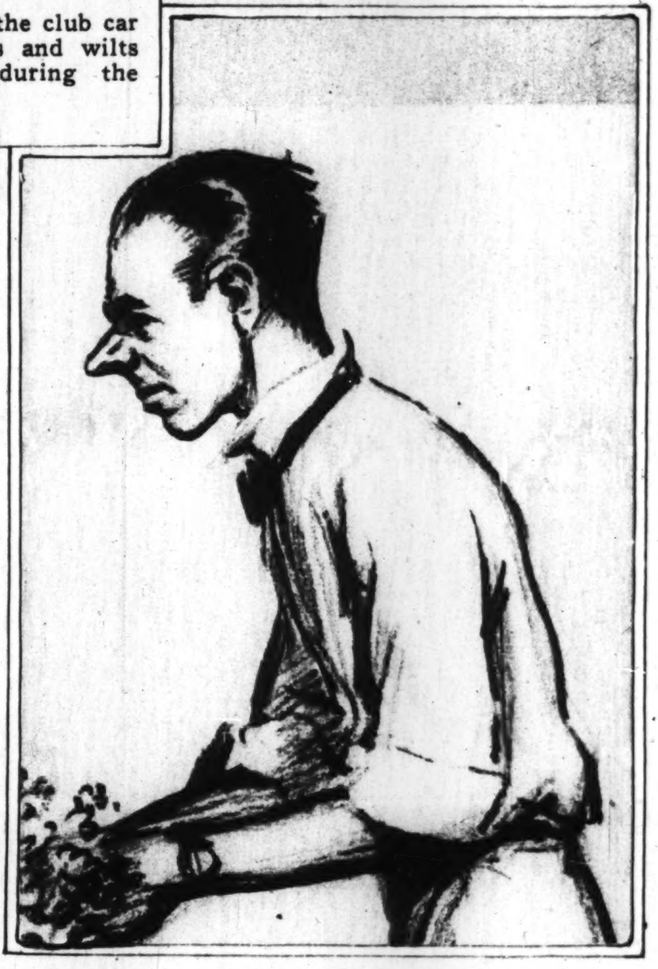
Last year's freshman is very grown up. He's a sophomore now.



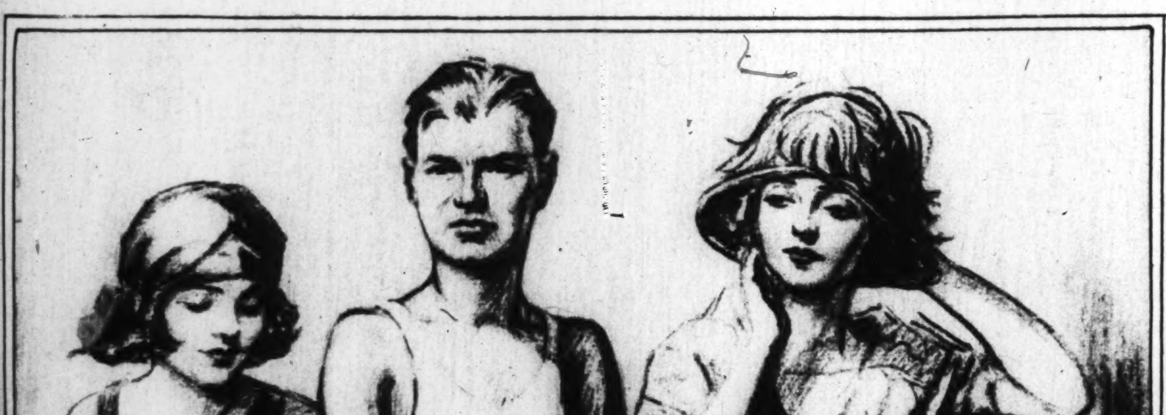
The summer tourist. The Woolworth building may be all right and, of course, it is taller, but Ed and the little wife would rather have the Masonic temple, back home, any day.



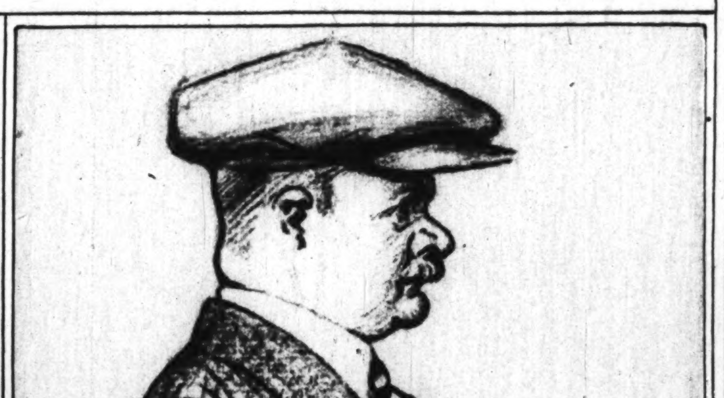
The dressy week-ender. He was told to bring his old clothes because "you know we dress as we please at Camp O-So-Cosy," and these are what he brought.



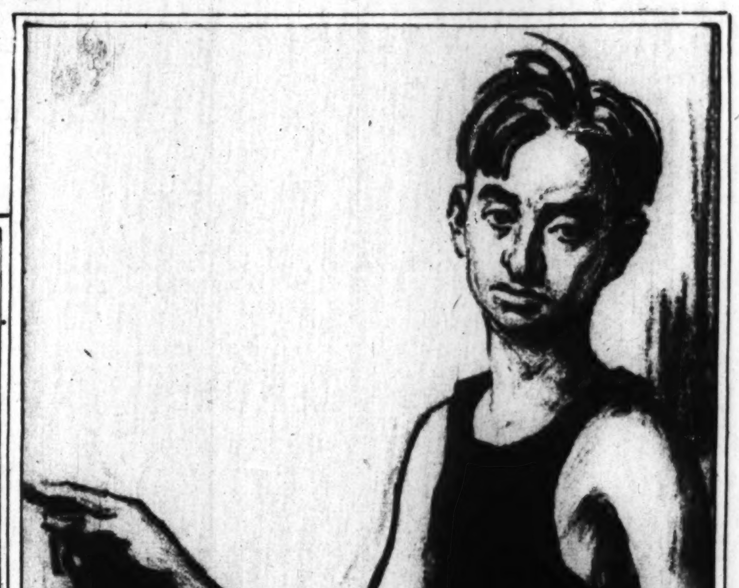
The home brewer is very busy these summer days, gathering berries and hoarding bottles for anti-Volstead purposes.



The bathing Apollo. The thin young man, who looked so well in his clothes all last winter, is proving a sad disappointment on the bathing beach.



The country gentleman who for three, or possibly four, months of the year is every inch the landed proprietor.



The garage assistant who points the way. His innate sense of left and right is often lacking.

The world has waited long for this THE Waterproofed Stucco

Now It's Here!

A permanent stucco had to come. Public demand for a material of such beauty and appeal was so great that it was only a question of time until some one was to discover how to render stucco permanently beautiful.

Water was the enemy to be overcome. Water was responsible for cracking stucco walls and dirt-stained stucco surfaces. It was to overcome these evils positively and permanently that we perfected in Elastica A THOROUGHLY AND PERMANENTLY WATERPROOFED STUCCO.

And now as proof positive of our accomplishment we point to the fact that the thousands upon thousands of homes built with Waterproofed Elastica remain today as attractive, fresh and substantial as any newly-built stucco home.

Where Water Cannot Penetrate Deterioration Does Not Occur

Water cannot penetrate Elastica. Water cannot stain its surface. Cannot impregnate it with dust and dirt and grime. Because Elastica sheds water like an oiled surface—throws off the dirt particles which otherwise would be absorbed with the rains and snows of the years.

AND MORE IMPORTANT STILL. Water cannot seep through this material and reach the wood or metal lath underneath. That is why the supporting lath under an Elastica exterior will not rot nor corrode. That is why the exterior itself will remain intact, unmarred and unblemished.

You wouldn't use kitchen soap to wash your hands with—but

You practically do wash your hands with it when you use it in your dishpan every day

Important Uses for Lux

In addition to the well-known uses recommended by great fabric manufacturers—silks, woolens, fine cottons and linens—try Lux for

- Family Laundry
- Automobiles
- Porcelain
- Linoleum
- Dishes
- Rugs
- Paint
- Shampoo

Use harsh kitchen soap for washing your hands? It's the very last thing you'd think of.

But every time you do dishes your hands are in harsh stinging soap suds at least half an hour. It's just as if you washed your hands—three times a day—an hour and a half all told—with kitchen soap. That's longer than you spend in washing them with mild toilet soap!

Your hands don't have to be subjected to the ravages of kitchen soap another minute. Wash your dishes with Lux. Lux is easy on the most sensitive skin.

Kitchen soap actually burns out the natural oils that were meant to keep your hands soft and supple. It's the free alkali in it that plays havoc with your skin. Even nature's abundant supply of oils isn't proof against this strong ingredient.

Lux won't sting your hands after dishwashing. There's nothing in it to dry out the necessary beautifying oils of your skin. It is so pure it preserves them. It is as good for them as fine toilet soap.

Just one teaspoonful

For the breakfast or luncheon dishes just a teaspoonful of Lux will be enough. Perhaps you'll need a little more for the dinner dishes if you have many to do.

Don't let your kitchen shelf be without its box of Lux. Use it always for the dishes and rid your hands of that dishpan look. You can get the big new package now as well as the regular size. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

"A BLESSING TO OVERWORKED HANDS"

"Women who do their own work ought to know that a teaspoonful of Lux in a full dishpan of water will wash the dishes in half the time and prove a blessing to overworked hands."

Mrs. L. S., Des Moines, Ia.

"PRACTICALLY all my life has been spent in Alaska. I had a good appetite but was losing strength and was told that I was troubled with malnutrition. My daughter read the Yeast advertisements and induced me to try yeast. It seems to be that the lack of fresh fruits and vegetables gradually affected my system, and that yeast supplied some needed element. Anyway it rejuvenated me!"

(Extract from a letter from Mr. Theodore A. Church of Berkeley, California)

Be well!

Skin - stomach - and intestinal trouble banished - with this simple fresh food

"I AM a regular walking, talking advertisement for Fleischmann's Yeast. All my life I have been practically an invalid, due to constipation. When Fleischmann's Yeast was recommended to me, I ate three cakes a day. And after six weeks' treatment was cured.

"The cure has been permanent. I don't think there is a greater example than myself of what Fleischmann's Yeast can do for one, suffering as I was for 37 years with chronic constipation and all the ills that follow."

(A letter from Mrs. W. C. Matthews of New Orleans, La.)

"AT THE age of 15 my forehead was a mass of blackheads and my appearance that of an unhealthy girl. One day father sent me to a little place by the sea. While lazily turning the pages of a magazine I came upon a Fleischmann's Yeast advertisement. I bought six little squares of Fleischmann's Yeast and continued the treatment for six weeks. Before very long my eyes had a different expression, my forehead was clear. And at the first party I went to after that my friends crowded round me asking me what I had done to myself. Those cakes of yeast have been a godsend to me. Today I am a happy wife and the proud mother of a five months' old boy."

(Extract from a letter from Mrs. Carano of Staten Island, N. Y.)

THESE remarkable reports are typical of thousands of similar tributes to Fleischmann's Yeast.

There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach, and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active. Health is yours once more.

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water (just hot enough to drink)—before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast, when taken this way, is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation.

Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today! A few days' supply will keep fresh in your ice box as well as in the grocer's.

Write us for further information or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 591, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

"THROUGH overwork and worry I was a nervous, dyspeptic wreck. I tried at the time for additional life insurance, but was advised that I was not a good risk. I purchased a cake of Fleischmann's Yeast, determined to give it a trial at least. To my surprise and amazement it agreed with me, and in two weeks' time I began to sleep better and eat better. Today I can eat and relish food that a year ago I avoided in horror, and this spring I secured the much prized insurance policy."

Fleischmann's Yeast comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form.

"WAR service left me with shattered nerves and indigestion. I became a walking wreck, unable to eat or sleep, and was obliged to abandon work. Then I recalled that I had enjoyed my best health when employed as a brewery machinist. As I thought it over I discovered the reason, and next morning I bought a dozen cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast. Two weeks later I was better and in four months' time the stomach trouble had vanished. Today I can just about eat everything, and it takes a six cylinder alarm clock to awaken me in the morning!"

(A letter from Mr. E. F. Caldwell of Los Angeles, Cal.)

RIDE 'IM, COWBOY! Yakima Canutt, cowpuncher extraordinary, leaps from his galloping pony and lands in a cloud of dust with the horns of a cavorting steer in his embrace. A few seconds more and he will have this large portion of bucking beef hog-tied, down and out. Yakima the spectacular, holder of the world championship trophy for all-around cowboys, is defending his title in the contest of the plains which ends at the Pendleton, Ore., roundup in September.

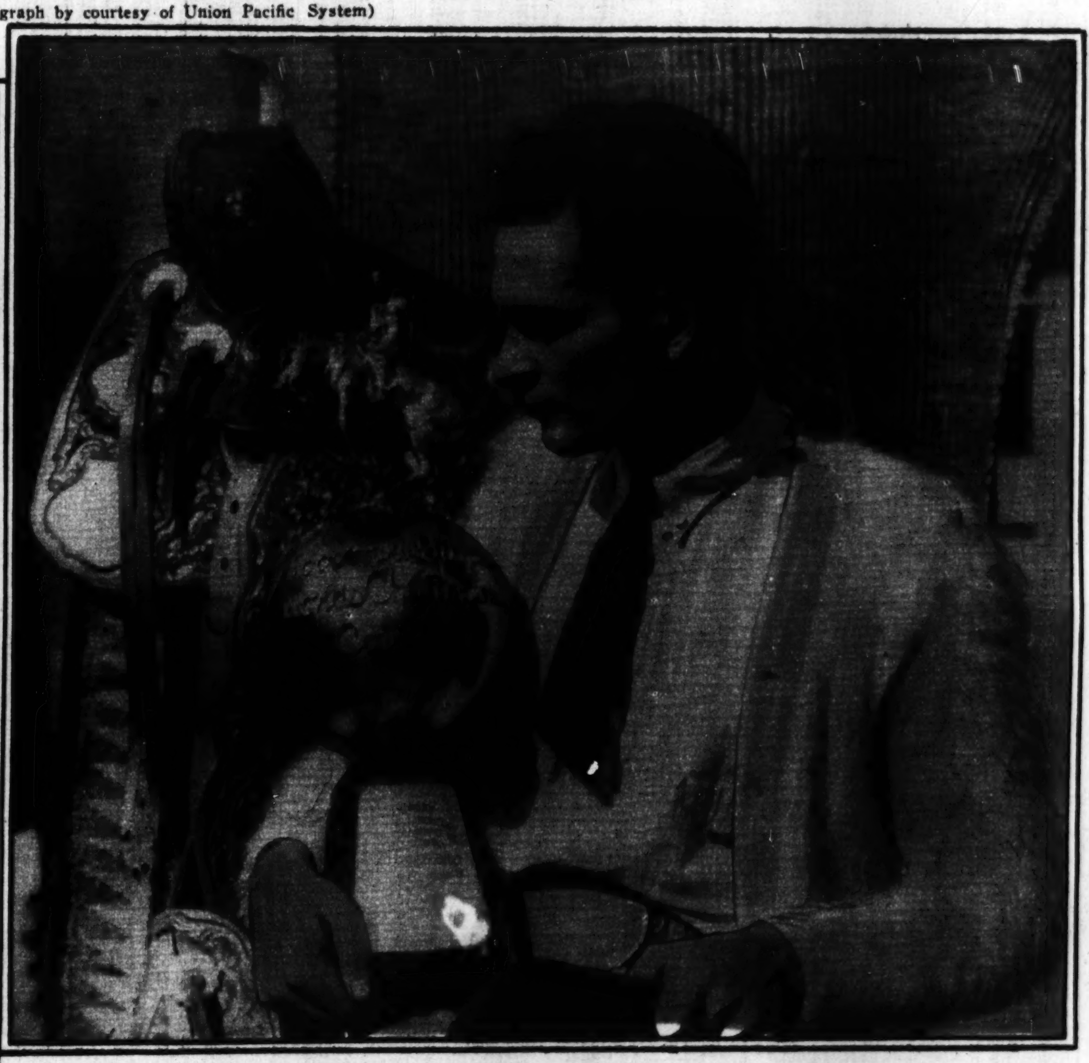
NOT A SEA SERPENT, for all the resemblance to some fabled monster of the deep. It's a giant tarpon, caught by the camera in a remarkable photograph at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. The "silver king" has broken water on a taut line, starting the turn of a back somersault with terrific momentum. With life fast ebbing he rises in a geyser of spray, fighting a last desperate battle for freedom.
(Photograph by Dimock from Wright through International)



THE WINNING OF THE WEST to Yakima Canutt, whom we have here in less fevered moments, meant the $2,500 gold and silver Roosevelt trophy, awarded in memory of the friend of the cowboy. It is this trophy that the champion of the ranches is defending, along with his title.

GIVE HIM TIME. Jack Dempsey won't pluck the 'cello in guitar fashion when he gets a little farther along with his musical career. He hasn't had much leisure for scales so far between sets at Hollywood. He should get along fast, with such assistance as he has here. It's the eminent Galli-Curci who drinks to him only with her eyes at the portable organ.

RUTH SIGNS UP FOR TRAINING CAMP—"The Babe" autographing bats and balls at the personal request of General Pershing for the citizens' training corps. A stick and a sphere are being sent to each camp, where they are to be awarded to the best batters. Mr. Ruth is more at home at the plate than with the pen, but these signatures will look better than copybook models to the recipients.

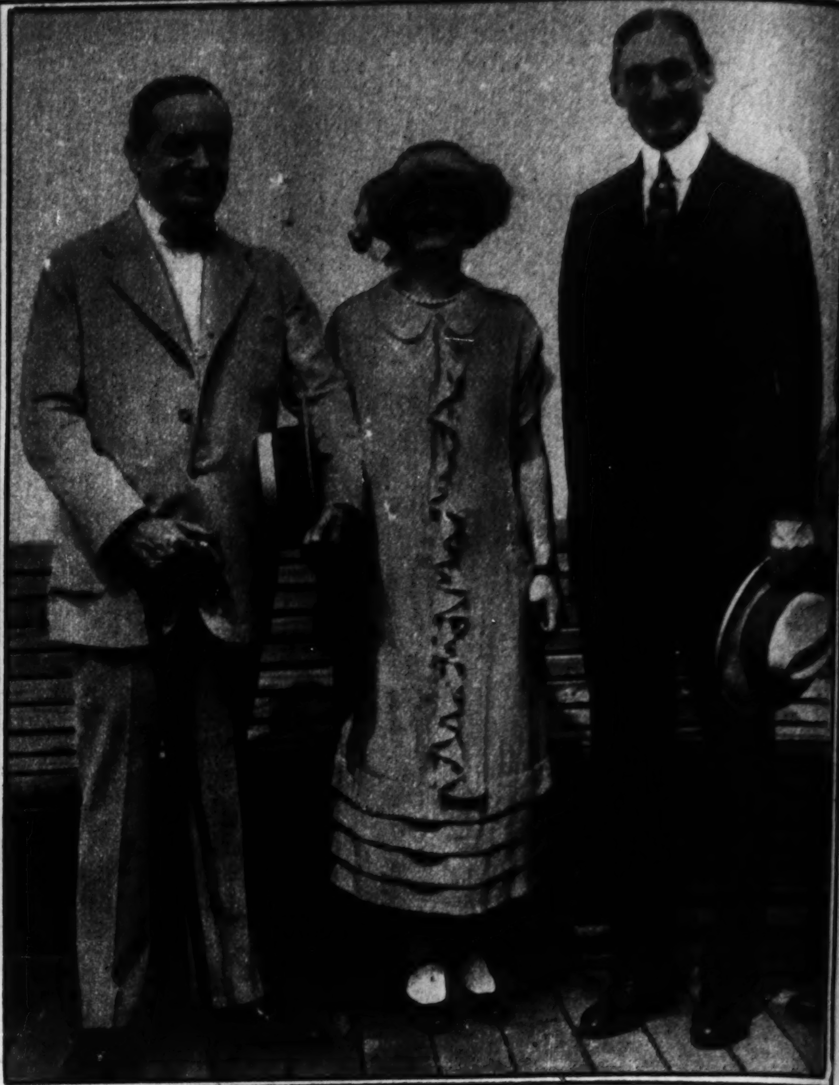
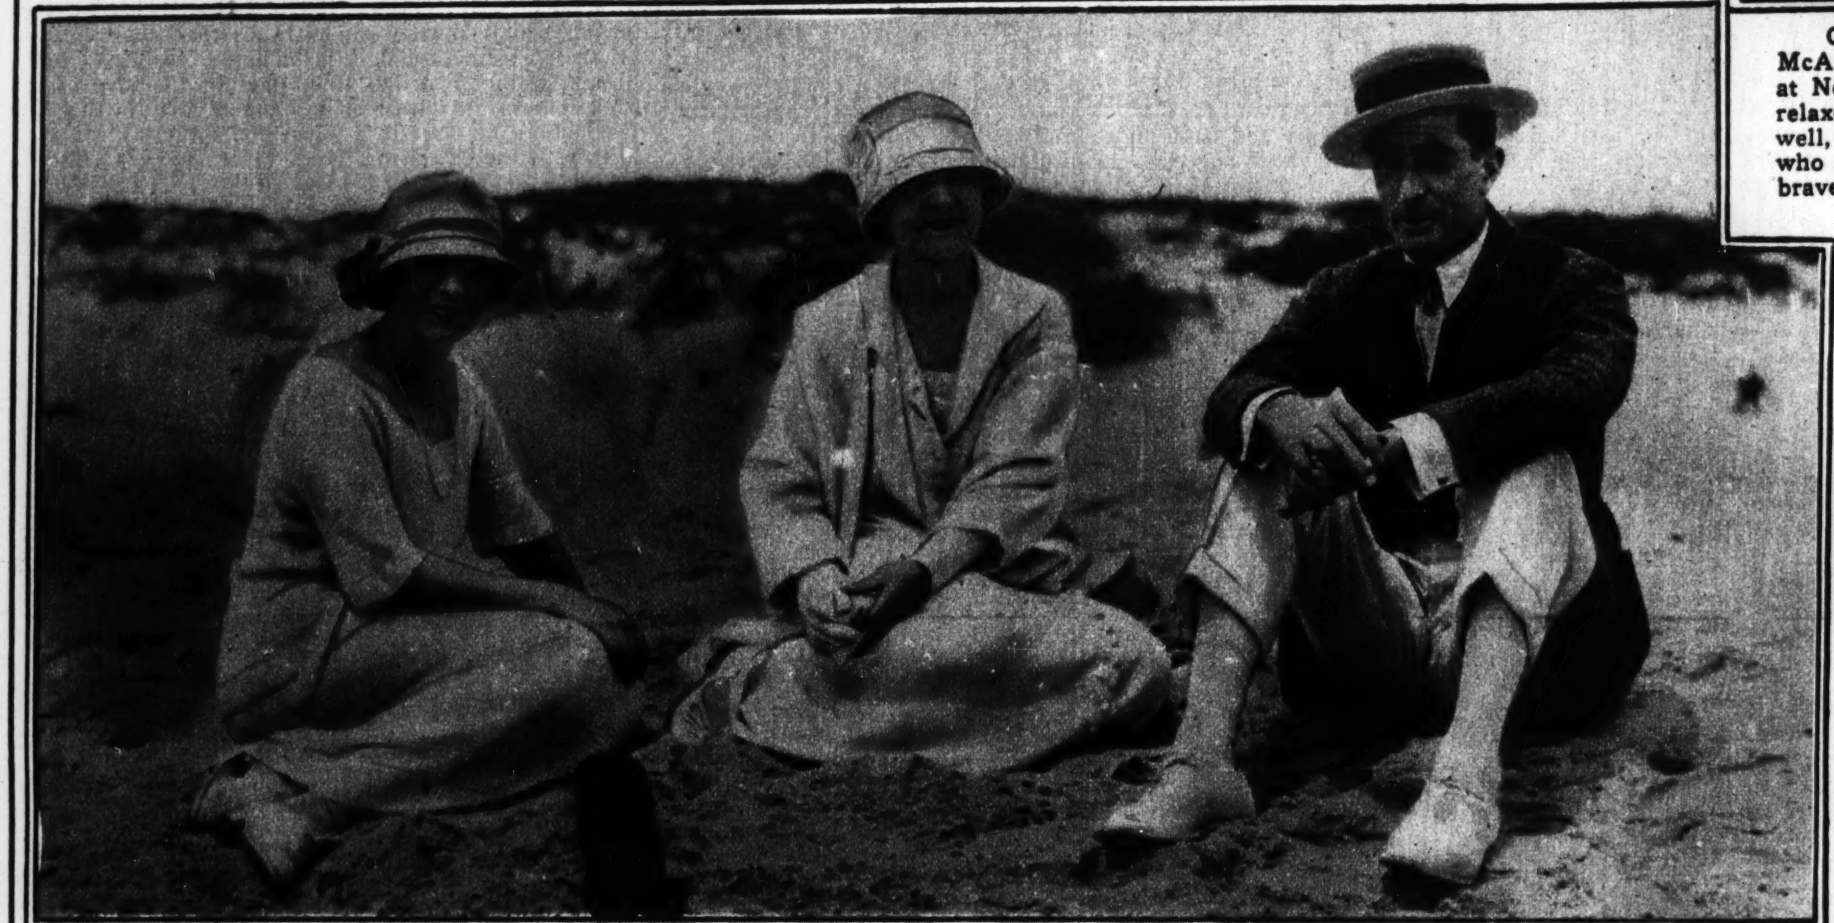
HE, TOO, WAS DEFEATED—Will Rogers, the comedian, who shared Mr. McAdoo's unwanted distinction in a small way by getting one vote at New York, with Rep. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Longworth and Pat Harrison, temporary convention chairman. "What are you doing here?" Mr. Longworth demanded. "I'm a reporter," Will replied, displaying his badge. "And you? You're no Democrat." (Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)



OFF TO A SELF-APPOINTED ELBA—William Gibbs McAdoo, the might-have-been president who met his Waterloo at New York, aboard the ship which carried him to Europe to relax—and forget. With him at the left are David Ladd Rockwell, Mr. McAdoo's campaign manager, and his daughter, Mary, who seem to have induced their defeated champion to bear up bravely. (Photograph copyright by Keystone.)



AN AMERICAN PRINCESS IN HER HOMELAND—Princess Rospigliosi (left) and the prince, her Italian husband, with Mrs. Rutherford Stuyvesant at Southampton, L. I. The princess, daughter of Edmund K. Stallo of Cincinnati and granddaughter of Alexander MacDonald, is heiress to many Standard Oil millions. Mrs. Stuyvesant, widow of a descendant of Peter Stuyvesant, was Countess de Wassenaer of Holland before her marriage. (Photograph from Pictorial Press.)

AT THE RACES—Mrs. Harry F. Sinclair, whose millionaire husband has at least two claims to public notice, at the opening of the meet at the Empire City track at Yonkers, N. Y. As you remember, of course, one of the reasons for Mr. Sinclair's prominence is his ownership of the famous Zev. And the other, indictment in the Teapot Dome affair. No more shiny nose!

Just the least touch of a dainty new cream smoothed over nose, chin, forehead; instantly the shine is gone—and those stubborn little spots of oil and moisture, too!

Powder lightly, if you wish. And there you are with a new freshness; the most alluring finish imaginable—fine, soft, smooth as satin!

This finish lasts for hours because Vauv does not just cover up shine, but actually prevents it by absorbing excess oil and moisture.

Absolutely harmless. Does not clog pores, but helps to cleanse them. An increasing benefit when used regularly—reduces enlarged pores; protects from summer sun and dust; covers freckles and other blemishes that the sun may already have caused.

Regular size tube 50c at all drug and department stores. Send 10c for sample tube—enough for a week's trial.

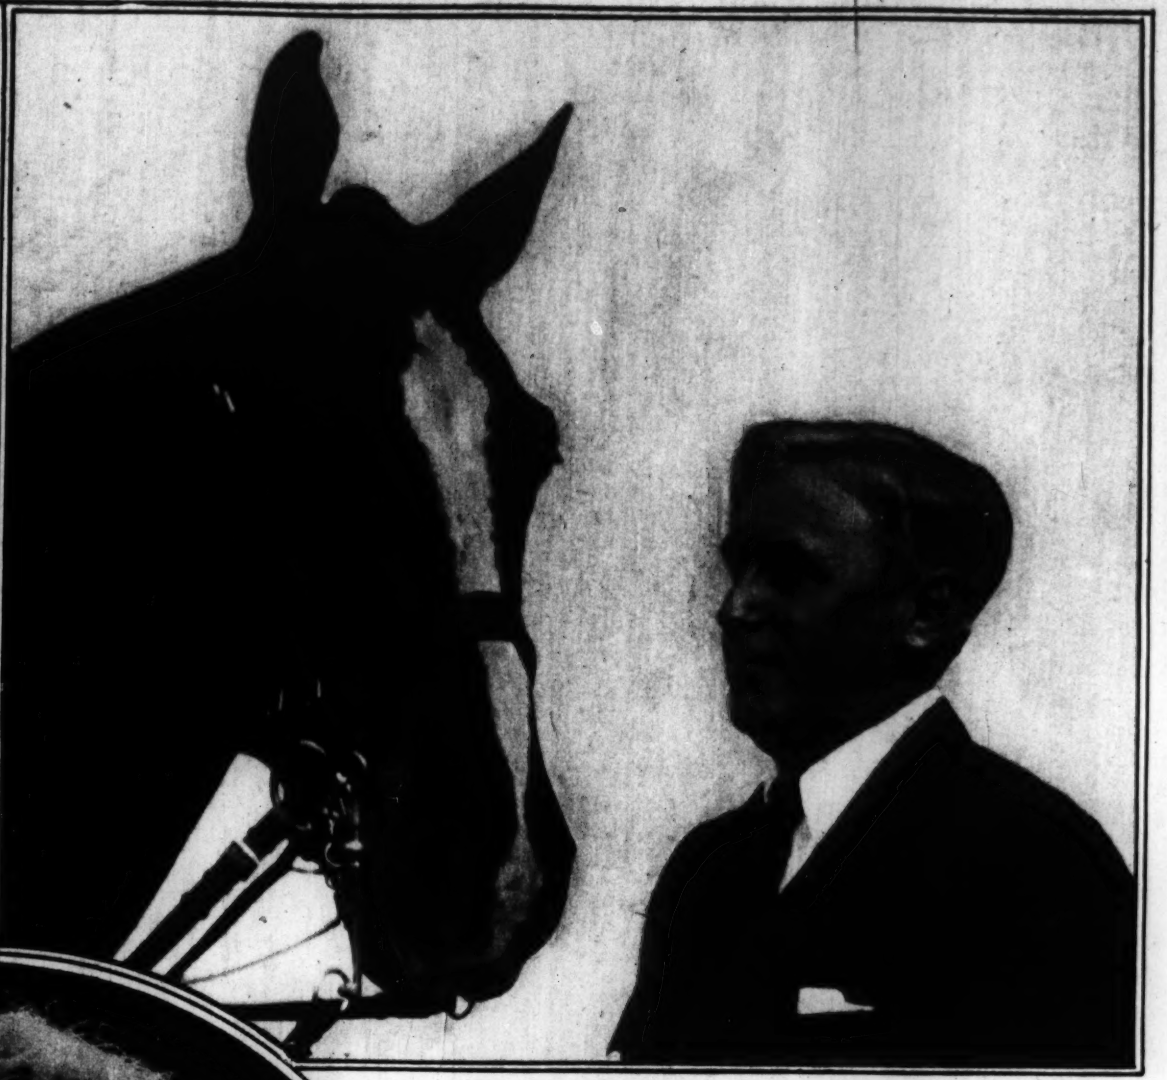
IF RAMON NAVARRO had stubbed his toe; IF Fred Niblo, the director, had chanced to slip; IF the camera men had tumbled off their ledge—this picture would not have been taken. (That's what makes it valuable.) It's a scene from "The Red Lily"—rather a scene of the making of a scene.

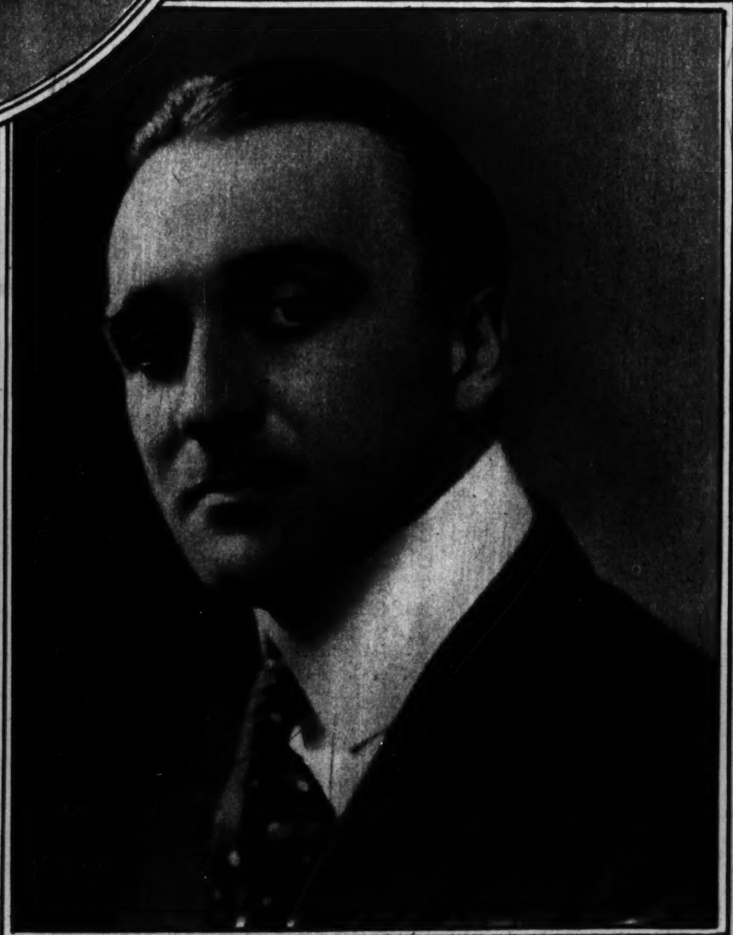


MACK SENNETT has a pal that never goes back on him. Pershing is his name. He is a beautiful 16½ hand chestnut jumper who knows what it is to walk off with a blue ribbon against a large field of jumping horses.

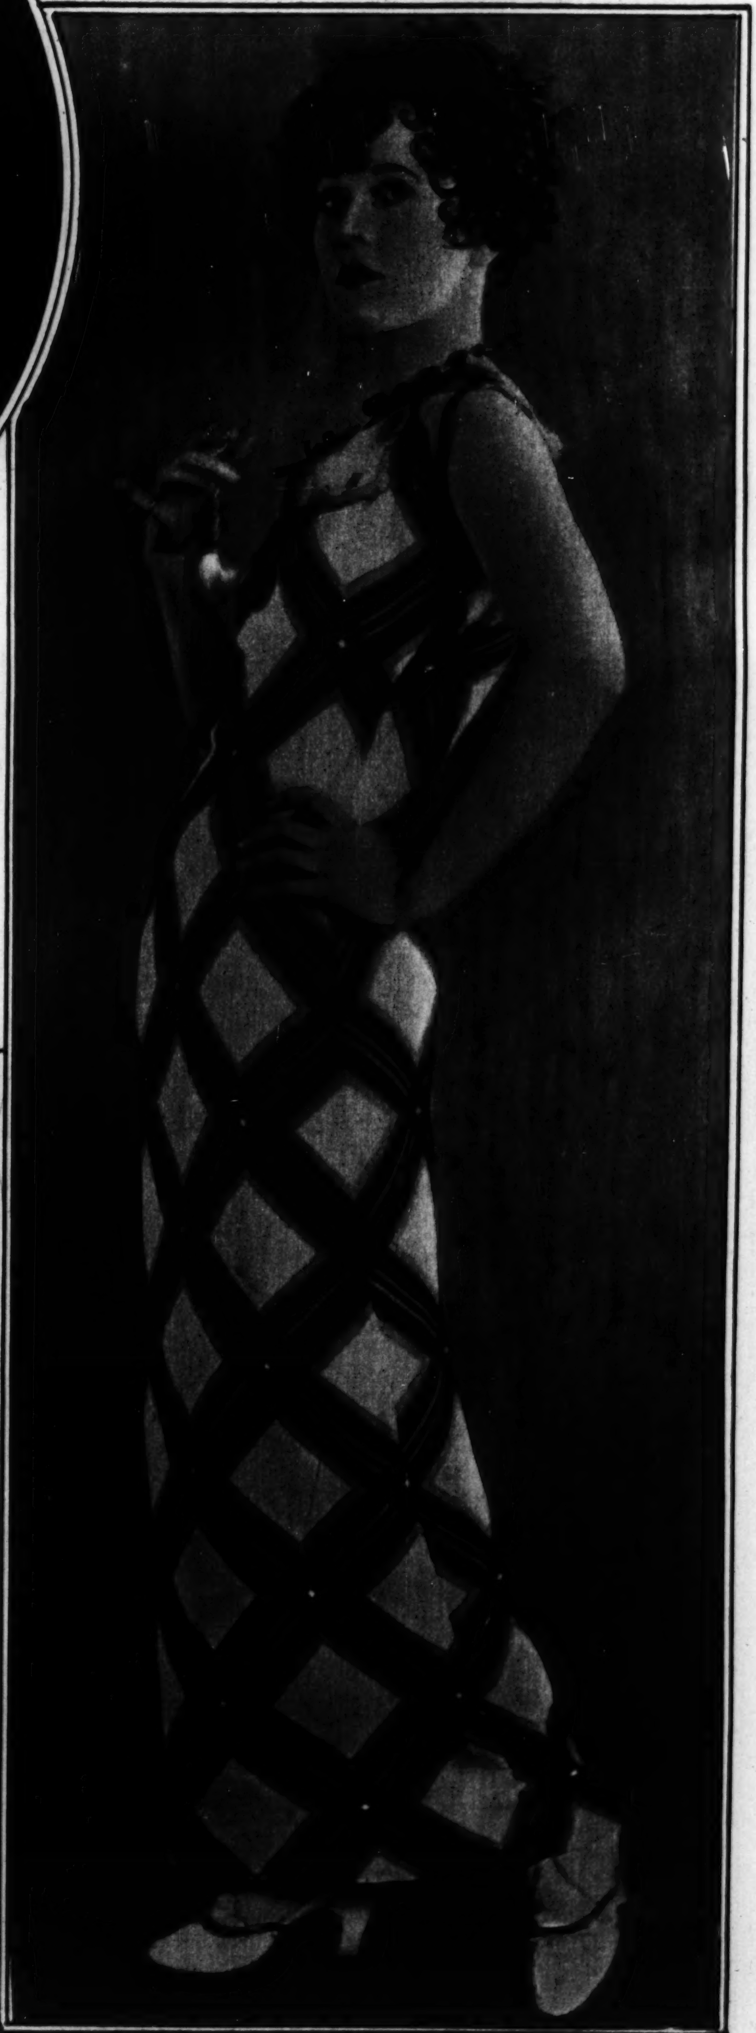
ANNA Q. NILSSON has appeared in a good many of the best motion pictures produced—and her acting helped to make them so. Her recent appearances have been in "Broadway After Dark," and "Between Friends." Her work in "Ponjola" was especially fine.

BARBARA LA MARR vamps her way through the pictures. "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" is her latest success. Lovely picture of her, don't you think?

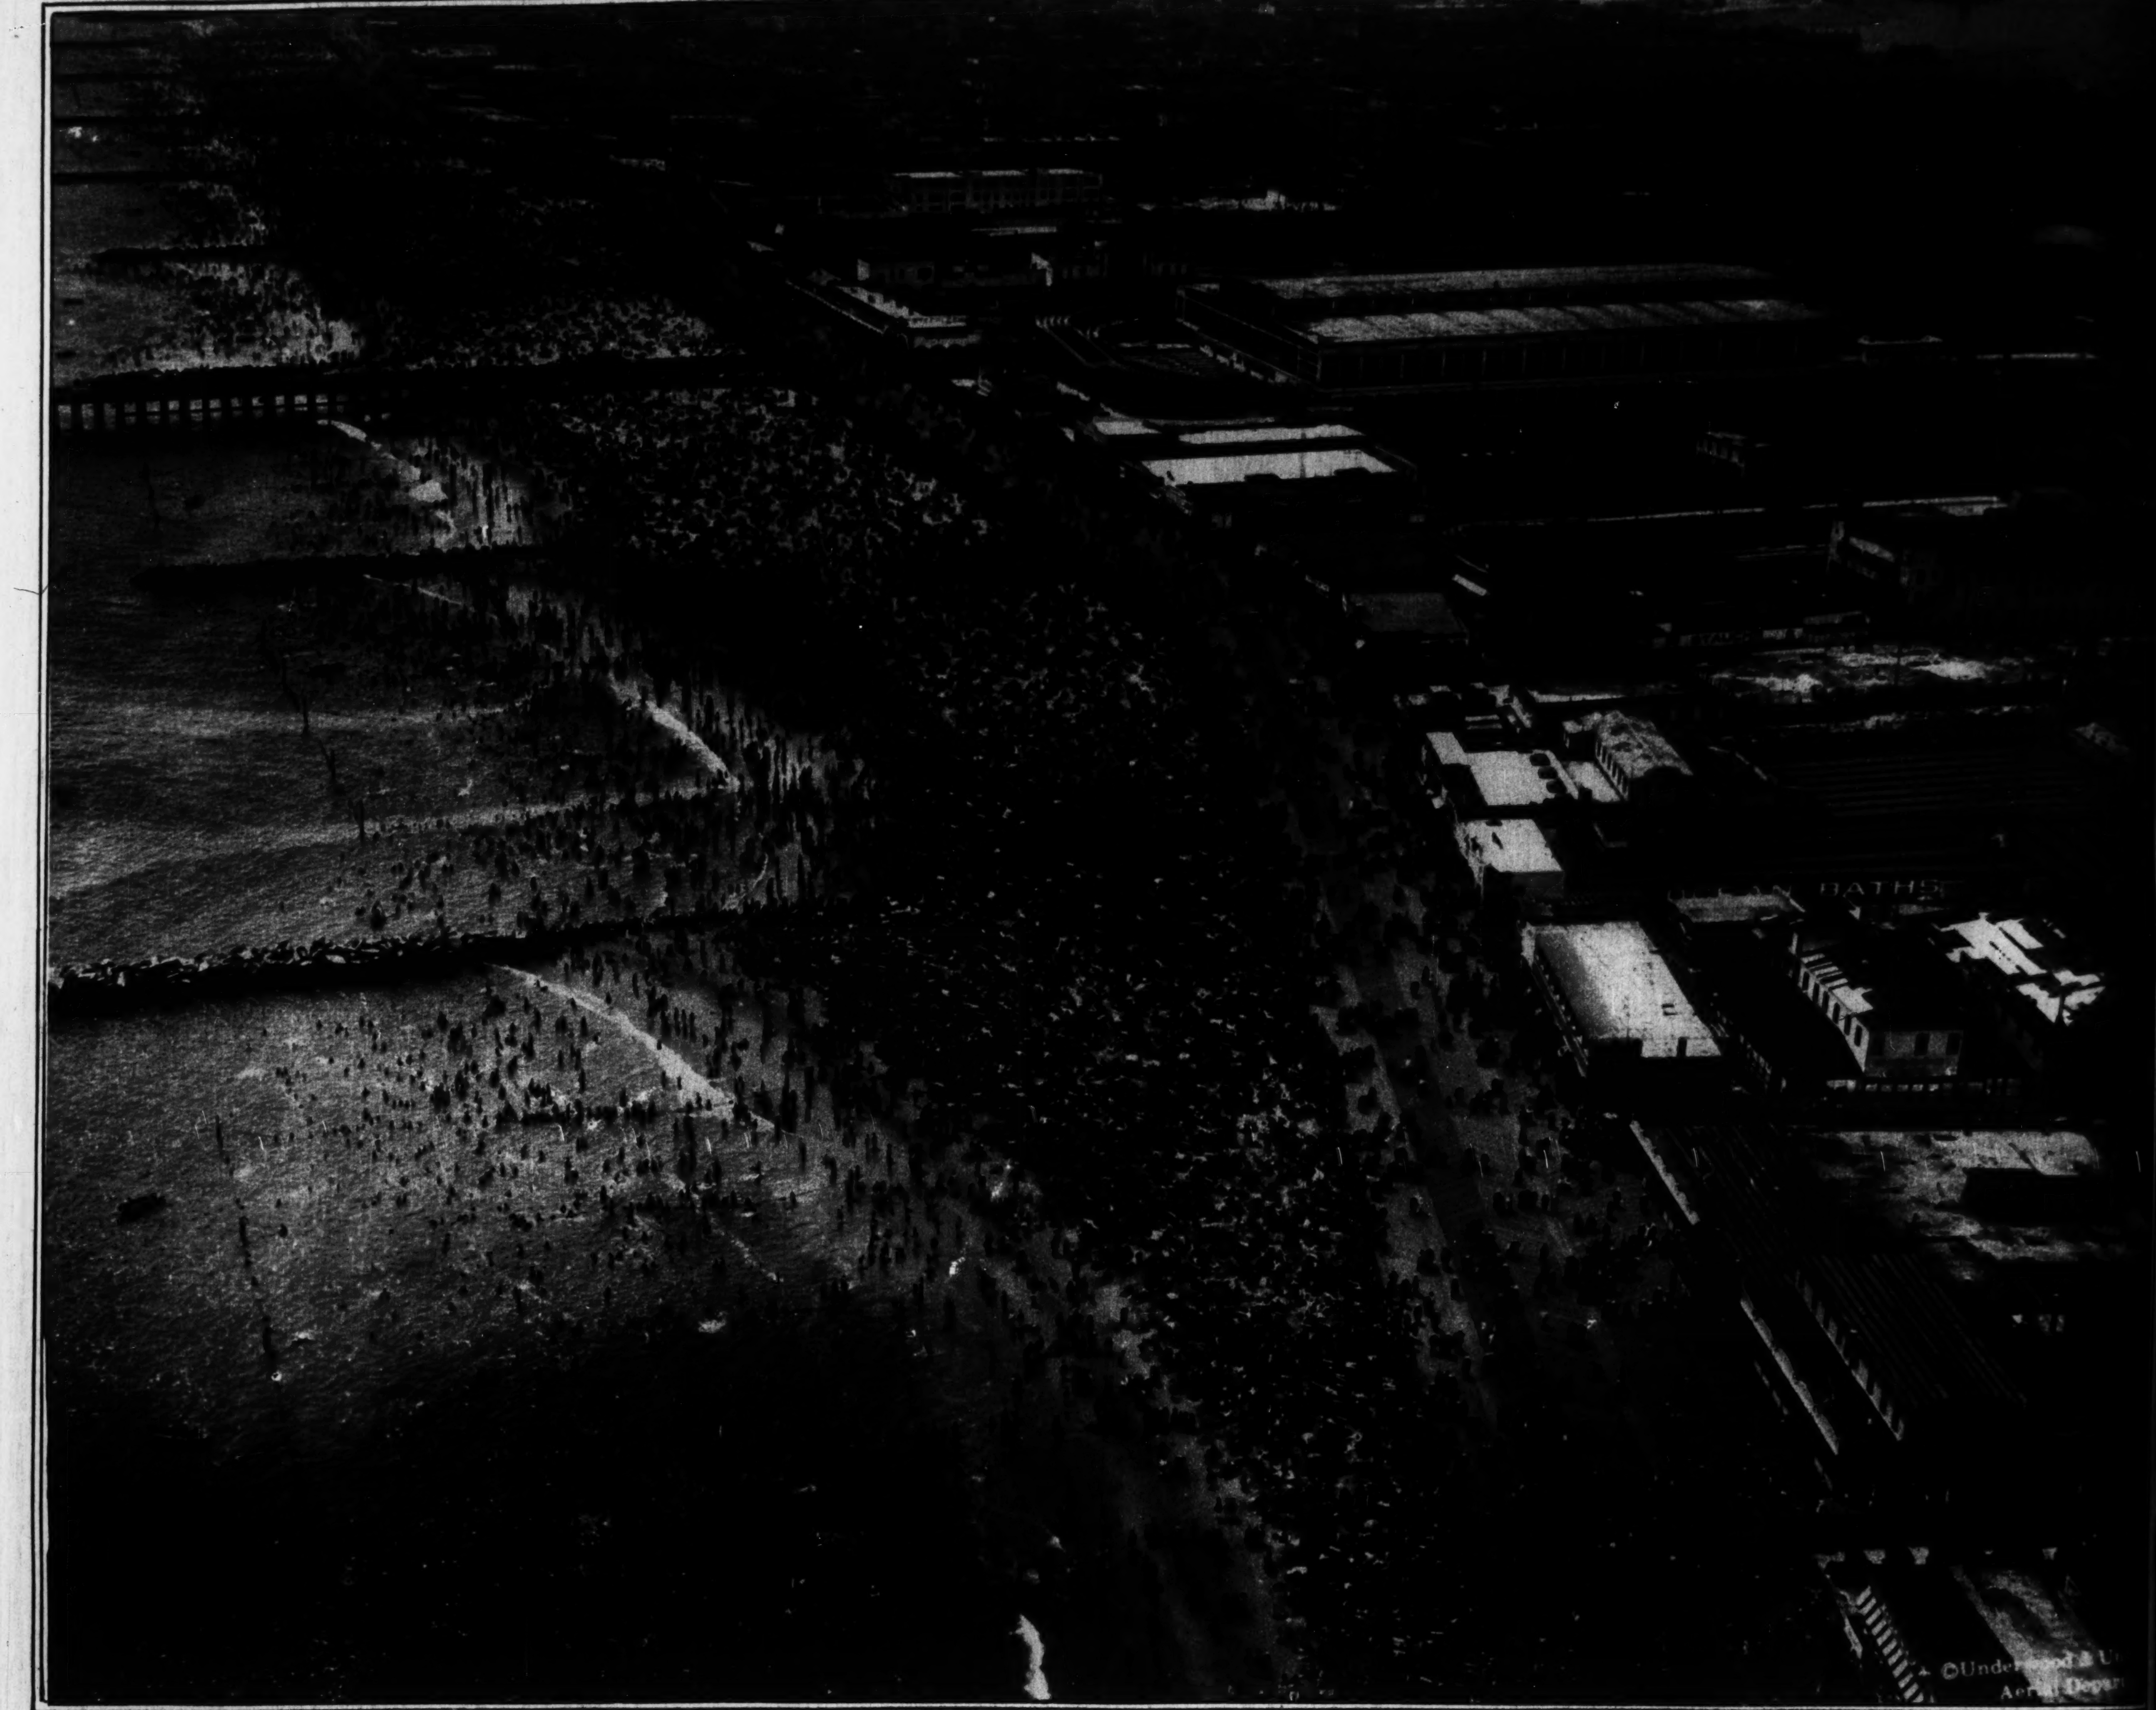
THIS IS ARABELLA BISHOP, just stepped from out the pages of Rafael Sabitini's novel, "Captain Blood," in the person of Jean Paige. Vitagraph is picturizing the novel.



WYNDHAM STANDING is one of those modest violets who seldom allows a photograph of himself to find its way into our hands. A determined press agent, however, put one over on him and here he is big as life and twice as natural. Stick him in your album quick. You may never get another chance at him!



ALBERTA VAUGHN stars in "The Telephone Girl" series, produced by Film Booking Offices. She will soon be featured by the same company in a new series called "The Go-Getters."



HALF A MILLION FOLKS, ALL IN ONE PLACE—An airplane view of the beach at Coney Island on the Sunday after the Fourth of July, when the attendance set a new high water mark for the season. Police estimated the crowds at 500,000—approximately the population of San Francisco. More than 200,000 were in the surf and on the sands, and some of them were weary delegates from the Democratic convention. Nobody is worrying, apparently, about the popularity of the famous eastern resort being on the wane.

BROTHER AND SISTER, CHAMPIONS BOTH—Miss Joyce Wethered, pictured herewith, recently won the British women's golf championship at Portrush. Roger Wethered, the smiling gentleman in the plaid stockings, has been defending his amateur golf title at St. Andrews. A formidable family team for a mixed foursome, one would think.

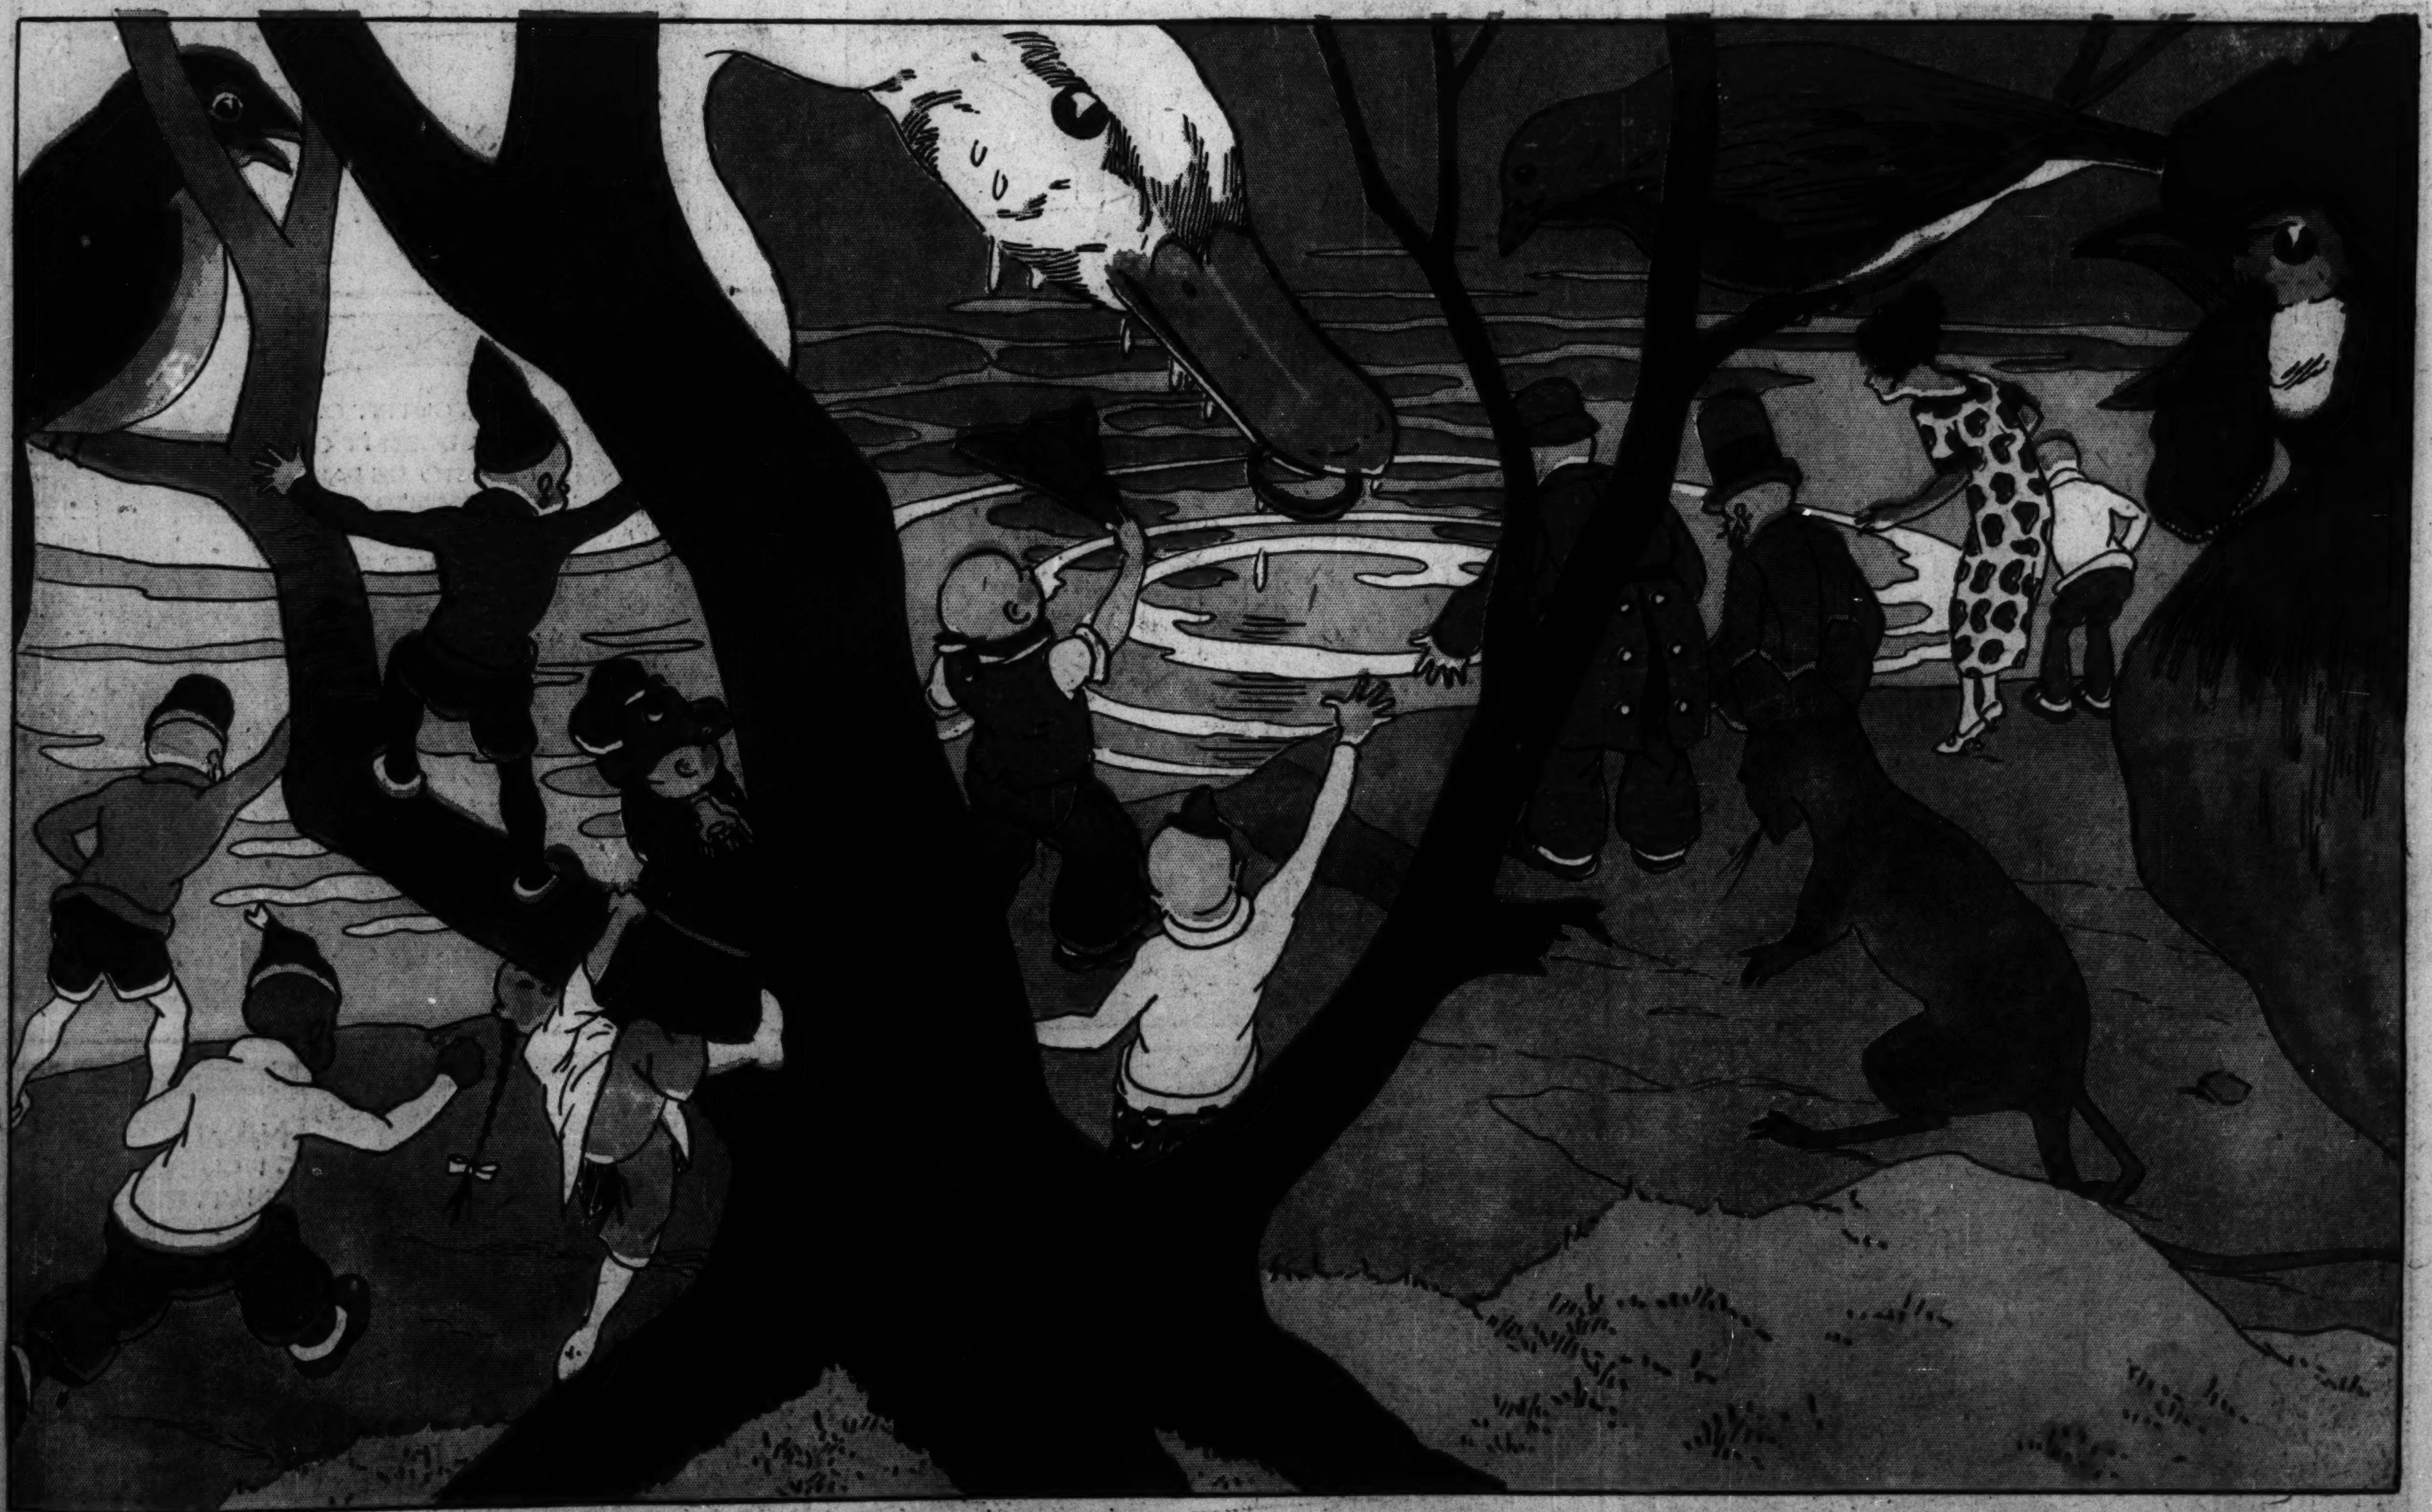
One morning a certain little girl was playing down by the creek when her little gold ring slipped off her finger and sank in the water—the water was quite deep, so the little girl ran home crying. The tears were still wet on her cheeks when the Teenie Weenies heard about it. News travels very quickly to the Teenie Weenies, for the mice, birds and chickens see a great deal of big folks and they always tell the Teenie Weenies what is going on. A mouse brought the news of the lost ring. He had heard it from a Blue Jay, who had got it from a Wren, who was a cousin of a Wren that lived in the little girl's yard.

"Isn't that terrible!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion after the mouse had told the Teenie Weenies. "We ought to try and see if we couldn't recover her ring." "It is probably in pretty deep water," said the General, "but we can try." So they hurried down to the creek and a bird showed them the very spot where the ring had fallen into the water. The little people sounded the water with a bit of thread and an old nail—it was sixteen inches deep, much too deep for a Teenie Weenie possibly to reach bottom, but nevertheless they tried it several times, carrying nails in their arms to help them sink to the bottom—it was of no use, the water was quite too deep.



"Well, if we want to get that ring we'll have to hire a professional diver," said the General, so the little folks went over to a chicken yard nearby and hired a Duck.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said the Duck when he heard what the Teenie Weenies wanted. "I'll take a retaining fee of five grains of corn right now and then I won't charge anything more unless I recover the ring; then I will expect twenty-five grains of corn and eight fishworms."

The Teenie Weenies thought that a pretty high price, but after arguing for some time they finally beat the Duck down to eighteen grains of corn and six and a half fishworms.

The Duck paddled up the creek to the spot where the ring had been lost and set to work at once exploring the bottom of the stream. The Duck worked for a long time before he finally found the ring, and when his head came up out of the water with the lost ring in his bill there was much cheering from the crowd of Teenie Weenies, birds, chickens and mice gathered along the bank. The Teenie Weenies carried the ring to the little girl's house and left it where it could be easily found, and to this day that little girl wonders just how her ring got out of the creek and found its way home.

GOOD MORNING! TIME TO GET UP!
GASOLINE ALLEY
-King-
LOOKS LIKE A GOOD CAMP, AVERY. HIGH AND DRY AND WOODSY.
YES, AND WATER DOWN THE HILL. SUITS ME.
BUY ... TIR
CAN YOU BEAT THAT! THE WAY SOME PEOPLE LEAVE A CAMP GETS ME ALL RILED UP!
YES WALT, I'D LIKE TO TELL 'EM A THING OR TWO! THEY DONT THINK OF ANYBODY ELSE!
LOTTA CANS, UNCA WALT.
SOME FOLKS THINK THAT THERE'S A LOT OF ROOM IN THE WEST AND LEAVE A TRAIL OF TIN CANS AND RUBBISH HALF ACROSS THE CONTINENT.
I'D LIKE TO MAKE 'EM SLEEP ON THIS PILE OF JUNK.
SKEEX PICKEM UP
IF I DON'T DO ANYTHING ELSE I'M GOING TO MAKE A GOOD CAMPER OUT OF YOU. TEACH YOU TO PICK UP YOUR CAMP AND LEAVE IT CLEAN FOR THE NEXT COMER.
SKEEX BE A BOY SCOUT.
I WANT YOU TO LOVE THE GREAT OUTDOORS AND SPEND JUST AS MUCH TIME IN IT AS YOU CAN.
THAT'S IT! YOU'VE GOT THE IDEA. IF EVERYBODY DOES HIS SHARE OF THE WORK, CAMPING IS A SNAP.
SKEEX POUN' NEX' ONE?
MORE WOOD, UNCA WALT!
FINE! I'M GOING TO SEE THAT YOU LEARN TO COOK, TOO.
BUT ABOUT THE MOST IMPORTANT THING IS TO BE CAREFUL OF YOUR CAMP FIRE AND PUT IT OUT WHEN YOU LEAVE. BEING CARELESS ONCE WOULD BURN DOWN THIS WHOLE FOREST!
SURE. SKEEX ALWAYS DO IT.
DANGER FOREST FIRES
GETTING MEALS OUT IN THE OPEN GIVES YOU A GRAND FEELING OF INDEPENDENCE, DOESN'T IT AVERY.
YES AND IT'S A LOT CHEAPER THAN EATING AT LUNCH COUNTERS TOO.
AND THERE'S NO EXCUSE FOR BEING DIRTY JUST BECAUSE YOU'RE OFF ON A CAMPING TRIP.
UNCA WALT FIND NICE BAFF TUBS
SLEEPY? WELL IT'S TIME FOR LITTLE BOYS TO BE IN BED. I'LL TUCK YOU IN.
OO HUM!
THERE! I GUESS I'VE EARNED A NIGHT'S SLEEP MYSELF.
